HONORARY MEMBERS.

Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Wilmington, secretary of committee on the work of the churches.

Rev. J. B. Clark, Boston, secretary of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society.

Rev. Reuben Thomas, D. D., Brookline, preacher of the associational sermon.

Rev. A. H. Plumb, essayist.
 Rev. F. F. Emerson, essayist.
 Rev. G. M. Boynton, essayist.

Rev. Mason Noble, Jr., Rev. Wm. H. Hubbard, and Bro. Edward A. Studley were chosen as the committee on nominations.

Rev. James P. Kimball, registrar of the Association, presented the following letter of resignation : —

TO THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF MASSACHUSETTS :

Since last year my health has failed me so that I can no longer serve you as registrar. Thanking you for your continued courtesy for the past thirteen years, I resign my office.

(Signed) JAS. P. KIMBALL.

SPRINGFIELD, JUNE 21, 1881.

This communication was referred to a committee consisting of Rev. Wm Barrows, Rev. O. S. Dean, and Bro. J. Z. Goodrich.

The committee on nominations reported the following committees, which were confirmed by the Association : —

Committee of arrangements, — Rev. E. P. Terhune, Rev. S. G. Buckingham, and Charles Marsh.

Auditing committee, — Dea. S. M. Bubier, John Z. Goodrich, and R. L. Day.

The committee of arrangements reported an order of exercises for the meeting.

The committee on the resignation of the registrar reported as follows : —

It is with peculiar regrets that the General Association and Conference receive and accept the resignation of the Rev. Jas. P. Kimball as its registrar. His apt, faithful, and genial service in that office for thirteen years has made him a [very serviceable and acceptable officer of this body. The deep sympathy of the Association is extended to the Rev. Mr. Kimball in view of the ill health that withdraws him from us, and its best wishes will follow him with strong desire for his restoration and renewed usefulness.

This report was accepted and adopted. Upon nomination, Rev. A. G. Bale, of Melrose, was elected registrar by a viva voce vote, which vote was afterward made formal by enabling the assistant registrar to cast the ballot of the Association. Prayer was offered by Rev. O. S. Dean, after which the Association adjourned until the evening meeting.

The devotional services of the evening were conducted by the moderator and Rev. Geo. M. Adams. The associational sermon was preached by Rev. Reuben Thomas, of Brookline, from 1 Cor. x. 31.

The administration of the Lord's Supper closed the service, Rev. George H. Gould and Rev. Oliver S. Dean officiating.

SECOND DAY.

The devotional service at 8 30 was conducted by Rev. Alexis W. Ide. The moderator at 9 o'clock ordered the calling of the roll of delegates by the registrar. Prayer was offered by the moderator. The minutes of the first day were read and approved. Upon the recommendation of the committee of arrangements, it was voted that throughout the meeting the time of speakers other than those presenting papers be limited to five minutes.

The committee of arrangements reported the following communications and resolutions : —

TO THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF MASSACHUSETTS, — Greeting :

Dear Brethren, — We, the undersigned, a committee of the Cape Cod Association appointed for the purpose, desire to call the attention of your honorable body to the fact, as it is represented to us, that some of the associations of the State admit to full membership ministers coming from the Presbyterian Church without bringing letters of dismission from that organization. Such persons, while still Presbyterians in full connection, are also Congregationalists in full, and as such may be, and sometimes are chosen as delegates to your body, to the National Council, and to all other places of official or denominational trust to which any minister who is a Congregationalist only is eligible. We respectfully ask you, brethren, in your own way, —

- I. To ascertain the precise facts in the case.
- II. If the above representation is found to be true, to inquire as to whether such condition of double membership is in any way improper or injurious to the interests of Congregationalism, and to the cause of Christ as we maintain it.
- III. If such condition is considered improper or injurious, to devise and recommend some remedy for the evil.

A true copy.

Attest: CHAS. E. HARWOOD,
Secretary Cape Cod Association.

Referred to the following committee: Rev. A. E. P. Perkins, Rev. S. L. Blake, and Rev. A. C. Sewall.

At a regular meeting of the Hampden East and West Associations in Springfield, May 10, 1881, the following was adopted, viz. : —

Resolved, That the Hampden East and West Associations do hereby respectfully request the General Association of Congregational Churches of Massachusetts to appoint a committee to confer with other ecclesiastical bodies in this State for the purpose, if deemed expedient, of presenting a joint petition to the governor and executive council of this Commonwealth, asking that in the appointment of the annual day of fasting and prayer the day known as Good Friday be designated for that observance.

(Signed) E. B. CLARK, registrar.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING THE PROPOSED CREED AND CATECHISM.

Whereas, The Congregational churches of the United States, through their National Council, have constituted a commission “to prepare, in the form of a creed or catechism, or both, a simple, clear, and comprehensive exposition of the truths of the glorious gospel of the blessed God for the instruction and edification of our churches”; and

Whereas, Being the first attempt of any great Christian body to formulate an original evangelical symbol for above two centuries, this is an undertaking of vast importance to the entire Church: therefore,

Resolved, That we express our hearty sympathy with the work, and our desire that the commission prepare both a creed and a catechism.

Resolved, That we recommend that earnest prayer be offered by all our brethren, and that public prayer be offered in our churches, that the Spirit of Truth may so show to the brethren and fathers of this commission the things of God, that they may rightly “define what the Scriptures teach as to what man is to believe concerning God, and what duty God requires of man.”

Resolved, That we bespeak for the commission, while preparing this modern confession of our evangelical faith, the prayers of our brethren in the other communions of our common Lord.

This resolution was accepted and adopted by the Association. At 9 40 the report of the treasurer was made, and was referred to the auditing committee. J. Z. Goodrich, at his own request, was excused from service on the auditing committee, and Dea. Henry D. Noyes was elected to fill the vacancy. By vote of the Association, the treasurer was requested to notify each Conference of the sums due therefrom to the treasury. On motion of the registrar, all ministers of Congregational churches present were invited to sit with the Association as honorary members.

At 10.10 Rev. A. H. Plumb, by appointment, read a paper upon "Our Church Work: Its Deficiencies." After remarks by Bros. Marsh, Robie, Noyes, Cobb, Boynton, and Oviatt, this paper was referred to the following committee: Rev. George A. Oviatt, Rev. B. F. Hamilton, Edwin Palmer.

The committee of arrangements reported the following speakers for the day: Afternoon, on Home Missions, E. S. Atwood and H. M. Stimson; evening, Dr. Barrows, Dr. Gould, and Rev. Mr. Blake.

The following telegraphic message of resignation was received from the secretary of the Association:—

TO THE MODERATOR OF THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION:

Important business keeps me. After twenty-five years' service I respectfully resign the office of secretary from Sept. 1. Statistics are nearly ready, and minutes will be issued promptly. I thank the Association for the honor it has done me.

(Signed) A. H. QUINT.

CONCORD, N. H., June 22, 1881.

This resignation was accepted, and the message was referred to the following committee: Rev. Wm. Barrows, Rev. O. S. Dean and J. Z. Goodrich.

The treasurer of the Association for the past eight years, George E. Clarke, at this point declined to be a candidate for re-election.

At 12 o'clock Rev. Henry A. Shaufler, by appointment, addressed the body upon "Protestant Missionary Work in Austria."

The committee upon the message of Dr. Quint reported as follows:—

In receiving and accepting the resignation of the Rev. A. H. Quint, D. D., as secretary, after twenty-five years' service, the General Association wish to make a most emphatic and grateful record. They are mindful of the long-continued, pains-taking, delicate, and yet eminently successful labor of Dr. Quint in this office. While the Association takes great pleasure in the rank that our statistics have attained among such productions, it returns thanks to the retiring secretary for carrying forward this work to so high a stage of perfection after his extraordinary ability in this line.

Voted, To take a recess until 2.30.

AFTERNOON.

The first business was the report of the State committee on the work of the churches, through the secretary, Rev. D. P. Noyes. Upon the recommendation of the committee, the following resolutions were passed: —

Resolved, That the Association request the provisional committee of next year to set apart the Wednesday morning session to the consideration of the best methods for the communion of the churches in regard to their work, designating early in the year a person who shall present a paper introducing this subject. Furthermore, the State committee is hereby instructed to obtain statements of the methods now in use in the several conferences, collate and condense them in a report to be laid before the Association at the next meeting; which report, or the substance thereof, shall be furnished to the person designated by the provisional committee in season to assist in the preparation of his paper.

Resolved, That the pastors are hereby requested to be particular to give (with as much detail as may seem to them best) an account of all seasons of special religious interest, — their beginning, methods, traits, and apparent results.

The following memorial was presented: —

THE BERKSHIRE NORTH ASSOCIATION TO THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION:

Brethren, — We desire to submit to the General Association the following question, viz.: After a council has installed a man as the pastor of a Congregational church, and he has united with the church, is anything added to his ministerial standing by membership in an association of Congregational ministers?

In behalf of the committee,

C. M. PIERCE, chairman.

Referred to a committee to be named by the nominating committee.

Rev. Samuel J. Spaulding and Rev. John W. Harding were nominated as associational members of the Home Missionary Society.

Adjourned for the meeting of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society.

EVENING.

Convening at 7.30 o'clock, Rev. Frank G. Clark offered prayer. The nominating committee presented the names of the following as a committee to consider the memorial from the Berkshire North Association : Rev. W. E. C. Wright. Rev. D. W. March, Rev. Geo. M. Adams, Rev. Jas. H. Laird, Rev. Chas. M. Pierce.

Addresses were made by Rev. S. L. Blake, Rev. Dr. Gould, and Rev. Dr. Barrows.

Bro. J. Z. Goodrich also spoke a few minutes upon Napoleon's estimate of Christ. After the benediction by Rev. A. G. Bale, the meeting adjourned.

THIRD DAY.

The devotional service was led by Rev. C. M. Pierce. At 9 o'clock, the minutes of the previous day were read and approved. The committee of arrangements reported the work before the morning business session. The roll of delegates was called by the registrar.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Geo. A. Oviatt.

The committee on divorce, appointed in 1879, reported the following resolutions : —

Resolved, That this body observes with hearty sympathy the efforts now making in this commonwealth and throughout New England to lessen the number of matrimonial divorces.

Resolved, That in accordance with the principle laid down by our Lord, in Matt. vi, 31, 32, we deem it the duty of our ministers, when called upon to perform the marriage ceremony, to ascertain the previous relations of the parties and to refrain from marrying a person divorced for any other reason than that which our Lord has named.

Rev. Geo. A. Jackson, at the request of President Seelye, explained that the committee presented these resolutions in lieu of a fuller report, and asked to be discharged. The report was accepted and the committee discharged. The resolutions were adopted.

The following resolution was presented : —

Resolved, That this Association express to the Baldwinsville Church, in Templeton, Mass., their hearty approval of the effort to secure a house of worship which shall be held sacred in its use to the faith and principles of our Congregational churches; and stand, near the place of their birth, as a monument to the cherished memory of Rev. Wm. Goodell, D. D., and Miss Rosa Norcross, who gave their lives for the cause of our divine Lord in our mission fields of Turkey.

Referred to the following committee : Rev. Wm. Barrows, D. D., Rev. Wilbur Johnston, Rev. S. Leroy Blake.

In behalf of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, Dr. Barrows presented the following resolution:—

Resolved, That the General Association is gratified that a national convention of Home Missions has been held recently at Chicago, and it expresses the opinion that an annual convention of this kind is indispensable to the highest success of National Home Missions.

The resolution was accepted and adopted.

The nominating committee presented the following nominations:—

For members of the committee upon church work against intemperance.—Revs. C. D. Barrows, J. W. Dodge, Wilbur Johnston, A. H. Plumb (in place of A. E. Dunning, resigned); Rev. Chas. H. Hamlin (in place of E. G. Cobb).

FOR THE STATE COMMITTEE ON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES.—

Chairmen of committees of local conferences.—Andover, Rev. Joseph B. Seabury; Barnstable, Rev. John W. Dodge; Berkshire North, Rev. Albert C. Sewall; Berkshire South, Rev. Mason Noble; Brookfield, Rev. ———; Essex North, Rev. John D. Kingsbury; Essex South, Rev. James L. Hill; Franklin, Rev. David A. Strong; Hampden, ———; Hampshire, C. B. Johnson; Hampshire East, Rev. Edward C. Ewing; Mendon, Rev. Rufus K. Harlow; Middlesex South, Rev. Josiah H. Temple; Middlesex Union, Rev. Benjamin A. Robie; Norfolk, Rev. Henry W. Eldredge; Old Colony, Rev. Charles C. Watson; Pilgrim, Rev. Ebenezer Alden; Suffolk North, Rev. Charles F. Thwing; Suffolk South, Rev. Charles M. Southgate; Suffolk West, Rev. Jonathan Edwards; Taunton, Rev. William W. Adams; Woburn, Rev. Albert G. Bale; Worcester Central, Rev. Amzi B. Emmons; Worcester North, Rev. Wilbur Johnson; Worcester South, Rev. John R. Thurston.

Members at large.—Rev. F. N. Peloubet, Rev. D. P. Noyes, Rev. S. L. Blake, Rev. J. H. Barrows, Rev. H. E. Barnes, Rev. H. A. Stimson, Rev. J. B. Clark, Rev. J. H. Lockwood, Rev. Geo. R. Leavitt, Rev. O. S. Dean, Rev. Erastus Blakeslee, Rev. W. D. Herrick, Rev. Joshua Coit, Rev. Geo. M. Boynton, Jas. A. Buttrick, James White, John N. Field, Wm. Hyde, H. M. Moore, Obadiah W. Wilcox, Charles Denny, F. E. Fosdick.

Members ex-officio.—Rev. Marshall M. Cutter, Rev. Albert G. Bale.

For treasurer.—Dea. Wm. L. Greene.

The committee nominated were elected, and the chairman of the committee was empowered to cast ballots for the election of the candidates named for secretary and treasurer.

Upon motion of Rev. W. H. Hubbard, the compensation of the secretary was fixed at the same sum that was paid last year.

The committee on the memorial of the Cape Cod Association presented a report, which was laid upon the table.

The committee on the memorial of the Berkshire North Association reported as follows : —

In response to the overture from the Berkshire North Association, we recommend the following minute : —

The General Association cannot take upon itself, nor put upon its secretary, the responsibility of determining what individual names shall appear on its list of ministers, but can only report in its minutes the names furnished by its constituency of local associations and conferences, with such marks appended as will indicate the ecclesiastical relation of each minister, and the source from which his authentication comes.

The report was accepted and adopted.

The committee on the memorial of the Hampden East and West Associations reported the following : —

Your committee, to whom was referred the request of the Hampden East and West Associations for the appointment of a committee to confer with other ecclesiastical bodies in the Commonwealth as to the expediency of petitioning the governor and Council for a change in the time of appointing our annual Fast Day, that such appointment hereafter may coincide with Good Friday, so called, unanimously present the following report : —

We desire, first of all, to express our hearty sympathy with the evident purpose of these honored brethren, to rescue, if possible, our present Fast Day from its wide neglect and secularization. At the same time, your committee do not find themselves prepared to recommend the proposed change nor the appointment of a committee to advocate it. We remember that our Fast Day is of New England origin, a heritage from our Pilgrim Fathers, one of the landmarks of our early Congregationalism, and a special recognition of God's hand in the affairs of our State. We would not, therefore, hastily exchange it for any other day, however sacred to other believers. We also remember that Good Friday is a movable festival, and in the minds of many is identified with ritualistic observances foreign to the spirit of Puritanism.

In place, then, of the special action suggested in the memorial, we recommend that a committee of three be appointed by this body, thoroughly to investigate the facts with regard to the growing neglect of this day, and to suggest any methods by which its observance may be reformed and perpetuated in consistency with the principles and spirit of our fathers.

This report was accepted and adopted, and the committee presenting it was appointed a committee to do the work suggested therein.

The auditing committee reported as follows : —

The committee have examined the report of the treasurer, and find it correct.

They recommend that a contribution of three (3) cents per member be asked from the churches for the ensuing year, and that the treasurer pay over to the National Council the sum of nine hundred and fourteen (914) dollars.

The report was accepted and adopted.

The committee on the address of Mr. Plumb reported the following : —

Resolved, That the thanks of the General Association be given to Rev. A. H. Plumb, for his very able, exhaustive, elevating, and timely paper on "Our Church Work: Its Deficiencies," and that he be requested to furnish a copy of the same for publication.

Resolved, That the Congregational Publishing Society be respectfully requested to publish for general circulation this address of Rev. Mr. Plumb, as soon as a sufficient number of copies shall be subscribed to warrant the same.

The report was accepted and adopted.

At 10.30, by appointment, the paper of Rev. F. F. Emerson on "The Lay Element: How to render it More Efficient," was presented.

By unanimous vote, the essayist, Mr. Emerson, was added to the State committee on the work of the churches.

The nominating committee named the Calvinist church in Fitchburg as the place for holding the meeting of the Association in 1882.

Rev. E. Blakeslee presented the following : —

Resolved, That the committee on publication be instructed, after the papers read before this meeting are in type for publication in the minutes, to issue the same in cheap form, at the cost of paper, printing, and binding, for general distribution, and that this be done as soon as possible.

The resolution was adopted.

Remarks upon the subject of the paper of Mr. Emerson were made by Bros. Ewell, Blakeslee, Mellen, Boynton, Willey, Wright, Lyman, Noyes, Gladden, and Dean.

The provisional committee reported the following : —

On page 13 of the Minutes of 1880, the provisional committee for 1881 is requested to provide for a meeting in behalf of Sunday-school interests. In accordance with this request, the time appointed for this service is the afternoon session to-day (Thursday), at which time a paper upon our Sabbath schools will be presented by Rev. G. M. Boynton, of Jamaica Plain, to be followed by a discussion.

In relation to the request that the provisional committee consider the propriety of providing for an annual meeting of this character, the committee, in view of the frequent general conventions for this purpose, and also the claims of other objects, deem it inexpedient to make such a recommendation.

The report was adopted.

The report of the committee upon church work against intemperance made its report through Rev. Wilbur Johnston. The committee was accorded the privilege of filling vacancies occurring during the year.

Rev. Martin D. Bisbee, chairman of the committee appointed in 1880 to consider the matter of moral instruction in our public schools, made a full report, which was accepted.

Adjourned.

AFTERNOON.

Convening at 2.15. the Association received the nomination, by the nominating committee, of the following provisional committee for 1882 : —

Rev. S. L. Blake, Rev. G. R. W. Scott, Rev. A. G. Bale, Bro. H. M. Francis, Bro. F. S. Fosdick.

The paper of Rev. G. M. Boynton upon "Our Sabbath Schools" was then read.

The chairman having been called away, Rev. Geo. M. Adams was called to the chair.

The committee on the resolution concerning the church of Baldwinville, in Templeton, reported, —

That the Association approves the purpose and commends the enterprise to the churches, with the expressed conviction and wish that one Congregational minister should be sufficient for both the churches in this ancient field of Templeton, so long as this church in it may be warranted in seeking aid for either edifice or ministers.

The report was accepted and adopted.

The following resolution was presented by Rev. Mason Noble, Jr., and was adopted by a unanimous vote : —

Resolved, That the thanks of this Association be presented to the First Church, Springfield, and to members of other churches in this city, for the large and cordial hospitality with which we have been entertained; also to all the committees who have assisted in making provision for the convenience and comfort of the delegates, and in planning for the successful conduct of the meeting; also to the officers of the Connecticut River Railroad, who have kindly furnished tickets to members of this Association at reduced rates.

Rev. E. P. Terhune, D. D., made a fitting response to the above.

The minutes of the day were read and approved. The hymn "Blest be the tie that binds" was sung. Prayer was offered and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. S. G. Buckingham, D. D., after which the Association adjourned without date.

REPORT OF THE STATE COMMITTEE UPON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES.

It has been the aim of this committee, in the reports of late years, to give especial prominence to at least one important matter. Two years ago, they endeavored thus to call attention to out-districts, and asked also the appointment of a Standing Committee on Intemperance. Last year, the subject of Church Services, with particular reference to the best improvement of Sunday afternoon, was laid before the Association in the very able paper of the Rev. Charles M. Lamson, — the facts which in part supplied materials for it having been gathered by this committee. This year a paper upon Sunday Schools, based upon facts furnished by the reports from the churches, is in like manner presented. Such papers, we conceive, are substantially a part of the report on the Work of the Churches; and yet it seems to us a good arrangement that they should be presented by persons designated by the Provisional Committee. This year, the effort to collect information respecting the Sunday schools has had the effect of greatly curtailing the narratives of the churches in regard to other matters. Our general report suffers much from this fact, yet the narratives received from the Conferences are not without interest.

THE GENERAL CONDITION OF THE CHURCHES. — This varies in different parts of the State. From the Pilgrim Conference we hear that “eight churches have lost more than they have gained; three have gained more than they have lost; and four have remained as they were.” In only three have there been infant baptisms, — one of the significant facts which explain the feebleness of the churches, exemplifying as it does a deficiency in the type of piety, and in the quality and influence of revivals. Four of the churches have less than fifty members, only four over sixty, and only one over one hundred resident members. The salaries almost all fall below the average of the State. Both families and congregations are small, as compared with those of a generation ago. The church membership, however, is larger. Fewer attend public worship, but a larger proportion are followers of Christ.

If from the neighborhood of Plymouth we turn to that of Massachusetts Bay, we come into an atmosphere of energy and hope. Running our eye along the reports of the three Suffolk Conferences, we meet with statements like these: “Many things to encourage; quite a number of hopeful conversions.” “The union meetings [of twelve churches] were of much profit.” “The church is alive, earnest, expecting a blessing.” “Large congregations, and more profitable meetings.” “A gain in power over the community.” “A new era in the life of the church.” “An increase of two thirds.” One of the smaller churches reports “a large accession of French Canadians.” Another: “The church has been enlarged by one third; there have been accessions at every communion, and seven een from the Sunday school." Throughout all this region there appears a healthy energy and activity.

From Essex North we hear: "The reports tell of nothing which we commonly call a revival, and yet the spirit of the Lord has truly been with his people during the past year. The churches are not disturbed by discords; the pulpits are occupied by godly men, who preach the truth in its purity; the offices of the various churches are filled by choice men, who seek earnestly for the building of the Kingdom of God. The membership of our churches is composed of God-fearing people. There is not a church within our bounds which is lax in theology or in its piety. This is worthy of note, in these days when men of peculiar views often lead away Christians into strange beliefs." Such is the testimony that comes from these ancient churches. We believe it applies equally well to many other regions of our Commonwealth.

For Berkshire, the past winter proved a season of severe obstructions. A number of the churches report roads blocked with snow, and sickness unusually prevalent. Yet their work has in the main prospered, and in some instances, more than usual. In some of the smaller churches, the services have been better attended than for the preceding year. In Lanesborough. e. g., in Windsor, Peru, Dalton, and Adams, the congregations have been larger, expenses have been more promptly met, and the number of additions has increased. Peru has been especially blessed. Dalton has taken a new start. Adams is more prosperous than for five years, having received forty-three new members.

Upon the whole, we gather the impression that, with the exception of those regions of the State which suffer from a general and chronic depression, its churches are in a condition of cheering health and vigor.

BUILDING — REPAIRS — FINANCES. — From the Norfolk Conference we learn that the one marked feature of the year is the material prosperity of the churches. It shows itself in chapel and parsonage building, the remodelling and improvement of meeting-houses, and the payment of debts. Something similar appears to have been true of other regions.

The following facts come to view in the returns (they must be but a very small part of those which might have been reported): The Phillips Church, South Boston, reports the payment of nearly the cost of the rebuilding of their house of worship, $25,000; the Eliot Church, Roxbury, the removal of an old debt of $12,000; the Walnut Avenue, $12,393; Hyde Park, $9,000; and the new church at Clarendon, $300. From Worcester County we hear of a country church that has been in debt all the time since its organization. Several times nearly the amount has been subscribed, but before the pledges were collected, it has fallen in debt again. It has now come to the conclusion that this is a bad way, and has "resolved" to end it. We shall be glad to hear from this church next year. The Plymouth and Piedmont churches, in Worcester, with "most commendable and self-sacrificing efforts," have provided for their whole indebtedness. The Whitefield Church, Newburyport, has paid a debt of $3,000; Rockport, $10,000, a floating debt of $250, and $400 for repairs; South Braintree, $600, with several hundred for repairs, also a new chapel; Pittsfield First has reduced its debt by $17,000; the South Church, Pea- body, has enlarged and beautified its house at a cost of $4,000; Swampscott has made very extensive improvements, adding rooms for the Bible class and the primary classes; Windsor, in Berkshire County, has repaired its house; and Williamstown rejoices in having cleared off its debt. Dana has greatly improved its house. Ware (First) has also made improvements in its audience-room. The East Church in Ware has been prospered spiritually, and is about building a chapel. West Warren has paid a heavy debt. West Brookfield has secured the money to replace the house which was burnt.

We take these facts, not as covering the whole ground, but merely as illustrative of one trait of the year, — that it has been a season of financial improvement.

METHODS. — The printing-press is coming more into use as a means of intercourse between pastor and people, and of spreading information respecting the work of the local church. Three forms have fallen under our eye, — the Pastoral Letter, the Annual Record, and the Monthly, Bimonthly, or Quarterly Church Paper. Lists of Prayer-Meeting Topics are also quite common. A pastoral letter in our hands gives first a “Personal Retrospect,” then a “Church Retrospect,” and Points for Reflection and Action. Then follow the Statistics of the year, giving the names of new members, and of all who have died or been dismissed, and of persons baptized; also the monthly Attendance Averages at public worship and in the Sunday school; and, finally, all the Expenses and Charities of the Church in detail.

This is a very interesting and valuable document. Its facts are those which all the members of a Christian congregation should wish to know. Its suggestions, which relate to Charities, Public Worship, Church Attendance, the Prayer Meeting, the Neglecting Classes, the Lack of Men in our Churches, are most timely and forcible.

Another document, of like nature, adds a Superintendent's Report of the Sunday school, and a third, a List of Prayer-Meeting Topics for the year. From one of the Middle States there comes to us a bimonthly paper, issued by a pastor who was formerly settled in our own State. It is a quarto of eight pages (13 x 10½ inches), and contains a sermon, numerous items and church notices, poetry, and a considerable amount of miscellaneous matter, with some advertisements. The price is twenty-five cents for the six numbers, or six cents for a single number. A church that is able to circulate a paper like this must find it convenient for communicating information to its own members, and also for commending itself to households that neglect the sanctuary. In some respects, it must be better than tracts or than any less local newspaper.

The Associate Pastors of Amesbury (Baptist, Methodist, and Congregational) issued a New-Year's Greeting to those having no church-home, inviting them to choose a home at one of the churches.

Twelve Boston churches joined in Union Meetings, illustrating the good results of an active fellowship.

The Second Church, Dorchester, keeps an Annual Fast on the Friday preceding the November communion. Unusual solemnity and tenderness marked its observance last year; and for several months after, the people, led by the pastor, kept their hearts upon the need of the Holy Spirit's presence. The church, at least, was blessed.

Another church, in the eastern part of the State, reports a Normal Class of fifty, and Saturday-evening gatherings at the pastor's house, from which a good impulse seems to have proceeded. A Woman's Home Missionary Society has been added to the five societies already existing among the women. The church distributes two kinds of cards: one giving merely the services and the names of the officers; the other invites attendance, has a space for a name, and when sent to the pastor is answered by a call. The Deaconesses object to their title, but do their work well. There is a Young Peoples' Association, with which the pastor co-operates, giving, e. g., on alternate weeks, a lecture on the structure of the Bible, using the blackboard, and inviting questions. The following subjects are among those thus treated: "The several books of the Pentateuch"; the "Life of Joshua"; the "Times of the Judges"; the "First King." This effort has been made in hope of guarding the young people against the destructive criticism afloat in the community, and seems to have been a success, at least in engaging their attention and interest and strengthening their confidence. The young people have established a Sunday-school prayer meeting, held on Tuesday evening, which is interesting and helpful.

A class of forty children meets the pastor for three quarters of an hour on Friday afternoons to consider such themes as the following: "How to become a Christian," and "How to be a Christian"; the "Pilgrim's Progress" forming the basis of the talk.

A Church Temperance Society has just been organized, with a "Family Pledge," worded with an aim to control without irritating.

"A distinctive feature of the year has been a growing up of the children of Christian families into the church."

Other churches make mention of a Children's Sermon as a regular and successful part of every service; a Bible Club, for the careful and critical study of the Scriptures, socially; Continuous Bible Study, sustained by ladies.

From a western county we hear of another plan to interest the children. Cards are given out, having a space for the text and for some leading thought which the pastor promises to put into his sermon for the children. The children write the text, keep watch for that which is meant especially for them, put it upon the card, which is then returned to the pastor. For the present, the plan "works well."

A church which provides a special Class of Candidates for admission to the church, for the purpose of special instruction, has been "surprised at the number who responded."

Two churches are trying a New Style of Teachers' Meetings. In the one the pastor, in the other the superintendent, makes out a List of Topics covering the main points of the lesson. One of these is handed, a week before the meeting, to each teacher, who is expected to come prepared upon it. Thus far, the plan has had the effect of calling out a better attendance and an increased interest.

Several churches in the eastern part of the State report a marked increase of interest and attendance at the Monthly Concert, obtained by affording to the children and young people an opportunity of taking part in it. In one case, where the attendance has been doubled, "young girls and boys commit to memory certain portions of the recent intelligence," and adults bring forward other portions. In another case, where "crowded audiences" are secured, "one half of the time is given to devotional exercises, with short prayers, short hymns, and reports limited to five minutes. Then the latter half of the time is devoted to making acquaintance with some single country by means of addresses on its geography (illustrated on the blackboard), on its history, religion, the missionary work among its people, and other matters. One or two such addresses are given at each meeting."

OTHER SYSTEMATIC WORK.—From Plymouth County comes the same account of successful organization that we have heard now for several years. The church is divided into five departments, or committees, on Visitation, Relief (care of poor), Sick and Aged, Sabbath School, Temperance.

Another church, also in the southeastern part of the State, reports "more thorough organization than ever before." It has a Committee to visit the Sick and the Poor, a Prayer-Meeting Committee, for promoting an increased attendance and participation, a Missionary Concert Committee, a Factory Committee, and a Neighborhood Prayer-Meeting Committee.

From the same region comes an account of a young people's Society for Good Works, which has fed the hungry, clothed the destitute, helped equip a missionary school in New Mexico, and sent eight barrels of clothing to Kansas refugees. Enlistment and Prayer-Meeting Circulars are also distributed. The latter is the excellent little tract by the Rev. A. C. Thompson, D. D., entitled "Our Prayer Meeting." The former is as follows:—

"To the Members of the First Congregational Church and Congregation, Fall River: Genuine character expresses itself in habits. Life proves itself to be worthy by its habitual works of worthiness. The work that tells is systematic work. It is well known that we have in the city a considerable population not connected with any religious society, not in the habit of regularly attending any religious services, not directly reached by Christian influences. Christ's command to evangelize the world had in it the specification, 'beginning at Jerusalem.' The churches that neglect to Christianize the communities in which they exist neglect the nearest duty and the greatest privilege. The so-called culture that leaves the lanes, corners, and all adjoining unoccupied land to grow up to thistles is not Christian culture. In certain very important respects the churches of Fall River have neglected systematic evangelization of the city. After repeated consideration in church meetings, this church has voted to undertake the systematic visitation of a portion of the city, to make the acquaintance of those residents in it who are not connected with any religious society; to induce them, if possible, regularly to attend the services of some church; to promote the circulation of Christian literature among them; to maintain neighborhood prayer meetings so far as may seem desirable; and in all other available ways to promote the elevation, the moral and religious welfare of the community.

"You, and each of you, are requested to take some active part in systematic Christian service.

“Below will be found a statement of some of the services which may be rendered. You are requested to place the mark X opposite the specifications of service you are willing to render, signing your name at the bottom of the paper, which you will then please hand or send to your pastor; or if preferred, the paper thus filled out may be left in the pew.

“SABBATH-EVENING SERVICE.

From the northeastern part of the State comes an account of a similar system, comprising committees to Welcome Strangers, to Enlarge the Sunday School, to Promote more efficient Work in the Sunday School, on the Missionary Concert, and for Visiting the Sick, Aged, and Afflicted. These committees have succeeded in enlisting a large number of willing and efficient workers. A number of churches, for the first time, report organizations of this kind. In one, they consist of men only; in others, of both men and women. The practice seems to be growing in a natural and healthy way.

OUT-DISTRICTS AND OUT-CLASSES. — To the question, How can neglecters be reached? One church sends the following answer: “By prayer, faith, and the Bible of Christian living, rather than by ministrations of the pulpit.” A pastor was surprised to find that out of thirty-five young men, mostly married, now employed in the manufacture of shoes in his town, only three or four were church-goers. A study of the problem thus presented brought before him the following as the reasons of this neglect: (1) The failure of parents, by precept and example, to train their sons, in childhood. (2) The fascinations of the village dance hall, creating a distaste for serious duties. (3) The growth of a habit of reading secular books and papers, and especially novels, on the Sabbath, and of giving over the day to idleness and sleep. (4) Sunday driving. (5) The influence of Second Adventism, and especially its doctrine of the annihilation of the wicked, — the practical outcome of which is, "Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die."

From Berkshire County, Franklin, Worcester, Essex, Norfolk, Suffolk, and Plymouth, come accounts of labors in out-districts, by means of Branch Sunday schools, weekly prayer meetings, and often by preaching in school-houses, and sometimes in chapels, built expressly for the purpose. It is safe to say that this work goes on in the other counties whence none is this year reported. But whether it has been gaining or losing, the returns fail to give any indication, except as the very fact of the omission even to mention the subject shows an absence of any unusual interest.

RELIGIOUS INTEREST. — The infrequency of revivals, and the prevalence of spiritual blessing in other forms, are both emphasized, and perhaps equally, in reports from almost all quarters. Revivals have certainly not been numerous, but as certainly the year has been a prosperous year with the Congregational churches of this State. Very frequent mention is made of a gratifying and encouraging religious interest; and the question is forced upon us, whether we may not be entering upon a new period of spiritual prosperity, characterized by greater evenness and a more steadfast vigor, a more sustained and a better organized church industry, than the past has known. There are facts which seem to encourage such a hope.

One of the most gratifying instances of blessing is that which has fallen upon the little church in Heath. Fifty years ago, this was one of the strongest churches in the State, and had, as was then supposed, the largest Sunday school. Since then, the population has flowed away from the hills, and numbers only one half what it did. In addition to the evils from which the entire hill country suffers, this church has been compelled, for a generation, to endure a persistent sectarian attack, which avowedly threatened and almost accomplished its destruction. Within the past year, the Home Missionary Society has received from one of the members of this church a legacy of $700; and now the Lord has granted a season of revival which has added ten to its communion, — in effect the largest addition, we suppose, that any church has received this year. Dedham reports a deep and quiet work early in the year, bringing in many young people. It came in answer to prayer. There was almost no outside aid. The Young Men's and the Young Women's meetings were of great value, particularly in bringing out young boys and girls. The pastor's weekly class for instructing beginners in Christian truth is well attended.

Boylston has enjoyed a glorious revival. This also, the report affirms, began in prayer: "Lord, save my children. The prayer was two years long, and was supplemented by consecration. The time-honored Biblical agencies were employed, — the plain preaching of the old orthodox doctrines in their purity, social meetings, and personal work. The special revival services were ‘gospel meetings,’ — no sermons for nine weeks. We found the ‘seekers’ meetings’ of great value. Two laymen from Plymouth Church, Worcester, rendered great assistance in the work. No one denies the great and permanent benefits of this revival. Children behave better in their schools, the standard of morality in the community is higher, and there is a radical change in the lives of the fifty persons who have owned a hope in Christ.”

The church in the neighboring town of Clinton has experienced a similar blessing. “It began in the Week of Prayer; grew up naturally through six weeks of union effort, the work being done by the pastors. There was perfect harmony, and no attempt to proselyte. Spencer has admitted nineteen, on confession.

The Centre Church, Haverhill, reports that the Week of Prayer was followed by especial interest, which continued, to some extent, through the year. The methods were simple. The most efficient work was accomplished by individual devotion. The additions were largely from the Sunday school. A desire for more thorough consecration prevails, and the condition is still hopeful and expectant.

“In the Union Evangelical Church, South Weymouth, signs of revival showed themselves towards the close of the year, among the members of a Mission Circle of young girls. No extra meetings have been held, but invitations to meet the pastor at his study have been given. In November, one Sabbath evening, two young ladies arose in the meeting, of their own accord, and expressed a purpose to serve the Lord. Others have since come to the same blessed decision, greatly to the joy and encouragement of the church. One of our faithful Sunday-school teachers has the happiness of believing that six members of her class have found Christ; and another faithful one, that one half her class have begun the new life. The pastor regards those fruits as the result of faithful Sunday-school and Mission Circle work.”

North Abington, also, rejoices over “a precious work of grace, quiet and deep, resulting, thus far, in eight hopeful conversions, a great work for this place.” (This church reported last year only sixty-eight resident members.) “The interest began in the prayers of a few faithful ones, and at last accounts still continued.”

In the Second Church, Greenfield, a great revival began in February, of which no details are given. In the Phillips Church, South Boston, a quiet and widespread interest grew out of the Week of Prayer, resulting in twenty or thirty conversions. Attleborough, First, reports more activity than for years, an unusual number of conversions, and fresher life. In Bradford there has been a spirit of inquiry, leading to the conversion of many, and their public confession of faith. The report from the Essex South Conference, while acknowledging that there has not been what could be termed a revival, nevertheless declares that “the Spirit of the Lord has been with his people.” The Second Church in Braintree mentions a quiet work of grace, and half a dozen conversions. Scattered through the reports, we come upon phrases like these: “a very pleasant and hopeful interest among young people," — "the general religious interest has steadily deepened through the year," — "pleasing and promising indications," — "deep seriousness and earnest attention have pervaded all the meetings, some conversions," — "near the close of the year, hopeful indications; since, more than realized," — "quite a number of conversions," — "more than usual interest; conversions," — "a quiet work among the young, largely attributable to a growing interest in the study of the Bible."

Nine years ago, the General Association saw "increased reasons for urging upon the churches the more exact and thorough" development of all their forces for Christian work. We are not sure that such better development has taken place. The indications furnished by the reports of the conferences are somewhat contradictory. Nor are we sure whether the conferences have made a decided advance, of late years, in thoroughness and effectiveness. If there had been such an advance, it seems to us that a greater interest would have been manifested in the "Reports of the Work of the Churches" than appears in some of them. It seems to us time that this whole matter came up again for earnest discussion. We want to do the best thing. In this wish we all are one, — there is no difference within any conference, and none between different conferences. But usages differ widely. Some conferences certainly appear to excel. Probably all can learn something from others.

The principle of the "Communion of the Churches" is as vital to the Apostolical Church order as the principle of the "Freedom of the Churches." And the communion of the churches respecting their work is not the least important department of this general communion. Here in Massachusetts it largely takes place in the conferences and General Association. We can think of no more timely or important subject of consideration than the best methods for making this part of the communion of the churches sure, effective, and helpful. We therefore respectfully suggest the adoption of a resolution equivalent to the following: —

"Resolved, That the Association request the Provisional Committee of next year to set apart the Wednesday-morning session to the consideration of the best methods for the communion of the churches in regard to their work; designating, early in the year, a person who shall present a paper introducing this subject. Furthermore, the State Committee is hereby instructed to obtain statements of the methods now in use in the several conferences, collate and condense them in a report to be laid before the Association at its next meeting; which report, or the substance thereof, shall be furnished to the person designated by the Provisional Committee in season to assist in the preparation of his paper."

We further ask the Association to request the pastors to be particular to give (with as much detail as may seem to them best) an account of all seasons of special religious interest, — their beginning, methods, traits, and apparent results.

By vote of the State Committee.

DANIEL P. NOYES, Secretary.

THE DEFICIENCY OF OUR CHURCH WORK IN ITS PRACTICAL RESULTS ON OUR COMMUNITIES.

BY REV. A. H. PLUMB.

IN considering the "Deficiency of our Church Work in its Practical Results on our Communities," it seems proper to inquire, —

First. What is the extent of the deficiency?

Secondly. How far it is a deficiency in the methods of church work.

Thirdly. How far it is a deficiency in underlying thought and life, principle and character, in the church.

First. What is the extent of the deficiency?

I. The deficiency we deplore in the practical results of our church work is not so great as to prove Christianity a failure. It is the frequent boast of the enemies of evangelical religion that its mission is past. The heralds of new philosophies proclaim the need of something to take the place of a worn-out and discarded faith. Among ourselves, a ritualist here and a pessimist there, publish their conclusions that Protestantism has failed; its morality has fatally broken down. Millenarians affirm that the present dispensation was never intended to accomplish much, and regard its small result as a token that the end of the world is nigh.

The signs of the times, however, are not justly interpreted thus. There is no indication that Christianity, under the dispensation of the Spirit, has spent its force, and is to be superseded by a new era under the personal reign of Christ. Nor, were the results of Christian effort a thousand-fold less than they are, would there be any reason for superseding Christianity by any newly contrived "Data of Ethics" or "Gospel of Dirt" yet brought to light. John Stuart Mill indeed declared that finer character is produced outside of the Christian church than within it; but, with all his exalted talent, he cannot be said to show it. Nor did the gifted and philanthropic Harriet Martineau, proud and full of scorn for her truest Christian friends; nor Prof. Lewes, holding mistress after mistress, and a living wife; nor even "Marian Evans, spinster," with her wealth of nature both in mind and heart. And if not they, with all their advantages of intellect and culture, who does or can?

No: the Christian church, poor as it is, is the best thing there is in the world. Its fruit is the right kind of fruit. The only trouble is, we do not often have it yet in its full perfection, nor enough of it such as it is; but there is and there can be no better kind. And to produce any such fruit gives Christianity a sufficient reason to be.

II. Nor is the deficiency in the results of Christian work so great as to prove that, on the whole and in the long run, Christianity is not making substantial and cheering gains. The church of Christ has come under great obligation to an eminent Methodist clergyman for a more careful and thorough estimate of religious progress, especially in this country, than has ever before been made. Rev. Daniel Dorchester, D. D., has shown* that many statements made with great confidence of late in papers and magazines, and by some eminent men, affirming the decline of religion and the decay of faith, are utterly at war with the facts.

In view of the results his investigations have reached, it may be emphatically said here, that the failure we deplore in the work of the church is not a failure to hold its own against an enormous importation of scepticism and superstition from abroad, is not a failure to maintain a large positive and relative increase, but is simply a failure to attain as large an increase as it ought to have attained. The work of the church has been a success, but not so large a success as, with greater fidelity, it might have been.

By Dr. Dorchester's figures and charts it appears that, while the population of the country since the century began has increased nine and one third fold, the communicants in Evangelical churches have increased twenty-seven fold, or nearly three times as fast. Eighty years ago there was one Evangelical church member for every fourteen and one half of the population; now there is one for every five.

Multiplying the communicants by three and one half to find the population connected with them,—a very moderate calculation,—it appears that in 1800 the Roman Catholic population was two per cent of the whole, the Evangelical population twenty-four per cent, and the unclassified population, including Universalists and Unitarians, and all others not enumerated, constituted seventy four per cent.

A few of Dr. Dorchester's tables are subjoined, though for the full statement of the facts, and for replies to objections to his conclusions, reference must be had to his valuable book.

The unclassified (which includes many who are substantially with the Evangelical) have not only diminished in eighty years from seventy-four per cent to eighteen per cent of the entire population, — a very large relative decrease, — but also have sustained, notwithstanding the growth of population meanwhile, over two millions of absolute loss during the last ten years. While these latest enumerations of communicants may include many who have not the highest title to be enrolled in the church, the same was true of the earlier numbers with which the comparisons are made; indeed, statistics have grown far more reliable in excluding the unworthy in these later years.

In the Minutes of this Association for 1877, is an elaborate report by Rev. I. N. Tarbox, D. D., on the Congregational churches one hundred years ago, in which he gives undeniable proof that there has been a very marked improvement in the standard of piety in the churches, as well as of the morality in the towns, since the earlier date. It were ingratitude to God not to acknowledge the deliverances he has wrought. It is giving encouragement to the enemy, not to confute their unwarranted boasts, by publishing the actual facts, in a spirit of humble thanksgiving to God. It is demonstrated that, in spite of all deficiencies now and then, and notwithstanding various eddies and counter-currents here and there, the stream of Evangelical progress has been pouring onward with a broadening and deepening flow.

III. And yet among us, at the present time, the deficiency in the practical results of our church work is enough to awaken serious anxiety, and to compel inquiry concerning its cause and its cure.

The statistics of our Congregational churches show that, for the last year or two, the gain in membership by conversion has been lamentably small. In 1880, with ninety-one thousand four hundred and thirty-nine church members, there have been added, on profession, one thousand seven hundred and sixty-one, while one thousand six hundred and five have been removed by death or discipline, leaving a net gain of only one hundred and fifty-six. Over two hundred churches, with twenty-two thousand members, have added none on profession of faith during the past year.

The small attendance on public worship on the Lord's Day, — very small in comparison with what it should be, though in many places relatively larger than it has ever been before, — and also, especially, the absence of children from church; the late rapid increase of Sunday newspapers, and of Sunday excursions for pleasure, both usurping the time which should be given to religious uses; the alarming continuance of the sale and use of intoxicating drinks, — are very serious facts and betoken a deplorable lack of spiritual power in the churches of our Lord generally throughout the State. They demand from us solemn searchings of heart, a careful review of our methods of labor, and earnest prayer to God for the enlightening and quickening power of the Holy Ghost.

Secondly. Concerning the deficiency in the results of Christian work, we are to ask, How far is it a deficiency in the methods of work? The different lines of endeavor which absorb the activities of our churches may be conveniently, and perhaps with sufficient accuracy, grouped under six descriptive terms. These are, Preaching, Worship, Instruction of the Young, Social Culture, Missions, Revivals.

I. Preaching the Gospel is a leading method of Christian work.

It has been said that the divine origin of Christianity is attested by the wisdom, which, against all precedent, appointed preaching as its chief agency in extending its sway. Above the discussions of academies, the conversations of philosophers, the study of writings, in profound philosophical adaptation to the constitution of man as a means of influence, ranks that public oral proclamation of religious truth to the masses which is called preaching.

In the New Testament the preacher is a herald, commissioned of God to proclaim the terms of salvation to men who are lost in sin. He is an ambassador, charged to bring to a successful issue, if he can, his message of reconciliation and peace. "It hath pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Grant that we read with the new version, "by the foolishness of the preaching," or as in the margin, "by the foolishness of the thing preached," it is still the gospel as preached, which is here declared of God to be the leading agency in securing the salvation of men.

The history of the church shows that God has given this method of Christian labor peculiar honor. Looking down through the ages on every hard-pressed field of critical conflict, we see foremost among all, and towering above all others, the preacher of the word. In the great triumphs of truth, in the great revivals which have blessed the church, the preacher of the gospel has been conspicuous, commonly, as the agency chiefly honored of God. But for the past score of years it has seemed as if many of our preachers were eager to lay down their peculiar function, and abdicate their position of privilege and power. Only one brief chance to preach the gospel they want on the Sabbath, and no chance at all at funerals, as if they were eager to bring in a day when men shall get along without them altogether. Over four hundred of the five hundred and twenty-six Congregational churches in Massachusetts have but one stated preaching service a week, with another only now and then. The increased attention to the study of the Bible of late years is a matter for congratulation, and a ground of hope; but wherever a so-called Bible service is made to take the place of a regular preaching service, there should invariably be retained, as by many of our best churches has been done, a brief expository sermon by the pastor at the close.

It is a characteristic function of the preacher, in distinction from the teacher of the class, that his address is a public and authoritative one. The pulpit is not a free platform for the discussion of questions on which good and honest men may properly take opposite sides. It is not the desk of a student in speculative philosophy, from which he may read to the people all the fine-spun theories of advanced thought, report his latest supposed discoveries, and all his foolish doubts as well. The preacher is an expounder of truth, not an explorer for truth. A man is no preacher unless he has some positive beliefs. First of all, he must have his ποῦ στῶ, his place where to stand. If he is standing on the yielding crust of a bog, shifting his attitude and picking his footing all the time to keep out of the mire, he is in no position to do any real work for mankind. He cannot strike a single earnest blow; he cannot lift up or push forward any good work; he can do nothing but sink into the mud and draw others down with him. Preachers are to say with their Lord, "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen." The holy Apostle, greatest of all preachers, said, "We believe, and therefore speak." The spectacle of a believing man, instinct with holy passion, proclaiming aloud the truth his life attests, is one of the mightiest possible forces, not only to show men what faith is, but to do the still more difficult thing, — impel them to believe.

The high relative power of our denomination in the past has been largely due to the value it has set upon a learned and able ministry, a ministry that exercised its gifts. "Neglect not the gifts that is in thee," was the solemn admonition of Paul to a young preacher in his day, and would to God it might be re-echoed in the ears of every young preacher now.

It is the opinion of many of our wisest men, — such men as Prof. Park and Dr. Richard S. Storrs, — that this foremost and divinely appointed agency for Christian endeavor is now being greatly dishonored by disuse among our churches, and that a great lack of power and of fruit inevitably results.

II. The second method of church work is the Maintenance of Public Worship.

The just prominence with which our denomination has heretofore invested the function of preaching has quite unnecessarily and inexcusably led many among us to undervalue the duty and privilege of the public worship of God. Attendance upon our religious services has depended too much on the attractive powers of the preacher. It is, indeed, a necessity for all to go to church for what there and not elsewhere they can get, but still more for what there and not elsewhere they can give. "Let my prayer be set forth before thee as incense, and the lifting up of my hands as the evening sacrifice."

The relation of preaching to worship is that of means to an end. The true end of preaching is to bring all hearers to God in real worship, with vows of service and acts of love. As the preacher holds up God in his truth, we see God in clear and vivid light, and, by all the compelling power of the sight, — the transcendent power of the highest truth embodied in the best life, even the life of the Supreme and Perfect One, — we are impelled towards God in heartfelt expressions declarative of his worth, his worth-ship, his supreme right to universal homage and adoring love. This act is pleasing to God. It is useful to all beholders on earth and in heaven, and it is vital to all right character in us.

Any moral being anywhere who fails to render constant and regular worship to God is false to its primal instincts and fundamental obligations. In the sight of all exalted intelligences in the angelic orders, it must appear a hideous monstrosity in the realm of being, with no title to guide other beings, and no reason to respect itself. So must all celestial minds look down from heaven on our cultivated and reputable neighbors, our intelligent and interesting children, who fail to fulfil this first of all duties, — regularly and habitually to worship God. No deference to the second table of the law can excuse the trampling under foot of the first table. Nay, as long as obedience of the first table is withheld, no right obedience of the second table can be paid. If a man is utterly out of relation to God, the centre of the universe, in whom all things consist, he is necessarily out of relation thereby to everything else; and in nothing can he do his full duty aright till he puts himself right with God.

By the merely external habit of worship, right traits of character of course are not assured; but if one has not even that, it seems clear he can have little character entitled to respect.

A service so important as the public worship of God should receive great care that it may be ordered with propriety, so as most readily to engage the largest number of worshippers for their greatest enjoyment and highest good.

To this end, in the judgment of many, we need to change our order of public service so as to secure more participation in audible acts of worship by the congregation at large.

Not, indeed, by the extensive introduction of written forms of prayer to be read by our congregations aloud. These are foreign to the free spirit of our intelligent and thoughtful worship, which would pour out its ardent emotion when enkindled by the truth. One can worship with more directness and intensity under the impulse and guidance of some particular truth which, through the preaching of the word, has taken hold of the conscience and the will, and is holding them in its powerful grasp.

Nor should the larger participation of our congregations in acts of audible worship be sought by introducing the responsive reading of the Scriptures. This usage may possibly be tolerated in Sabbath schools, where much may be sacrificed in order to keep alive the attention of children who are very young, but it is a practice which is assuredly unfit to produce the best effects in the worship of the sanctuary. It violates the canons of rhetorical law; it renders utterly impracticable the due expression of the consecutive thought of many portions of the sacred word. Place the two best elocutionists in the land at opposite ends of a hall, and let them read responsively the soliloquy of Hamlet's Uncle, the prayer of Hezekiah, or that of Habakkuk, sharply and incessantly interrupting the flow of thought, and breaking into fragments those sublime utterances which in the furnace of emotion have each been moulded into a harmonious whole, and it would be found impossible to give the sentiment a just expression. It does violence to nature, it is not true to life, thus to take the impassioned prayers and devout soliloquies of the Psalmist and parcel them out in broken bits to the minister and the people. No: God made the laws of thought. The instincts of the mind are his ideas, and we shall not always disregard them in the forms of worship we use. The lyrical portions of the Bible, many of them, are made to be sung, not to be read responsively; and the larger participation of the people in public worship is to come by teaching them to chant these exalted strains of holy thought from the inspired word. By training our children in the Sabbath school, and by earnest effort in congregational rehearsals, any congregation can at length come to join, with deep pleasure and with fine effect, in chanting in the very words of inspiration the praises of the Lord. In this endeavor many Congregational churches of England, both in city and country, have of late attained most gratifying results. If they have done it, we can, and there is every reason why we should. The new Sunday School Hymnal, recently published by the Congregational House, is specially fitted to promote the general practice of chanting the Psalms, besides furnishing for Sabbath schools a superior style of sacred music generally, and a higher class of juvenile hymns than we have had before.

With this improvement in the musical services of the sanctuary should come also a more general use of congregational singing. It is, indeed, arrogant in the extreme to assert, as is frequently done, that a congregation cannot worship through a choir or a quartet. There is a kind of music too difficult for any congregation to render, and when this is given by trained singers, to whose voices God has given special sweetness and power, it aids, as nothing else can, the devotions of that class of worshippers who are endowed with special sensitiveness to the power of song. Only, as persons of such special sensibility are in the minority, congregational singing is better adapted for the needs of the people as a whole; and every choir should be engaged with the distinct understanding that they are first to make congregational singing a success, and then, after they have done that, they are to give a due portion of music of a higher class; and that, no matter what their success in the second object may be, if they fail in the first they will be discharged. The repetition in concert of the Apostles' Creed and the Lord's Prayer, it will be an advantage also to introduce as soon as it is possible to secure for the practice a general and hearty assent. If the services of public worship in our prayer meetings and on the Sabbath should be exalted as a personal service to be rendered to God, with stated regularity, with all seriousness and propriety, and as constituting our highest privilege and our earliest duty, this method of Christian endeavor would be attended with far more spiritual comfort and power for good.

III. A third method of Christian work is the Instruction of the Young in the Oracles of God.

This is committed by divine command especially to parents, and they cannot delegate it to other hands. Every child is to be taught from infancy the fundamental doctrines of our faith. They who say childhood cannot comprehend such instruction should recall that impressive scene in the ancient Jewish home, where the father stands amid his children with a basin of blood and a branch of hyssop, and in their wondering sight sprinkles the posts of his door, while, by the express command of God, he declares to his little ones the mystery of the atoning blood, and tells them of that fearful night of death on which God said to their fathers, "When I see the blood, I will pass over you." At the family altar, parents and children are daily to offer the sacrifices of prayer and praise. To the worship of God in His house, children are to be brought at a tender age, and their regular attendance there is to be required by the Christian parent, so long as they remain inmates of his home. Even if that service as a whole is beyond their comprehension, it is always useful as an object-lesson of the most powerful kind on the obligation of rendering to God the worship which is his due. Children at church, however, should receive instruction from the minister, commonly by adapting passages in the sermon to their needs; sometimes by a brief preliminary sermon to them, if the pastor have a gift in that way. They are early to be taught of the untold wealth of covenant mercies belonging to those who are given in baptism to God. To them often is to be spoken the gracious word, "If ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." It is most useful to present them with some memento of their baptism, as a Bible, on their attaining a certain age, reminding them that the church regards them as its children and expects them to grow up in the love of Christ. Pastors' classes, for special instruction in doctrine and life, are an invaluable aid.

But the church, furthermore, has a duty of organized effort for instructing all the young in the Sabbath school, and in it the best talent and piety of the church should be heartily engaged. Other denominations are in advance of us in their zeal and intelligence in this work, in the circulation they give to their Sabbath-school publications, and in the ready support their secretaries receive. The pastor and the adult members of the church should all be in the Sabbath school, as far as possible. No chance for pastoral effort is better than this, especially if the pastor is not limited to a single class, but serves as a substitute in the absence of teachers, and thus and in other ways keeps acquainted with the members, and knows the character of the teaching in the school. These means of grace are to be used in the confident expectation of gathering a harvest of youthful souls continually into the church. It has been repeatedly and truthfully urged of late that one chief reason for the small increase of church membership is the lack of diligence in the seasonable garnering into our churches of the natural fruits of Christian nurture in our families and Sabbath schools.

IV. A fourth method of Christian endeavor with which the church is charged is such a Promotion of Social Culture as may be consistent with its more strictly religious work.

This is to be sought with the aim both to preoccupy the mind in prevention of wrong engagements, and also to incline the heart toward religious things.

It is the theory of Romanism that the care of all intellectual and social culture belongs solely to the church. This is not our theory.

Public libraries, schools, and lyceums, if rightly directed, elevate a community and give the gospel a better chance.

It is the duty of the Christian as an individual to aid all such agencies, and to seek, by guiding them aright, to leaven society with Christian force. But the church, as an organized body, is not charged with doing everything in the world that needs to be done. If there is no one else to do it, and the church is able to sustain literary societies, courses of lectures, or social assemblies; if the pastor can gather the young people to hear him lecture on history or art, or to take lessons in the Greek Testament; or if he can publish a church newspaper, or use the columns of the local paper to promote general culture as helpful to his religious work, all this is very well. Every such endeavor, however, should be kept in strict subordination to the proper work of the church, which has reference to the salvation of souls lost in sin.

V. A fifth method by which the church is to work is by Missions.

Beyond its own households the church is called to go forth to a world lying in sin and needing the gospel of Christ. By missions at home and abroad, by publication societies, and by very many organizations for particular classes or for special work, it is continually to prove itself the light of the world and the salt of the earth.

The unevangelized masses at our own doors appeal very powerfully to the Christian church. There are numerous agencies not strictly religious in which the church sometimes finds it feasible to work both in the prevention of vice and in the rescue of the vicious. The establishing of temperance coffee-houses and reading-rooms, flower missions, co-operative societies, savings banks among the very poor, associations to befriend the families of arrested persons, to aid discharged convicts or other unfortunate classes, are all, with many others still, wise expenditures of Christian force. There is often, however, no reason why such general philanthropic endeavors should be especially under the auspices of the church. They belong to all humane persons, and it is commonly wisest for Christians as individuals to co-operate with others in such general work.

There is sometimes a feeling that the subsidiary organizations for philanthropic and even for some kinds of Christian work detract from the power of the church, in so far as they absorb the time and energy of the members of the church.

The Young Men's Christian Associations, for example, it is sometimes felt, could better do their work through the churches themselves. In some places no doubt this is true, but in most large cities there is an advantage in the peculiar method the associations adopt. We remember the time when nothing seemed to be done for the large class of young men away from home in the great cities of the land. The duty of caring for their souls was pressed upon the churches with much prayer to God. God answered those prayers, and the churches responded to the appeal, and through the land the strong young men in the churches of our leading towns banded together to meet this urgent need. While they are doing it, they cannot, of course, be always in the meetings of their churches at home. But they go each as a representative of his church and doing its work. They are responsible to their churches, and can be called to account if they do anything wrong. If they seem to bring few converts into their respective churches, it is perhaps because they deal mainly with a floating and not very promising class, but a class for which it is most needful they should not forbear to work.

With multitudes on every hand going down to eternal death, the church must press every possible endeavor, by organized effort and by personal approach, to preach to them the only gospel able to arrest their steps and lead them to eternal life.

VI. In addition to all these ordinary and continuous methods of work, the church is still under obligation to employ special and extraordinary means for securing special manifestations of God's Spirit in Revivals of Religion.

The true theory of progress in the Redeemer's kingdom is not by alternate seasons of revival and decline, often as the history of an unfaithful church has shown such a sight. Nor is it through no fluctuations that a church or a soul passes upward in the divine life. There are times and seasons in the realm of nature and in the kingdom of grace. There are hours when it can be said, "the time to favor Zion, yea, the set time, is come."

The highway cast up for the ransomed of the Lord, along which in their spiritual pilgrimage they journey to the heavenly Zion, is not like the modern railway by which the summit of mountains is reached, with an even and steadily ascending grade. Nor is it like a path which climbs range after range of lesser intervening hills, dropping alternately into valleys beyond, though on the whole rising towards the loftier height. It is rather like one of the great mountain roads which continually rises, now by sudden lifts and then by a long ascending plain, towards some heaven-piercing peak whose summit it finally gains. Journeying on this road the nearer height often seems the final one; but its steep ascent only brings the traveller to a broad elevated plateau, across which the course still continues regularly to rise till the next abrupt elevation is encountered, which again seems the last, but which again in turn lifts one to another far-reaching plain, and thus at length the land of Beulah is reached and the Delectable Mountains, whence the Celestial City is discerned.

This is the way it can be, and should be, and sometimes is in the history of a church. There are churches which have the highest ideal of the duty of Christian nurture, which train their young to grow up as Christians, and which are measurably faithful in gathering them in; so that, by the regular and ordinary means of grace, a continuous fruitage is enjoyed. But to such churches most naturally, and more frequently than to neglectful churches, there come now and then through the infinite mercy of God seasons of special visitations of the Holy Ghost,—times of refreshing from on high,—when peculiar and extraordinary means seem demanded; and as soon then as such means are judiciously used, they are owned of God with such copious and overwhelming blessings that a powerful revival of religion is enjoyed, and many souls are converted to the Lord. Those who have been in the regular process of Christian instruction, the young and hopeful, in unusual numbers then come forward in an open profession of faith in Christ; and hardened sinners, apparently incapable of being moved by ordinary means, are then brought to confess the Lord. The whole tone of religious life is permanently elevated then, and, without any period of subsequent religious decline after the use of special means has ceased, the church holds on in its usual work with unpausing vigor and continuous success.

Thus you may sometimes be traversing a beautiful region, where the evidences of fertility are seen on every hand. There is no waste land, no rocky ledge, no dank morass. There is pleasing variety of upland and meadow, hill-top and glen, and everywhere the fatness of the land appears. You think nothing can be more beautiful than all this; but at length you enter a valley of surpassing loveliness, picturesque and attractive in every view. Sheltered by woodlands from all unfriendly winds, with warm, sunny slopes and broad stretches of rich, level fields, watered by unfailling springs, and enlivened by sparkling brooks, enriched by the washings of surrounding acclivities, it teems with a verdure, a foliage, and a fruitage of surpassing abundance. There the heaviest harvests are gathered in; there the grasses are sweetest, the flowers brightest, and the fruit which loads the orchards there is the fairest in form and hue and the finest in its flavor. It is not an oasis in a desert; it is rather an Eshcol in Canaan, a garden in a fruitful field. And such sometimes in God's abounding mercy is a revival of religion in the history of a faithful and prosperous church.

The great reliance of the church always is in its ordinary methods of Christian work. The quiet and regular methods in ten thousand humble endeavors are far more effective than the occasional and special means which usher in a season of revival. Without the regular means, the special means were all in vain. But it is too common to contrast the two kinds of endeavor as if they were in opposition to each other. They are in accord. Each tends to supplement, neither to supplant, the other. It is indeed written, "When He ascended up on high he gave gifts unto men, and he gave some pastors and teachers"; but it is also written, "and some evangelists." Evangelists have a humbler office than pastors and teachers. The labors of pastors and teachers, as a class, have aggregated many fold more than those of evangelists; but they are all equally of divine authority. Each class has its place; and unless the churches are wiser than their Lord, unless they would forego some of the richest gifts of God's grace, they must never think they have no need of evangelists.

Revivals of religion are a necessity to the best growth of a faithful church. Still more are they a necessity to any growth in an unfaithful church. They are necessary to quicken Christians in direct personal efforts to turn men to Christ; necessary to bring into the church those large numbers which must come in if the perishing millions are ever saved. There must be great ingatherings above all ordinary growth if the church is ever to gain rapidly on the world, as the promises of God predict. In the past, revivals have been needful in securing the great triumphs of the church; and as revivals are a necessity, direct and personal efforts to promote them constitute a necessary part of the work in which the members of our churches are to engage. We are commonly so engrossed with cares that our religious experiences, though perhaps right in kind, are often deficient in degree. Hence it is useful for any one, now and then, to turn with unusual devotion to the direct work of saving sinners from eternal death; to let go as much as possible, for a time, all other engagements; and by continuous attention to this one thing, to come nearer than usual to a just and adequate appreciation of the awful solemnities of the sinner's relation to God.

Thirdly. The third general inquiry to be made in this discussion is this: How far is the deficiency in the results of church work a deficiency of character in the church? It is possible that the deficiency of our church work in its practical results may be not a question merely of method. The difficulty may lie further back. Wrong thinking is the basis of wrong acting always. "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." The reason why right methods of work are not more valued, and more thoroughly used, may be that the underlying thought of the worker is wrong. In principle and life he may be marked by such a deficiency that even right methods, in his hands, show a deficiency in practical results. There is evidence that there are some very serious deficiencies characterizing, more or less, the doctrinal thought and spiritual experience of the church of our time.

I. In the first place it is believed there is a very grievous Lack of Reverence in our American life which affects the church and weakens its power for good.

Possibly because we are a nation that made itself free, the bold virtues have come to be unduly magnified in our esteem. The courage of acting on one's own convictions, independent of unjust authority, seems so precious in our eyes that we are inclined to look leniently on the disregard of rightful authority. The fascination of Mr. Ingersoll's oratory lies much in its appeal to this admiration of independence. The very audacity of his air is taking with Young America. Our youth are not shocked at his irreverence as they would be if they had more reverence themselves. We hold a low place among the nations in respect to this trait. How many English families in humble life have we known who have come over here, whose troops of ruddy-faced children have been models of reverent submission to parental authority.

Our philosophy has increased the evil. Striving against the claim that the only rational religion is with the so-called liberalists, we have shown the reasonableness of Evangelical religion, — how it harmonizes with the nature of things. It has been a worthy and successful effort, but it has been too exclusively our line of thought. It falls in too well with what Tayler Lewis calls "the tendency of our modern ethics to become converted into a system of physics, — making all duty to consist in the study and observance of natural law, — a tracing of man's obligation to the universe rather than to God, the free, personal Lawgiver of the universe."

We are told there is "a somewhat that makes for righteousness," but we can know nothing of any personal God for whom reverence and love should be felt. This glory given to natural law hides from sight the higher glory of positive law; it hides the higher glory of the fact, in which the dignity of man consists, that he is taken out of the plane of nature and put in a higher relation, — that of a free personality, capable of entering into covenant with the Infinite Personality. On this plane there are no longer merely forces, tendencies, the constitution of things, but parties, agreements, covenants, promises; there are penalties and rewards which involve the personal favor or displeasure of the Lawgiver. But it is agreeable to the proud spirit of modern philosophy to ignore God, and to reverence only man. Man is the profound inquirer who has evolved a system of duty by what he finds in his study of the nature of things.

Our Christian life feels the influence of this prevalent temper of modern thought. Our churches come to be regarded as mutual-improvement societies, gathered around some man celebrated for advanced thought. When men are invited to take seats in a church, it is to help support the enterprise and enjoy its privileges, as if it were a mere social club.

To such an appeal men feel at liberty to say, We have our own fellowships, — secret orders, literary and art clubs, social affiliations, which occupy our time and thought. Hence it comes about, in many cities there are whole streets full of cultivated families who find it no bar to eminent respectability to have nothing to do with any church as the years go round.

The church can never bring such people in till it restores in its own thought the truth that the true end of Sabbath assemblage is to render reverent worship to God. Instruction prompts to worship, and worship ennobles life; it is itself a prime and potent constituent in all truly noble life. The church must feel, far more than it does, that reverence for the authority of a personal God, — a reverence expressed in devout acts of worship and in humble deference to his revealed will, — is an indispensable necessity, not only to the growth of spiritual religion, but to the maintenance of morality, the progress of civilization, and the stability of popular government. Æsthetic culture, the refining influence of household life, will do something for a time to restrain men from vice and crime. But inevitably when it can be said of any city, "There is in it a judge who fears not God," it can soon be added, "neither regardeth man." The church must look on those who refrain from public worship, learned jurist or philosophic sage, however accomplished in letters or in art, or devoted to country or to race, as contributing the force of a powerful example to overturn government and degrade mankind.

"The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom"; and if the church is wise, it will cultivate a spirit of holy reverence and the fear of the Lord. In spite of the prevalent contempt for sacred things, and notwithstanding the common affectation of indifference to the claims on our reverence which God makes for his day and his house and his word, the church will recognize the fact that there is a natural language of posture and tone fitted to express the emotions of the soul; that as the drum suits the march, and the bugle the cavalry charge, so to the approach of a man to his Maker there belongs a fit solemnity of feature and of bearing, of reverent gesture and serious voice, which no wise man will be willing to neglect. Let the church become more reverent, and the world will feel its power more.

II. Again: A Deeper Sense of the Guilt of Sin would add to the power of the church.

Allusion has been made to the tendency of our time to regard moral obligation as merely the duty man owes himself to harmonize his conduct with the nature of things, as if there were no being in the universe higher than he. This takes away the sense of sin as an offence against a personal God. It was also intimated that as a nation we admire resistance to unrighteous authority as such a superlative virtue that we readily excuse resistance to righteous authority as a venial offence, akin to virtue, if not indeed sometimes a truly virtuous act.

But resistance to rightful authority is the very essence of all sin. The doctrine of sin given in the Bible is, that God, who made man and desires his good as well as knows how alone his good is to be gained, has a right to a preference concerning the conduct of man; that he has expressed that preference in the moral law; that man has seen fit to reject that standard, and to prefer his own will; that God continually comes to man demanding his supreme love; that man as constantly refuses the demand; and thus, fast as the moments roll, regularly as his pulse beats and his lungs heave, he continues to hurl defiance in his Maker's face; that this attitude of personal resistance to the rightful authority of God is the chief characteristic trait of every unrenewed man; that as long as it continues, it renders impossible any character thoroughly right, and marks him as "dead in trespasses and sins"; that this condition will continue forever, to the eternal ruin of the soul, unless by the almighty power of the Holy Spirit the man is created anew in being induced to alter his supreme choice; that to bring new motives effectual to work that change, inducing man to repent of his sin, and also to make it right to forgive him if he will repent, the Infinite Son of God became man on the earth, and here lived and died as the God-man; that he now lives in heaven to plead the merits of his death in behalf of man; and that the Holy Spirit, sent in his name, is now seeking by the church and the word to turn men from sin unto God. This is the doctrine of sin in the Bible. This is what the churches profess to believe, and what all the Evangelical theological seminaries teach.

But there are many in the churches, and some in the ministry, who say that these views of sin are too stern. They do not merely declare that it is happily agreeable to the Christian spirit of our time, in presenting these views, to give greater relative prominence to the exhibitions of God's love for sinners than was once the habit, but that these views have given way altogether, supplanted by radically different ideas of the moral condition of man. The Rev. Joseph Parker, of London, in the teeth of many of his own utterances in print, in a letter to the "London Times" in September last, said: "Whoever adopts and practises the principle of self-sacrifice for the good of others is a living Christian, whatever he may think of any point of dogmatic theology."

Then a man may deny the need of repentance, deny the ruin of man by sin, and be a Christian. In order to be a Christian it is not needful to hold these points in dogmatic theology, nor even that other point in dogmatic theology which affirms the existence of God. Indeed, even Mr. Bradlaugh himself declares he has always held and advocated the Christianity which is expounded thus.

Now, a Christianity with these easy views of sin, whatever methods of Christian labor it adopts, is not likely to put into its methods very much force. Why should it? It never has done it, and never will. Not believing that human nature is radically wrong, it naturally employs no radical measures of relief. If one regards sin as a mere blemish which the sinner is sure to outgrow, what is the need of much concern about the affair? Any way, it is only a question of salvation soon or late. The sinner was never in the least danger of being lost. He could not be if he tried to be. A church with such views of sin never will convert the world. In so far as such views of doctrine prevail among us, our efforts must be deficient in practical results.

It is true, the mightiest motive we can present to move men is God's love. But God's love for what? God does not love opposites, or he would have no character. God's love for holiness, by all the intensity of its mighty strength, is at the same time hatred for sin. They who make God indifferent to sin, make him incapable of holy love. The strongest exhibition of God's love ever made, — the death of Christ on the cross, — we are taught in the Scriptures, depends for its impressiveness precisely on the fact of man's inveterate sin, utterly remediless except through the power of that amazing death. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that" — in order that — "whosoever believeth on him should not perish," — should not perish, as he otherwise assuredly would, — "but have everlasting life." "Knowing, therefore, the terror of the Lord, we persuade men," said that great apostle, who trembled lest he himself should be a castaway, who sought to "warn every man night and day with tears," lest, if they "obeyed not the gospel of our Lord Jesus," they should "suffer punishment, even eternal destruction from the face of the Lord."

III. Thirdly: A more perfect Exhibition of the True Spirit of Christian Brotherhood would add very greatly to the practical usefulness of the church.

It has been stated as a fact that in certain manufacturing corporations in this State, conspicuous for refusing the piteous appeal of their operatives for higher wages, very large profits are nevertheless steadily obtained; Christian stockholders frequently drawing dividends of twenty, or thirty, or even forty per cent per annum. All manufacturing, of course, is not equally profitable, but very common everywhere among Christians are the selfish greed, and the heartless neglect of our neighbor, which make men indifferent to the cry of the poor when wages are kept back.

It is no arraignment of Providence for permitting great inequalities in the human lot, it is no plea for agrarianism or for community of goods, it is no denial of the necessity of intimate companionships among those of equal culture and of congenial tastes, when the declaration is made that many Christians in the most favored walks of life show towards the less favored classes a lack of genuine sympathy, of friendly interest, and of judicious aid, which goes far to explain the failure of the church to influence society at large.

There is a great deal done by the church for the poor. There are many noble instances of personal friendliness, of discernment and tact, in the intercourse with the lowly which is maintained by Christians in prominent positions, employers, ladies of eminent station, young people of culture, and others, men and women in prosperous life, who are vigorously pushing a thousand sweet charities and helpful arts for the elevation of those whose peculiar burdens are holding them down.

But Christians at large are lamentably deficient in the exercise of a genuine spirit of Christian brotherhood. They have no just appreciation of the disabilities and limitations under which multitudes around them live. They have too little regard for the divine injunction, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ." There are worthy Christian people who have to live where family privacy is an impossible thing. In at every open window comes obscene and blasphemous speech; swarming in the common halls and door-ways are the idle and vicious, so unclean in body and mind, that it is perilous to pass them to reach sidewalk or stairs.

In the camp-life of many a virtuous young soldier in our late civil war, it was not the peril of battle nor the danger of sickness, not army rations nor toil in trenches, which he found to be the most trying feature of his lot. The hardest thing of all was companionship with some of the comrades sent from the scum of the great cities to serve as substitutes in the war. Men inveterately bad, foul all over and foul all through, in speech and person, in thought and act, in history and intent. The close intimacy of tent-life night and day, with such men, was an unspeakable horror from which the pure soul of the young soldier revolted with intensest loathing.

But for a man to expose his children to such contamination, to be compelled to shelter the wife of his bosom where such associates cannot be shunned, — this is where poverty pinches; this is what causes the iron to enter the very soul of some wholesome, right-minded, but not over-wise or very strong young man, who grew up on some breezy hill-top far away, who wooed his modest wife under the peach blossoms which shadowed her mother's window at the cottage home where all the air is sweet, but who has drifted to the city to find work, and to get bread for their chubby boys and girls, who are all their joy and hope.

To such a household He who said, "When thou makest a dinner call not thy rich neighbors," would have his favored disciples go, with comfort and counsel in the spirit of love, to purify its surroundings if possible, or to help it to a better place; to give it not money, but friends, and to win its members to the sanctuary, where at least, in the peace of God's holy day, their hearts may find a congenial home.

In these times of increasing wealth there is literally no end to the luxuries and vanities in which prosperous Christians absorb their time and means, and then they wonder at the wall of separation which is built up between the masses and the church; they deplore the spread of Communism and Nihilism with their bitterness and blood. Under the gospel, on the common plane of utter need as sinners, "the rich and the poor meet together: the Lord is the maker of them all." Especially in this land they meet together on the common ground of a mutual inheritance of political rights; an inheritance which is itself a precious trophy of the gospel's advancing reign, but which is also a fearful peril if the spirit of the gospel does not melt all classes into a brotherhood of love. How blessed if here, too, in this favored land, the stern law of the survival of the fittest in the struggle for success might be so tempered by the milder law of Christian brotherhood as to result in the survival of the most: if, by co-operative association, enlarging the share of the workman in the profits of his toil; and by Christian sympathy and friendly interest the rich and the poor might meet together in cordial intercourse, "striving together for the faith of the gospel," "heirs together of the grace of life."

IV. The great reason, however, for deficient results in the work of the church is Unbelief.

This reason underlies all other reasons in the heart and life. If this is removed, all other occasions for unfruitfulness disappear. The church lacks power just in proportion as it lacks faith in Christ as a risen, living, almighty Redeemer and King.

The measure of success at any time in the work of the church depends on the measure of faith the church then has in the present and almighty power of its Lord. All the power Christians ever have is the indwelling power of Christ. When our Lord gave the church its great commission, he said, "All power is given unto me." "Go ye into all the world." "Disciple all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo! I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." All power is given unto him; He is with his church to give them power for this work which he has laid on them to do. The power of Christ, by his indwelling Spirit, comes only to men through faith. Christ says, "Abide in me; I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit: for without me ye can do nothing."

If, then, for any considerable time there is a real and manifest lack of success in the labors of the church, we know of course that it is because the church fails to get power from Christ by faith. Their vision of him has grown dim. Love of the world or the fear of man, or some idol of the heart, has obscured from their sight the Almighty One who evermore walks amid the golden candlesticks as King of kings and Lord of lords.

There is evidence that a spirit of worldliness has weakened our faith in Christ. Dr. R. S. Storrs, in a recent visit to Boston, spoke in impressive terms of the wonderful growth of the city and the immense accumulations of wealth since he held a ministry in the region some thirty years ago, — a growth not peculiar to that city, but visible all through the land. — and remarked with deep feeling upon the consequent languor in religion, natural to such an era of prosperity in material things. All know this is a day of great worldly ambitions. The amazing progress of invention, the development of the arts, the opening of new avenues of industry, with the more general diffusion of the opportunities and rewards of enterprise have created an unwonted eagerness and intensity in the pursuit of the glittering objects of worldly desire. This has affected the church not only in painful instances of defalcation and breach of trust, not only in giving often a too worldly character to the management of the financial affairs of the church, so that architects have pronounced church-building committees not always the most honorable class of people to deal with, and in introducing questionable methods of raising money for religious uses, but it has affected the general tone of Christian living to a lamentable extent. Habits of foolish luxury and wasteful extravagance prevail. The world usurps the heart. The gifts to the Lord are not in proportion to the increase in wealth; or if men give their means, they do not give their heart to Christian work. They are fascinated and absorbed and held, as if bound by a spell, in the management of the ten thousand wonderful enterprises which are developing with unexampled rapidity on every hand.

Now it is no cure to these evils of worldliness to denounce all such enterprises as the mere snare of Satan, the folly of an age run mad in adoration of railroads and machinery and mines. These enterprises are of God. They are the beneficent unfolding of his providence in establishing the kingdom of his Son. There are indeed iniquitous trades, — the manufacture and sale of poisonous adulterations, of intoxicating liquors, of obscene books, the works of the devil, which the Son of God was manifested to destroy, — but in the main the great affairs which mark the age are all the footsteps of Him who is making all things subservient to his Son. The grand factor in the marvellous changes of modern civilization is the Lord Jesus Christ. The Christian looks on the busy scene and says to all the inventors and manufacturers and engineers and railroad kings, “There standeth One among you whom ye know not.” And among the active toilers in all this mighty movement of the time there are many Christians, men of faith, who rejoice in it all, because it is the work of their Lord; because by it all he is lifting up man, helping forward his church, and hastening on the day when “the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High,” when “all dominions shall serve and obey him”

When we hear that a messenger from Paris lately brought to the eminent Sir William Thompson, at Glasgow, a wooden box about a foot square, and weighing seventy-five pounds, containing four leaden cups, with a million pounds of electrical force stored away in them, — condensed lightning boxed up in France, to be carried wherever needed, and used whenever wanted to turn engines, or to light dwellings, or to wait on the surgeon in his difficult task, doing his merciful bidding quicker and better than the sharpest knife, — how naturally does the new marvel lead the Christian to exclaim, “Another of the footsteps of Him who of old went about doing good.” “Another of the treasures which He who seeth the end from the beginning long ago hid in the field, and has now sent men to dig for, that they might find it, and lift it with joy to the light.” As a Christian thus sees the triumphs of his Redeemer’s plans, his heart overflows with praise, and he exclaims, “How precious also are Thy thoughts unto me, O God!” Christians who have a clear and intelligent faith in Christ as Lord, recognize their business as part of his plan. Christ is in partnership with them. He is senior partner; and as he institutes the business and furnishes the capital and has called the junior partners in, naturally he gives law to them in carrying the business on. With perfect faith that he has planned the business wisely, and that it will result in their good, they are ready and glad to throw themselves heartily into it, and with all energy and enthusiasm and fidelity push it for the end designed by Christ, according to the principles laid down by Christ, and in the methods prescribed by Christ, — never on the Sabbath, which Christ teaches is to be devoted to religious uses; never with any disregard of the rights of others; never in such an absorbing way as to interfere with prayer, with study of the Bible, with culture of the character or care for the soul.

Now, why should not such a faith in Christ cut the bonds by which the worldling is bound? Christians who see Christ thus may be in the very thick of the world's wild commotion; but they never lose their head, or give away their heart. They never go crazy with the din. They know all the time where they are, and what they are doing, and whose wise plans they are pushing to success. They never become slaves to greed and gold, knowing no Sabbath, forgetful of conscience and of God, of heaven and of hell.

It is a lack of faith in Christ, too, which leads Christians to conform to the wicked practices of a sinful world through fear of men. There are leaders in the fashionable world, of eminent social or political rank, with talent and culture and wealth, who habitually desecrate the Lord's Day; whose personal indulgences lead the young into intemperance; who patronize such amusements as encourage vice; and many a Christian is standing by who is afraid to lose caste by condemning such conduct either by his example or his words; and so rather than appear singular, he conforms his life to the habits of the world.

A Christian whose faith beholds Christ as the wise and glorious King, — the King who is more and more to call to himself all the wisest and greatest of the sons of men, — seems to see the day when men of genius and of power shall hasten to bring their culture and their honor, and lay all at the Saviour's feet; when the men of splendid faculties and wonderful accomplishments, — poets, orators, statesmen, — rich with the spoils of all the past, and cultivated to a degree now unknown, will count it their chief glory that they try to be loyal to their Saviour's claims, that they endeavor to fulfil in their lives such works of piety and mercy as his example commends. The Christian feels that such high souls will look back with sorrow and pity on every weak Christian of to-day who, through fear of the face of man, followed into sin the little-great ones of earth, unmindful that they are but as the dust of the balance in the sight of the Lord.

A clear faith in Christ as head over all things to the church, — a faith which sees the great conquests and the final triumph to which he is leading his church, — will not hesitate to meet the demands the great Conqueror makes at any time on his loyal adherents and friends. It is lack of such faith which prevents the church from entering at once with replenished coffers and with hosts of volunteers upon the inspiring opportunities for Christian labor which are opening now in many parts of the world. There was lately exhibited in Boston to some of the most renowned electricians of the time, and by them all cordially approved, a submarine repeater, calculated to increase fourfold the power of ocean cables, and thus cheapen their use. It was a globe six inches in diameter, hermetically sealed, constructed of a bronze calculated to last in sea water a thousand years, to be sunk in mid-ocean, and containing a simple mechanism which performs the function of an office and two operators at the bottom of the sea. It recalls the Arabian legend of a Genie shut up by King Solomon in a copper flask and thrown into the waves; only that prisoner was idle, while this apparatus is to be at work all the time, away down in its sea-hidden home, responding unceasingly to the touch of the electric thrill.

If the exigencies of the Redeemer's kingdom required two intelligences to enter such a prison-house, and there continue working till the end of time, are there any of those "angels that excel in strength," ministers of his who would not fly swiftly at his call to enter that chamber, and there "do his pleasure, hearkening to the voice of his word"?

There is no reason to suppose there is any spot in the universe, except here on this earth, where the destiny of immortal beings is still undecided and is capable of being affected forever by the sacrificing labors just now of such creatures as men

And when Christians have faith to see the Infinite Son of God undertaking to recover such a race of beings to himself, see him a risen Saviour present with his church, clothed with all power, and by mighty triumphs hastening forward that work to its glorious end, — hear him calling on his followers to give him their aid, — it is easy to respond to his call. It is easy to take a million of money and lay it at his feet, as one and another have done of late. It is easy to take the finest powers and highest culture and yield them up as did Bishop Pattison in the Melanesian Isles. It is easy to take the fulness and freshness of a young life and surrender it with gladness as did our Pinkerton, just now, in the fever-laden jungles of Africa.

To take away every kind of worldly spell which weakens the power of the church, — greed of gold and fear of man, love of luxury and love of ease, — there is nothing so prevailing as the clear vision by faith of the Son of Man, whose eyes are as a flame of fire, and his countenance as the sun shining in his strength, and who evermore is saying, "I am the first and the last; I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of hell and of death."

No man ever knew more or told more of the heart of Jesus than he who lay upon it at the last supper, the beloved disciple. He was with Him while He lived, he was with Him when He died. He ate with Him and talked with Him when He had risen from the grave; he saw Him rising to heaven through the rending clouds. He had seen Him in brightness when He was transfigured on the mount; he beheld Him in Patmos as in glorious apparel He revisited the earth. Nay, into heaven he looked and beheld Him worshipped by angels and seated on His throne. If ever man believed in Christ it was the apostle John. If ever man, too, attained the victory over the world it was he. His name is the synonyme for purity and saintliness, for holiness and love. John had the world beneath his feet. And John has told us how he overcame the world; nay, he has told us how alone any man ever can triumph over its subtle, deceptive power. Hear his word: "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith" "Who is he," — ay, who is he, ever or anywhere, — "who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God?"

In just so far as individual Christian hearts shall believe in Jesus as did the apostle John, shall possess a living and appreciative faith in the Infinite Son of God as a personal Redeemer and Friend, as an almighty and triumphant King, now present by his Spirit with his church, — in just so far will all deficiencies in character, and all deficiencies in methods of labor disappear, and the practical results of their work will appear no longer deficient, but efficient and sufficient to make the world's wide wilderness glad, and its desert to rejoice and blossom as the rose.

THE LAY ELEMENT OF THE CHURCH: HOW TO SECURE ITS GREATER EFFICIENCY.

BY FORREST F. EMERSON, AMHERST.

THE theme assigned me is "How to secure greater efficiency on the part of the lay element of our churches." Any suggestions which might be made as to the proper methods of securing such efficiency would have additional interest and force when the need of a better organization of the laity and of its greater activity shall have been properly emphasized. The need of greater efficiency on the part of the rank and file of the church is clearly seen, whether we consider the failure of the church to fulfil the theory and ideal involved in its constitution and work, or examine the practical needs of society which the church was intended to meet and remedy; since a careful study of the subject shows that the church fails in itself to realize its own theoretic ideals, and fails also in society as a practical evangelizing agent for the moral renewal of the world.

1. First, then, as to theory and the church-idea. We ask the question at the outset whether the emphasis which is now laid upon the distinction between the clergy and the laity, and the consequent inactivity of large masses of the lay element, can be justified by our theory of the constitution of the church, or by our theory of the Christian life. Whether we view the matter from the standpoint of Scripture, of church history, or of the accepted doctrine among us as to what the church is intended to do and be, and as to what the individual Christian life ought to be, we are compelled to reply that our theory of the church, and our theory of the Christian life, demand an increased activity in Christian work on the part of the lay members of our churches, — that they should share with the clergy, in larger proportion, the responsibility of success or defeat in Christian work. The facts of Scripture and of history in their bearing on this matter are full of wisdom and warning for our own time. They show that our theory of the church and of the Christian life is a correct one, and they show furthermore that our practice exemplifies that theory very imperfectly.

In the third year of Christ's ministry he sent forth seventy preachers, or evangelists, "to go before his face into all the cities into which he would come," to announce the near approach of the kingdom of God, declaring at the same time that "the harvest was great, but the laborers were few." The commission of these men differed from that of the apostles, and is interesting in several particulars. As the work to be done by them was a special one, to be reported upon to the Master, and as we do not learn that they received life commissions, and furthermore, as they were not set apart as apostles and overseers of the new Christian society, may we not regard this work which they were commissioned to do as the work of laymen under the immediate direction of the Master, — a work which would fit them for further labors after the Master should go away? Another fact to be remarked is the large number that was sent out, as compared with the whole number of Christian believers. If we may judge of the number of Christ's sincere followers by the New Testament history, if we discriminate between sincere and faithful discipleship and the thoughtless applause of the multitudes, which so quickly changed to the cry, "Crucify him," when the influence of the rulers was turned against Christ, we may believe that the comparative number of disciples was small. The state of affairs before Pentecost implies this; but Christ sends forth seventy men to engage in Christian work. Would it not seem as if he put into the field his whole available force, and that this drafting for service of so large a proportion of the number of disciples is a significant fact in its bearing on the present discussion?

So in the giving of the great commission. Dr Edward Robinson has shown that this command to "go into all the world" may be held as applicable in a sense to all Christians, just as a large proportion of Christ's teachings, notably those at the Last Supper, are intended for the whole church of Christ, though spoken to the twelve. Not of course that all were to be formal and official preachers; but all, as they found opportunity, were to tell the glad news of the crucified and risen Messiah. That the commission was so understood seems to be borne out by the events that followed. In the opening of the eighth chapter of the Acts, we find that "there was a great persecution of the church at Jerusalem, and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles." "Therefore," we read in the fourth verse, "they that were scattered abroad went everywhere preaching the word." In the fourteenth verse we read this: "Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John." In the light of other facts we may not conclude that Philip was the only preacher through whom they heard the word. It would seem, indeed, that the professed disciples — the laity as we should say now, though it is doubtful whether there was such a distinct line of separation between them and the clergy at that time as afterwards obtained — first preached throughout Palestine the doctrine of a crucified Christ risen from the dead. Nay, we are told in the Acts that they "travelled as far as Phenice and Cyprus and Antioch preaching the word." So, also, "men of Cyprus and Cyrene" are also mentioned as "preaching the Lord Jesus," though they were neither apostles nor original disciples; and "to such preaching is to be ascribed the founding of many of the early churches." Still further, Paul's description of the meetings of the Christian assembly in that age, concerning which he says, "When ye come together every one of you hath a psalm, hath a doctrine, hath a tongue, hath a revelation, hath an interpretation. For ye may all prophesy one by one that all may learn and all be comforted," goes to show that the church was considered one body, all the members of which in their public meetings stood very nearly upon the same level, and that the words of all, as he expressly states, were to be not only for the edification of the church, but for the conviction of unbelievers who might be present. The duties, privileges, and labors of those not appointed to office were largely of the same character as those who were set apart to be the directors and overseers. Still later, we find that the bishops who defended themselves against the charge of permitting Origen, when a layman, to teach in their presence, appealed to the common law of the church as sustaining their position. We find Augustine subscribing to a law adopted in the fourth council of Carthage, that a layman may teach in the absence of the clergy. In the Alexandrian church the office of reader might be filled even by a Christian not yet baptized. The commentary of the Pseudo Ambrose recognizes that "at the beginning it was permitted to all to preach, to baptize, and to explain the Scriptures in church." The practice of the church in the third and fourth centuries is well represented in a law found in the Apostolic Constitutions, to the effect that "any man, though a layman, if skilful in expounding doctrines, and of venerable manners, may be allowed to teach in church."

Such are the simple facts as to the recognized position of the laity in the early church. How different all this from the later usurpations of privilege on the part of the clergy, when ritual ceremonies took the place of gospel evangelization; "when preaching itself became a ceremony"; when "not only laymen, but even presbyters were prohibited from preaching, except by permission of bishops," who had arrogated to themselves the exclusive right of preaching, — a function which they at one time practically abandoned, so that, according to one authority, "there was a time when the bishops of Rome were not known to preach for several hundred years together."

I have given these facts to show, not that there was no distinction between the laity and the clergy, not to prove that the laity of our time should at once go to preaching, but to show that in the early church there was a broader view taken of the position of the laity than afterwards in the Romish church, or even in many branches of the Christian church of to-day. Very soon, however, the voice of the lay element in evangelistic work was silenced; for, from the fourth to the sixteenth centuries the evil that overspread Christendom and paralyzed the spiritual power of the church was the deposit on the part of the laity of their duties and privileges in the hands of a priesthood. Not only their activity as the "ambassadors of Christ," but even their personal holiness, the care and cure of their souls, was delegated to the priest, religion being a matter to be regulated not by the individual conscience, but by the hand and voice of a priest, and the duties of the Christian to God and man were performed by proxy and at second hand. The Reformation came; and its chief business was not only to liberate the church from the superstitions that had overlaid and obscured the original tradition, but to lay responsibility again upon the personal conscience. Religion became personal once more, and the laity understood, as did their brethren in the early church, that responsibility was their own, and that each man "must give an account of himself unto God." Christian activity also awoke. The voice that aroused men as with a trumpet call to personal piety, incited them also to positive labor in behalf of others. Every great spiritual revival, every reformation in the church, was then, as ever since, marked by a clearer recognition of the responsibility resting upon the whole church to labor for Christ. Every spiritual advance emphasized the important position and responsibility of the layman as a direct and accountable agent in the extension of the Kingdom of Christ. "The preaching of Bunyan, Baxter, and Flavel in the seventeenth century, the preaching of Doddridge and the Erskines in the eighteenth, stimulated in laymen the feeling of personal responsibility," and the desire to make personal effort in Christian work. The great movement under Wesley was characterized by a superior organization of the lay element of the church, the active Christian exercise demanded of its local lay preachers and class leaders, and the passive exercise, if we may so call it, required of all members in the weekly recital of religious experience, constituting one of the great secrets of the rapid rise and enormous growth and strength of Methodism. It may be said, also, that the Baptist denomination, though without the compact organization of the Methodist church, owes its success largely to the fact that in its theory of the church, it has reduced to the minimum its distinction between the clergy and the laity, made the local church the unit of authority in church government, and has been true to its theory, by encouraging its individual members from the very hour of their conversion to become active in its devotional meetings and its missionary work, — the aim being to fit all its membership, old and young, male and female, to wield intelligently the suffrage to which they are entitled, and for the exercise of which they are held responsible, and to make the lay element of the church active in Christian work.

Other facts press upon us for notice, all going to show that increased usefulness and power in the church include a recognition and employment of the unused talent of laymen hidden hitherto in the napkin of a false tradition. It is only a little more than a hundred years since the Sunday school was set on foot as a distinct form of Christian enterprise. Its beneficent purpose and its generally praiseworthy results are hardly called in question; but the work of this great organization is done mostly by laymen. The Young Men's Christian Association has accomplished great good, especially in our large towns and cities. Its work is carried forward mostly by laymen. It will be hardly denied that all the movements of the time, missionary, philanthropic, and evangelistic, all that broadens and deepens the influence of the church, and enlarges the results of Christian labor, involve, and must do so more and more in the future, the sympathy, the prayers, and the direct labors of the lay element of the churches.

Now these earlier facts which I have cited originated our Protestant theory of the church. The later facts confirm its correctness. That theory, as suggested by the teaching and methods in labor of Christ and his apostles, and as proved by the history of the church during three centuries, is simply this: that the laity constitutes the church, over which the clergy are set as leaders and directors, — the spokesmen of the body of Christ chosen by that body itself, — and the overseers of Christian labor for the conversion of the world. The ministers or overseers were not to be priests, or spiritual mediators between God and his people, but servants of the church. Of course the line of separation between the clergy and the laity has been a somewhat indefinite and relative thing, a kind of isothermal thread in the serpentine and irregular course made for it by opinion, swinging this way and that in its definition of the term "clergy," and in its ideas of church order. Doubtless many of the early Christians looked upon Paul as of rather doubtful apostleship, he being regarded by some as a kind of irresponsible, wandering evangelist; while some of our High-Church brethren doubtless look upon even the distinguished body of ministers before me not as clergymen at all, but only lay preachers who think they are clergymen. It all depends on the point of view; but taking the terms "laity" and "clergy" in the usual Protestant and evangelical sense, the line of distinction becomes faint and indistinct, and has less and less meaning as we obtain a truly spiritual conception of Christianity. "Laymen need to be reminded," says the Rev. John Farrer, "that they constitute, though not exclusively, yet principally, 'the church,' the clergy being the ministers of 'the church'; that it is for the people's sake" — that is, the laity's sake — "that the ordinances of religion, and the clergy as the dispensers of the same, exist; that on them rests the duty of bearing the burdens as they receive the benefits of the church; and finally, that there is no difference between them and the clergy in church standing, except that the clergy are the officers of each particular church to minister in the word and sacraments."

As part of the same theory, and the logical counterpart or fulfilment of it, came in the ideal theory of what was to be a marked feature of the purpose for which the church exists. The local church was to be a mission. While a large part of its purpose is fulfilled in the spiritual culture of its members, that culture certainly includes the development of the missionary and evangelistic spirit; and while individual believers are not to neglect the cultivation of Christian character, it is equally incumbent upon them to engage in the work of leading others to Christ. Our church-idea must include something more than that estimate of it which makes it a mutual benefit society for the comfort and instruction of its own members. Neither is it a social club nor a training school nor a spiritual nursery and hospital for mutual help alone; it is primarily a mission, with the great commission as its watchword. It is to be the "light of the world," the "salt" of the community, making its saving, sweetening influence felt beyond its own borders, a light shining beyond its own narrow limits, a missionary agency "to those who are without."

This is our theory: the theory of Protestantism, and of the word of God. But it is a question for discussion whether the Congregational churches of New England illustrate and exemplify their theory. Being for many years the standing religious order of the colonies, having the civil law as a kind of compulsory hand to assist in directing the conscience of the people, having the prestige of power and the right of first occupation of the territory, the Congregational sisterhood has not felt that necessity of active individual labor which has actuated other denominations; the religious labor was left largely to be performed by the clergy; converts were not trained to active service; and for two centuries the distinction between the clergy and the laity was emphasized to a degree unwarranted by the very theory of church order which Congregationalism professed. As suggested by Dr. Fish in his "Primitive Piety Revived," the ques'tion may well be asked whether we have not failed to reap one half the benefits which the Reformation logically developed would have brought us; for while the Reformation has brought clearly to light the doctrine of individual responsibility for personal holiness, it has not developed, as it will when we follow its logical teachings, that equally important truth of individual responsibility for activity in behalf of others, — the obligation of all believers to be helpers in aggressive work for the kingdom of Christ. The need, then, of greater efficiency on the part of the lay element in our churches is forcibly suggested by the question whether our practice is not, to some degree, at least, at variance with our theory of the church, our theory of the position and work of the church, and our theory of the Christian life as a personal individual matter, including not only the obligation of spiritual self-nurture, but that positive charity which incites the believer to Christian activity because he loves his neighbor as himself.

2. Again, in the second place, we reach the same conclusion from a practical consideration: the spiritual needs of the times; the moral condition of society, and especially the wants of whole classes of our population almost wholly untouched by our present methods of Christian work. Statistics summing up the numbers of the non-church-going multitudes I need not give. The causes of the decline of the religious sentiment among certain classes among us, it is not my business here to give, even were I able to perform such a task. It may not be out of place, however, and with no danger that I should be counted as an alarmist, to say that which is the belief of many good men: that the religious doubt that characterizes so many educated people of our time has sifted down through the different strata of society to the lower levels of New England life. Well-defined doubt that can render a reason in the educated, becomes in the ignorant and vicious a settled indifference to religion. The fact that this class do not know what ails them is no proof that they are not sick. They may be unconscious of the decline of religious belief in themselves as compared with their fathers; but their immorality and their carelessness concerning religion are the result of it. The cultivated class, deriving nourishment and strength from the moral and spiritual teachings of Christianity, do not at once show the degenerating effect of doubt concerning the historic foundations of the faith. But with those without religious instruction the effect is more marked. It appears in the various forms of vice, immorality, and crime, and in indifference or positive hostility to the institutions of religion. Those who have been religiously trained in childhood, and who still cling to an upright way of life, though without any very pronounced religious belief, are actuated so to do by considerations which have little effect with the uninstructed. The latter, in many cases, are glad of any excuse for laxity in conduct, welcome any deliverance from moral restraint, rejoice that the pulpit seems to grow weaker than formerly in its presentations of those divine sanctions of morality which once gave the New England pulpit such a vantage-ground of power. Among this class, a class increasing in number year by year, are found the recruits to free-lovism and the lower phases of spiritualism; here crime festers, and now and again breaks out in criminal transgression against the law and the peace of society; here intemperance makes and holds its victims; here is the soil for the growth of business in the divorce courts; and here is revealed, in charges and counter-charges of divorce cases, the stolid ignorance, the incredible vulgarity, the low aims and ideas concerning marriage, and the brutish heathenism which characterize the life of many people in New England. The facts going to prove the increase of licentiousness and of the frequency of divorce have been carefully and ably collated by Mr. Dike, of Vermont, and need not be repeated here.

If we add to this the lack of increase in church membership during the last five years, as compared with the increase of population, notwithstanding Dr. Dorchester's figures for the last eighty years; or, should the alarm recently sounded all along the line concerning this matter be unwarranted by the facts, then, at least, a consideration of the multitudes of our New England population who absent themselves from all religious services, and use the Sabbath for a holiday, does not give us an encouraging outlook. A single fact, out of columns of statistics, will suffice. Rev. Mr. Bullard, of Hartford general agent of the Tract Society, declares that in an actual canvass of eighty towns of Connecticut, fifty thousand people were found who on their own confession never attended religious services; and he estimates that, taking New England together, city and country, only about one third regularly attend Sunday worship, and nearly half are practically without religious instruction. It is idle to say that these things are to be laid at the door of foreigners, since most Catholics attend church, divorce never takes place among them, and the most brutal crimes, especially those which have licentiousness for the moving cause, — a form of transgression which has increased in the last twenty years three times faster than the population and eight times as fast as crime in general, — are committed by those who are of New England birth and origin. It is idle, also, to say that our preaching is not practical enough, for second thought will convince us, I think, that preaching was never more practical than now, the sins of society never more clearly pointed out, and that religious teaching has never been more clear in its application to the business, the private habits, and the social life of men. Indeed, the question as to the preaching of our time is not pertinent, as touching the problem before us, since multitudes do not hear any preaching at all. The question is not "how to preach to the masses": the question is how to bring the masses to hear any preaching. The remedy, however, is not far to seek. It is summed up in two words, missionary work, — Christian labor, lay organization for a hand-to-hand fight with the evils that encompass the church of Christ. Here is a state of things with which the clergyman single-handed is powerless to cope. The local church, its pulpit, its Sunday school, its prayer meetings, its pastoral work, absorb his attention and consume his strength. The intellectual demands upon him are such, in a majority of cases, as to unfit him, even if it left him time for the kind of work which needs to be done for the reclamation of those who are either indifferent or hostile to religion. The problem, then, is, how to bring to this aggressive work the lay element of our churches; how to inspire with a sense of responsibility for souls that mass of inertia found in all our churches, the immense latent strength, the finest faculties lying dormant, — splendid talents wrapped in napkins.

3. We are brought, therefore, in the third place, to the practical question, "How to do it?"

In offering a few suggestions as to the methods to be used in bringing into active Christian service a larger proportion of the laity, I am aware that I can offer but suggestions only. The important thing is to arouse an interest in the subject, and to show that there is need of a greater activity in the church membership, — a need arising from their duty to themselves, and from their duty to their fellow-men; and then methods will arise and plans suggest themselves in accordance with local demands. The work, however, of awakening the church to a sense of its responsibility is first in order, and the duty of that work lies largely with the ministry.

The clergy may do something in this direction by preaching. They may point out the peril of a mere corporate responsibility, and emphasize the scriptural teaching concerning a responsibility that is personal and individual. The pulpit should also show that clerical responsibility does not alone meet the scriptural demand. The gospel makes its address to the individual conscience, and its promises are to individual fidelity. "We are not told that the church 'that converteth a sinner from the error of his ways,' but 'he that converts a sinner shall save a soul from death'; it is not said that the Christian assembly 'that goeth forth weeping' but 'he that goeth forth weeping bearing precious seed shall doubtless return again bearing his sheaves with him'; and the final plaudit will be not 'well done good and faithful' congregation of believers, but 'well done good and faithful servant.'"

The pulpit may call attention to the fact that only a very small percentage of the so-called body of Christ are really doing any Christian work, and that to absorb, or endure, as the case may be, two sermons every week, does not comprise the whole duty of believers, and is not by any means the chief end of man. The preacher may ask, "Where is the pertinency in our modern churches of the phrase 'suffering with Christ'?" How many enter, by sympathy and union with him, into his work for the salvation of the world? How are Christians to develop in Christian character, unless they exercise in active service the talents given them? How are they really to enjoy their contemplation of the growth of Christ's kingdom, or even the spiritual exercises of their own mind and heart, unless they are striving to do something for their Lord and Master? The secret of Christian strength, the secret of Christian enjoyment, lie in active service. It is those who abound in the work of the Lord who become strong men in him, "perfect and entire, wanting nothing." Work is the cure of doubt in religion as in all things else, and the antidote for scepticism is the beating heart of sympathy and the ready hand of labor seeking to ameliorate the condition of men, marked by evils the reality of which no amount of scepticism can deny. There is such a thing as impressing upon men by pulpit ministrations the love of souls, and a sense of obligation to put forth effort for their salvation. There is such a thing as teaching the church that a symmetrical Christian character embraces something more than mere abstinence from evil, and that it includes also a positive outgoing of charity that expends itself in doing good. Where would have been the results of early gospel preaching, of recent foreign missionary enterprise, of modern evangelism, and of philanthropic movements, had Paul and Judson and Whitfield and Moody and Garrison settled down upon the comforting conviction that good behavior and abstinence from evil doing are all that is required of us,— the selfish theory that holds that the chief business of a man is to save himself. The winter traveller in the Alps or on the western prairie saves his own life by his exertions to resuscitate his perishing comrade. So would the spiritual life of our churches be quickened by labor for others.

You have heard, perhaps, the story of the shipwreck, where the rescuers could find but a single survivor, and he nearly exhausted from exposure; and as they lifted him from the deck of the sinking ship into the lifeboat they saw his lips move, and bending down to catch his words, they heard him say, "There's another man." They made another search in the hold of the vessel, brought forth that "other man," and he, also, was saved. May we not implore the church of Christ to look out over society, to think upon the needs of the perishing thousands, and to remember that the safety of those within the fold is not all that should concern us, but that there are others also to be saved. "There's another man"; this is the secret of the heart of Jesus, of the journey of the shepherd over the mountains for his lost sheep; this is the meaning of Calvary; this is Gethsemane and the Cross, — "there's another man to be saved."

But, again, not only may something be done by preaching to arouse the spirit of lay labor, but may not something be done also, and with still greater hope of practical results, by the proper training of converts? When converts come into the church, the first lesson that should be impressed upon them is that they come to do something for the cause of Christ, as that cause is represented and supported by the particular church with which they are uniting. Too often all the emphasis is laid on a general confession of faith in Christ. Uniting with the church is more than this. It is a covenant with that particular local church, a promise as binding as those taken in joining a Masonic lodge, or any secret fraternity, that the new-comer will be faithful to this particular organization and help forward its work. In many of our churches there seems to be no such understanding; or, if there is, it is almost totally disregarded. Thousands of professing Christians do no more for the church to which they belong than their neighbors who make no profession of religion at all. They never attend a prayer meeting; they decline to do any work in the Sabbath school; from the moment they joined the church they never sacrificed their ease or enjoyment, never allowed any religious duty to interfere with their social engagements or their schemes for making money. The local church can never become an evangelistic force until new-comers, whether joining by letter or by profession, are made to feel that the promises which they make to be faithful to this particular organization with which they unite — promises to engage in its work, to contribute to its expenses, to attend its meetings, to observe its ordinances, to submit to its discipline, and seek to add to its membership by leading others to Christ — do have some meaning; that they mean as much as a promissory-note or a social agreement with one's neighbor. We should impress this lesson at the outset, explain in black and white what these promises mean; say that the promise, for instance, "not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together" does mean something more than coming to church Sunday mornings when the weather is pleasant, — do not non-professors do so much? We can teach that the church should be a mission, an evangelizing agent, not only to send money to the Sandwich Islands and Sioux Indians, but to be a missionary power in the community where the divine providence has been pleased to give it a place. Let us not shrink, either, with any old-time prejudices, from the public exhortations and prayers of the new convert, thinking that he must be seen and not heard, but encourage him rather in every good word and work. If he is silent and unemployed in the first year of his enlistment, he will be likely to remain so.

And this leads me to say, still further, that something may be done by organization. "I hope," said the deacon of a church which had just called a pastor, — "I hope our new pastor will give us something to do." And doubtless one great imperfection in us as ministers is, that we try to do too much work ourselves, allow ourselves to become anxious over unperformed labor that should be done by others, when the source of our trouble lies in our lack of generalship. We do not know how to pick our men and lay out the work. Having by our preaching inspired our laymen with a desire to do something, we leave that desire to ooze out in vague repining over duties undischarged and the dissatisfaction of earnest minds and hearts unemployed, because we lack the disposition or the courage or the ability to marshal our forces and direct our troops. The question of the moral needs of New England resolves itself at last into the needs of your parish and mine; and the needs of cities, of villages, of country parishes, must be met by making real the theory, that in the final analysis of the problem, the evangelizing force is the local church, and that the local church is the laity under the leadership of the pastor.

And is the local church such a force? You will see, sometimes, a church struck with a kind of spiritual blight; crippled by the paralysis of a merely negative Christianity; doing no great harm, perhaps, except as all mere negatives which ought to be positives do harm by misrepresentation; not actually committing evil, but with no missionary spirit: bearing the palm of superiority, perhaps, in social life, and overawing, by wealth and numbers, a community which it cannot and would not convert; the choral harmonies of its Sunday worship, the majestic tones of its organ melodies sounding out to the godless poor like the muffled thunder of breakers rolling in on a distant shore, — as distant and as cold; proud of their preacher, proud of their wealth, proud of their social position and their social power, having plenty of money unconsecrated, mental gifts unused, talents which ought to be employed for God lying idle, the most splendid material for Christian working force, gathering rust and going to absolute waste. Then again you may see here and there churches which admirably illustrate our theory. An experiment was lately tried in a neighboring city. The work of the church was divided into twelve departments, and when a person presented himself for church membership he was asked, "Which department of labor would you like? You must serve in one of them." I understand that the plan was a success, and that while it was in operation the influence of that church was felt far and wide as that of a true servant of Christ.

The pastor of such a church does not attempt to be personally in all places in his parish at once, nor to do all the missionary work with his own hands; but by inspiring others, and by directing the labors of others, he multiplies himself a hundred-fold, and is everywhere at once. His church is a mission. His members are workers. Not only by the ordinary committees, but by direct organization of the lay element for missionary labor in the distribution of religious reading, by the holding of district and neighborhood prayer meetings, by inviting one's non-church-going neighbors to the house of God, by a spirit of kindness instead of a spirit of social exclusion, a church may be a true evangelist to the community. We do not need more preachers or more eloquent preaching; we need better generalship to organize and train the laymen in the churches for Christian work. Every year the proportion of educated men in our church membership increases. In all our churches the very best talent lies idle. In all our churches there are able minds who give no thought to the service which Christ loves to see, and earnest hearts who would love to do something, but know not what nor how. We need, therefore, a ministry that does not expend its whole force on elaborate sermons for the entertainment of congregations, on intellectual splitting of metaphysical hairs, on combats with modern science, or the resolving of its own religious doubts as a specimen of its own intellectual acumen, but a ministry that can see that what society needs is a simpler presentation of gospel truth, backed up and enforced by the earnest labors of its laymen, for the help of the thousands who are walking in evil ways.

On the other hand, let not the laity make this lack of generalship their excuse for idleness. Let them not say to the minister, as did a layman once upon a time, — a plea of excuse which was false to fact and false to Christ, — "your business is to save souls: my business is to make money." The fact is, we, the ministers, do what we are hired to do, — write sermons and deliver them. If we do more or differently, we do so at the risk of being called innovators. In many cases the best general would find it hard work to win a victory, since he would have only undisciplined troops, men who have not only not been trained to labor for Christ, but are indisposed to do so. We hear much about the demand for preachers who can "draw," — fishing captains, who are expected to do all the fishing, — while the lay members stand still and wait to see the salvation of the Lord. We want "drawing" pews as well as "drawing" pulpits. We want something in the pews that differs from that spirit exhibited in one of our churches, where two families occupied pews ten years side by side, and though members of the same church, never spoke to each other, and when asked the reason why, answered that they "had not been introduced." Do you think such people would be likely to go out after sinners? Not unless they had been "introduced" You say you cannot talk to people concerning religion. Possibly not. Can't you invite them to Sabbath service? I heard yesterday of a man in a neighboring town who took twelve godless men, who were his employés, into a prayer meeting with him. Suppose every Christian in New England should persuade one person to attend church who was not accustomed to attend before, what a revolution would take place in our New England Sunday!

I make a plea for increased activity of laymen on another ground. There is much of this kind of work that laymen can do better than clergymen. Non-church-going people are shy of ministers, but every layman knows some friends and acquaintances with whom he would have more influence than his pastor can possibly exert.

The moral condition of our hill towns also calls for lay labor. A few days ago it was my fortune to witness the preliminary examination before a justice of a man who is charged with the murder of his friend and the seduction of his friend's wife. The appearance of that company of witnesses, the disgusting facts brought to light in a community only six or eight miles from Amherst College, the suggestions of evil things not fairly brought to light, but easily inferred by any thoughtful mind, all went to show a state of things not far removed from heathenism. I believe these fields are ripe for organized labor, for the distribution of religious reading, for the holding of meetings, for the work of permanent colporteurage; yes, if you please, for the bringing in of social amusements that shall have a healthier moral tone than those now in vogue; that shall bring into the lonely life of these back districts something that shall break the monotony of existence and fill with better thoughts the intellectual vacancy and the mental inertia which are so often the seed-bed of vice. Lectures, concerts, debating societies, reading clubs, to say nothing of religious agencies, would be far better than to leave these regions under the rule of vulgar gossip, the perusal of the Police Gazette, and the stupid inanity of winter dances, where vice seems to be the ruling motive, whiskey the chief inspiration, and an occasional quarrel with the knife and pistol the welcome excitement. The solution of this problem does not lie in the preaching of the churches, but in the civilizing, Christianizing agencies which carry the church to the unchurched, and the gospel to those who have it not. If they will not come to us, we must go to them. The command concerning evangelization is not "Draw"; it is "Go." And the solution of the problem which stares the churches in the face is in lay labor rightly organized, wisely and prudently carried forward, which shall carry not only the words of Christ's gospel to the perishing, but hearts and hands which have been themselves warmed and vitalized by the gospel, — the living epistles of the gospel, — the fruits of it brought into the hearts and homes of the godless poor, living illustrations of what the gospel is and what the gospel can do; and so, being filled with the very spirit of Jesus Christ, carrying the melting power of love and all the persuasive influences of the Cross, such effort shall be armed for victory with the power of Almighty God.

The church must go down where people live. It must be like its Master and not be ashamed to sit with publicans and sinners. They are our brethren. Christ is not ashamed to call us brethren, imperfect as we are.

This is the picture I see. Here is a telegraph wire from Boston to San Francisco. A message of love waits to be sent, but connection is lacking on the table under the hand of the operator. A finger presses a knob, the connection is made, and the message darts along the wire with the speed of light, carrying joy to those who are afar. So over our heads hangs a cloud of mercy, underneath is a world lying in wickedness; up there the message of God's love and grace, down here souls that need the knowledge of that love: what is wanting is a medium for its transmission, a converted heart filled with love for men in all their spiritual needs, mistakes, disappointments, and sins, a heart that will carry to them the message of God's grace, a connecting link between the divine salvation there and the human need here. When there is such a heart filled with Christ's purpose of love, when that heart takes up its work, when the channel for the inflowing of God's power is opened, regenerating grace comes as on the wings of light to the perishing, the very wisdom of God and the power of God unto salvation.

I am aware, brethren, that I have treated this topic almost wholly from a single standpoint,—that of the duty of home evangelization. I am not unmindful, however, of the faithfulness and usefulness of the laity in many directions. Their contributions to Christian literature; their liberality in giving for the support of the gospel at home and abroad; the great services of our learned laymen, to whom the clergy as well as the church at large are indebted for their defence of the faith as against the materialistic tendency of some of the scientific men; their Christian nurture of their children: these are topics upon which we might enlarge and find ground for praise and thankfulness. But in the direction of the matter under discussion,—direct Christian labor for unconverted men,—I leave it to you, whether it has not become a serious question with us, this need of a better organization of the laity for evangelization. Is it not the need of our time? And do not the means and methods of bringing to pass such organization devolve largely upon the ministry?

In such a work we may be inspired by the records of the past, which show us what in every age of the church laymen have done and can do. The Gospel of Luke was given us by a layman; Origen, though afterwards ordained, made his name and fame in the defence of the faith as a layman; Jacob Behman was a layman; William Law, who was the means of rousing the mind and heart of Wesley and of the conversion of Dr. Johnson, did the greater part of his work as a layman; Count Zinzendorf founded his Moravian society while still a layman; Robert Raikes was a layman; Mr. Oncken's movement in Germany, resulting in thousands of conversions and in scores of churches, was originally an organization of seven laymen in a shoemaker's shop of Hamburg; the method of missionary work at Aintab follows on Sunday mornings the Scripture lay method of sending out the church two and two to preach the gospel; the Burman Baptist churches have been built up, many of them, by zayat preaching, a conversational method of teaching one, two, or three at a time; Richard Baxter was converted through the agency of a layman, and his own preaching multiplied its power an hundred-fold by the labors of his converts, who at once engaged in house-to-house visitations; Uncle John Vassar was a layman; Harlem Page and Dwight S. Moody and John B. Gough, Madame Guyon and Mary Lyon, Dorcas and Mary and Phebe and Priscilla, fellow-helpers of the apostles in the gospel, the numberless heroines, also, of modern times, whose names have thrown a romantic charm about our foreign-missionary work, and whose lives and labors have multiplied its victories and success, — all these great names must be counted with the lay element of the church. And here, under our own eyes, at our very doors, under the roofs of our churches, without formal aid from the church as such, and without the official help of the clergy as such, there has silently but quickly sprung up a great organization for practical Christian work, — the Women's Christian Temperance Union. "Armed by faith and winged by prayer," with a definite purpose and an unquenchable zeal, this union of Christian women, with its roots and branches extending over all the face of the land, is doing a work beyond all estimate for the reclamation of the drunkard, the reform of the drinking habits of society, and the purification of the home. And shall we say that the local church, with all its ability and wealth and missionary spirit, cannot be effectually organized as an evangelizing force in a hill town, a destitute city district, or a village parish?

Once upon a time, when Alexander had fought a great battle and won a great victory, he caused to be inscribed upon the spoils taken from the enemy, "Alexander, son of Philip, with the Greeks, gained these spoils from the barbarians who inhabit Asia."

So must it be with us. The true revival of faith will bring a revival of Christian activity in the ranks of the laity, and on the trophies of evangelistic labor will be inscribed, "The pastor, and his fellow-helpers, were the means, under the guidance of the Spirit, of winning these souls to Christ."

OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

BY REV. GEO. M. BOYNTON, JAMAICA PLAIN.

At the last annual meeting of this Association, it was voted, "That the Association ask of the churches a report of Sunday-school facts full enough to preclude any further reasonable demand." A special committee was appointed to draw up a schedule for such report, which fulfilled its duties with commendable thoroughness, sending to the churches, through the Conferences, a circular containing twelve statistical questions, and thirty-four questions under eleven heads, on methods of organization and work.

If all the churches had answered all these questions on a common basis, a report might perhaps have been received "full enough to preclude any further reasonable demand." As it is, with reports of any kind from but three fifths of the five hundred and twenty-seven churches in the State, — some of these given numerically, some proportionally, some omitting one part and some another, some answering forty-six questions, and some answering only one, — it is only proven that "any further demand," even if "reasonable," would be unavailing.

I have been asked by your Provisional Committee, on the basis of these reports, to prepare a paper on the "Sunday-School Work in the State." So far as this is a report, it evidently cannot be statistical. Too many counties are not yet heard from for the vote to be finally summed up, and I have not consented to assume the functions of a returning board. I can only report, as from an informal showing of hands, upon the questions presented, and tell you where only a few straws show which way the wind blows, or where the trees and timbers, sweeping on resistless floods toward the sea, show that the freshets have come.

Mainly, however, my paper will necessarily consist of deductions, wise or otherwise, from the drifts thus discerned, recognitions of the excellences and defects of present methods, and suggestions as to the more excellent way. I may thus, at any rate, bring before you for your discussion the things which need first consideration, and then either strengthening or readjustment.

These points may perhaps best be grouped, reversing somewhat the order of the schedule, by considering —

FIRST. The grand aim of the Sunday school; and then, in subordination to this, —

SECONDLY. The most important matters to be regarded in its organization; and —

THIRDLY. The best plans to be adopted in its instruction.

I. THE GRAND AIM. — "What do you aim chiefly to accomplish?" the schedule asks; "to increase the attendance and interest? to instruct? to secure conversion?" The answers given are various in form, some emphasizing this and others that special point, but generally recognizing the fact that all these objects are rightly to be sought. In fact they follow each other in logical succession. Attendance is necessary to interest, interest to instruction, and instruction to conversion. And yet there is a vagueness in some of the replies which probably indicates a vagueness in the thought.

We cannot emphasize too much the need of an exact and sufficient purpose in this as in other departments of Christian effort. It has wonderful effect on the score, whether you aim at the exact centre of the target, or only try to shoot somewhere in its neighborhood.

The Sunday school has a definite and distinct function. Otherwise, it has no right to be. It must fill a place, its own place, a needed place in the circle of our Christian agencies. What is it? It is not a preaching service; exhortation is not its main function. It is not a prayer meeting; devotion is not its chief duty. It is a SCHOOL; instruction is its special work. To teach and to learn: these are the things for the sake of which it gathers week by week. That it is a Sunday school indicates that its study and its teaching are such as are consistent with a holy day; that it is at least connected with the church, denotes that it has a relation to Christianity; and that the name Bible school is suggested, and occasionally adopted, shows that its text-book, the main object of its investigation and the source of its life, is the word of God.

Its object, of course, is not mainly to increase attendance and interest, that might be done by prize gifts and secular entertainments. Such inducements are sometimes offered, but they are of small value or efficiency. Rather, they belittle the whole work. The best way to build up a school, even in attendance and interest, is for it to do its work most thoroughly.

To secure conversion is not its main and immediate end. In common with all other Christian influences, it will seek this as its ultimate attainment, and with home and church, with parent and pastor, will help in this direction.

But as a school, its distinctive work must be to impart a thorough knowledge of the word of God as the foundation of Christian faith and life. It is in this that it differs from the general services of the Lord's house, which must have reference to the wants of all classes, and to immediate results. It differs from the prayer meeting, which has reference to Christian experience and wants and fellowship. It is a school; the Bible is its text-book; instruction by question and answer is its method; laying the foundations of an intelligent and steadfast Christian faith, and for faithful Christian living, is its special work.

I should be sorry to be understood as saying that the Sunday school should aim at less than conversion. On the contrary, I hold that it should aim at more than mere conversion. Many of the children, the little children even, who come from Christian homes and nurture, are the Lord's own little ones. They trust him already, and are trying to please him day by day. Repeated exhortations to repentance will only confuse them. What they need is to be taught to recognize their own Christian life, and to be established in the faith.

And for the others to aim at conversion is not enough. The means for that may be found in the revival meeting, or better, in the well-timed word of private counsel or exhortation, which God's blessing may make the turning-point of a life. To make Christians of its scholars is not enough. The aim of the Sunday school should be to make them the best kind of Christians, — most strong and steadfast, and best equipped for the march and the conflict. Here is the place for the church to train her young pilgrims and soldiers; to gird their loins with the truth; to furnish them the shield of faith wherewith to quench — not simply turn aside, but quench — the fiery darts of doubt and denial which are flying thick and fast through the air on every side; and above all, to put into their hands and teach them how to use “the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God.”

We often hear lamentation over the fact that the Christian life of our day, while in its best developments it may be more active and aggressive, is less established in the truth, less confident in its convictions, less able either to define or to defend its ground, than was the faith of the fathers; that while it may be more facile and perhaps more agile, it is neither so sturdy nor so strong.

We have occasion to lament too often that those who come early into the Christian life do not mature in it, but remain in childish weakness forever babes in Christ, with puerile delights in the enjoyments of the new life, and equally puerile glooms over its disappointments, but not growing into Christian manhood of purpose and efficiency. Or still more, we mourn over those who early fall away from the beginnings of the new life, and lapse into indifference or opposition.

Is the reason for it in some deficiency of Christian education? Is it to be accounted for by any imperfection in the ways and works of that arm of the church which now has undertaken to do what other agencies within it used in some measure to accomplish? Is it that it does not set before itself a purpose distinct enough and clear enough to make it reasonably efficient in these ways? For we need sturdy Christians now — we shall need them in the next generation — who not only have a hope, but are “ready always to give answer to every man that asketh a reason concerning the hope that is in them,” and who will “continue in the faith grounded and steadfast, and not moved away from the hope of the gospel.”

It is not as a substitute for conversion or in contrast with it, but as our best means of securing with God's blessing the most thorough and lasting conversion, that I claim that the highest honor which can be put upon the Sunday school is, as its work is recognized to be, to impart a thorough knowledge of the word of God as the foundation of Christian faith and life.

Granting this much, our next question is as to —

II. THE ORGANIZATION OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL. — The frame is not the picture; but it holds it, it protects it, it sets it off. The more valuable your picture, the more important that it be fitly mounted. The railroad track is neither engine, steam, nor train. It accomplishes none of the grand results; but it is the condition of them all. Without it your rolling stock does not roll, and your propelling stock cannot propel. The questions of organization are questions as to the best external conditions of success.

As to all the lesser arrangements of departments, and detailed management, it is impossible to give advice. There are certain sanitary principles which should be carefully regarded in both your house and mine; but I cannot tell from mine how many rooms you need in yours. I know what hours are convenient for the twenty-one meals a week in mine; I cannot therefore determine when you ought to eat your dinner.

Our Sunday schools are divided into departments, apparently according to their size and the possibilities of place. The larger schools have three departments; the smaller, two; the smallest, one. In most cases, unless there is a very large primary department, the opening or closing exercises, or both, are in common, the opening exercises averaging from twelve to fifteen minutes, though a few are as brief as five. One school begins without opening at all; and one continues the process of opening for three quarters of an hour. It must open very hard. In one, the opening exercise is reported as prayer, and as continuing for fifteen minutes,—a continuance in prayer which we are disposed to deprecate.

A few report that the children are "trained to join in these exercises, and to take the natural postures of worship"; and a few report that they are not. Probably the best training, that of a careful example, the teacher's reverent attention and participation, is not counted a thing to be reported. Doubtless that is the more general method, and is in the main effective.

A few report weekly, others monthly, others still occasional prayer meetings of the teachers or of the school, before or after the school session. Others, that the church holds special meetings of prayer for the Sunday school at regular or irregular intervals, or that the lesson considered in the church prayer meeting week by week leads to a constant remembrance of the school therein. In others, teachers' meetings are held, not for study, but for conference over the spiritual interests of the school and for prayer.

Passing by these matters of arrangement, which must be determined mainly by their expediency and local adaptation, we come to another topic which involves a principle which, if the principle be rightly stated, is of univ.ersal application. I refer to the relation of the Sunday school to the church. That this should be one of the completest unity in form and fact seems hardly to admit a doubt. That it is not complete is one of the weak places in the Sunday-school work in our churches and in our State.

While it is impossible to see any reasonable ground for separation between the church and the Sunday school (we might as well expect to hear of a divorce between the church and the prayer meeting), we may be able historically to find its origin. The Sunday school is a modern invention; and yet it is so only in form. Its essential elements are found in the church of every age, though they exist in varying proportions and conspicuousness. These elements are the study of God's word by question and answer, and especially for the instruction of the young. Joshua, in the newly entered Canaan, taught "all that Moses commanded before all the congregation of Israel, with the women and the little ones." Ezra and the Levites, in the restored Jerusalem, "read in the book in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused the people to understand the reading." Jesus was at twelve years of age in the temple with the doctors, or teachers, "hearing" what they taught and "asking them questions." The early church had its classes of catechumens, and the later church its classes of catechists. Our great-grandfathers in the ministry gathered our youthful grandfathers in the laity to hear them say their catechism and their proof-texts. They gave them training in doctrine and in duty and in the knowledge of God's word.

This is all both old and scriptural. What has been new and unscriptural in our modern practice has been the separation between the two; has been the consideration of the Sunday school, either in its organization or its work, as outside the church; has been the withholding of so large a part of the church from it. And yet it is not altogether a mystery how it came to be so. The work of instructing the young came for a time into neglect. A generation arose which spent its strength in arguing the philosophy of doctrine rather than in declaring religious truth. A pulpit which was forever discussing points of theology and controverting heresy, of necessity went further and further from the children and the youth. These were the battles of the giants, and the nurture of the children was neglected. The leaders of the church were fully occupied in manning its batteries against error, and its children were growing up in the dark.

Some parents and some friends of theirs began to realize the neglect. A Sunday meeting for the instruction of the children of the church was proposed. It was a novelty. The proposal met with opposition. The two great services of the day could not be displaced. Predestination and divine sovereignty must have their full consideration week by week. The Sunday school, not welcomed, only tolerated, must take up with what vacant place it could find. The noontime hour for rest and neighborly gossip was given up to it by the few enthusiastic ones. The church opposed, or was indifferent; the minister let it alone. It had sometimes to fight for life at all; and nothing begets antagonism like antagonism, and nothing is more easily inherited than an antipathy.

Years of habit made the separation seem to be natural, which was in the beginning only incidental, and which should, at the worst, only have been temporary. So the church forced the Sunday school to be independent, and the Sunday school came to put a sort of value on what at first it did not want.

But now the church, with rarest exceptions, is soundly converted to the Sunday-school idea, — that some service for the social study of God's word on the Lord's day is of importance, and that the children especially need one exercise which shall be altogether adapted to their capacity and needs. And the Sunday school, like a loyal child, comes back, whenever the church will have it so, to its allegiance. It comes back laden with all that it has acquired, rich in experience, and richer still in hope; only after the long period of separate maintenance, it does not at once find, nor is it given immediately, its normal place in the family circle.

This is made evident by the fact that only about one third of the schools which have been heard from, that is, about one fifth of the Congregational Sunday schools in the State, report any organic relation as existing between them and the churches with which they are connected, much less any organic unity with them. A large majority are entirely independent of the church as to their organization. Some of them use this word, "independent"; others say "there is no relation"; others say, "only through members of the church who are in the school"; others indicate a real relationship, but one which has no formal and distinct recognition, and which exists only by mutual consent and during the pleasure of both parties; and yet there can be no doubt that the movement and the tendency are in the right direction.

The fact is, that in reality the church and Sunday school are one; and instead of asking the relation which exists between them, we should ask in what ways is their unity expressed.

I claim that the formal expression of this oneness is of great importance. Body is as needful as soul to this stage of our existence. Disembodied spirits have never as yet had much influence in the affairs of this life. There are four points in the organization and maintenance of the Sunday school by which this unity may be most completely set forth.

First. In the electing power, the church should elect the officers of its school. I should say appoint, if it were not its own school or a part of itself. As it is, I say elect. And this should apply especially to the superintendent, who should be the church's superintendent of its school, — on whose ideal of the work, and on whose efficiency in it, more depends than on anything beside.

It is fully granted that those who are actively engaged in the work of the Sunday school should be especially consulted and have great influence in this selection of a leader. It is very easy for the church to make the teachers of the Sunday school its committee of nomination. That gives those nearest in interest the privilege of advice, but it keeps where it ought to be, within the church, the power of election. That makes the school dependent on the church for its existence and organization. That insures its being in sympathy with the church in its work. That recognizes it as it is, not as the head or the heart of the church, but as its right arm.

In a large number of our schools it is put to vote, by a show of hands, as to who shall hold this office, next in importance to that of pastor of the church. Somebody nominates (the most ready to speak, not always the most wise to counsel), everybody votes, — teachers, scholars, infants, church members, profane young men and giddy maidens, all together, and out of such an appointment that part of the church, whose object is savingly to teach God's word, has its leader who is to shape its policy and work. That is a monstrosity of organization. I would as soon put the appointment of the master of a day school to the vote of the boys, or ask the passengers of a ship in cabin and in steerage to choose a captain for it by a show of hands. A

Second way in which this unity may be both manifested and maintained is, as the Sunday school reports to the church, through its superintendent thus elected, its condition and its work. In the annual review of the work of the church this should be held an important part. An officer elected by the church should be responsible to it and should render to it an account of his stewardship. This is his recognition of the source of his commission; this is, through him, the school's acknowledgment of the fact that it is only a part of the church. As a

Third important point in the formal expression of this unity, I claim that the superintendent (for the oneness must largely be represented through him) should be constituted by his election to this office a member of the church committee. Thus he is recognized as not merely an officer of the Sunday school, but as an officer of the church. Thus he is brought into all the counsels of the pastor and those who, with him, pray and consult together in regard to all the departments of the connected work. Then he can ask advice in regard to his branch of it and give advice in regard to its other parts. Then there can be no possible collision, because all the plans are open to all and can be easily adjusted from the start.

Fourth. One other token of this unity I hold to be essential to its completeness, and it is one which is, except possibly that just named, least often realized of all. The church should wholly support the school, and should provide for its expenses from its common treasury. Only a very few churches report this as one of the bonds of connection. And yet the Sunday school can never be given its full place in the estimation of the church until it is held to be worthy of pecuniary support. Nor do I see how any church can claim the right of controlling the school unless it acknowledges the corresponding duty of supporting it.

I doubt whether the significance of a common treasury has been fully estimated. Among the marks of unity in the nation are its common possessions, its common income, and its common debt. Our United States bonds are bonds of union. A firm of two or more partners has its one bank account. When you cannot deposit or draw funds in the name of the firm, the partnership is dissolved. One of the most marked distinctions between a home and a boarding-house is that in the one there is a common purse (even though it be an empty one), and in the other there are many. We should not have a very good name as parents if we were to provide a table only for ourselves, and send our children out to beg their food. Rather we declare that their hunger is our own, and share with them our much or little.

I know it may be said that there are but few churches which can add an appropriation for the Sunday school to the budget of their annual expense. I answer, let the churches which can, do it at once; and then cultivate among their children the grace of liberality, and teach them early a missionary spirit, as they learn to give to those needier than they. And where the church treasury even is far from full, and the pennies of the children must be kept at home, let them contribute through the Sunday school to the church; and then let the church in turn pay the bills of the Sunday school. So you have a double bond. So parents who are poor send their children out to earn money for them, and then spend it for the children's bread.

Where the formal unity is thus maintained, the vital unity will at least not be disembodied, but will be encouraged and stimulated. Then we shall be likely to find the church praying for the Sunday school, planning for it, providing workers for it; better than all in it, the church not only gathering to listen to, but to study and to teach God's word.

Then you will find the Sunday school not excusing the children from, but encouraging them to attend the public services of the church. Then you will find the church not interpreting the Master's bidding as though it were, "Feed my giraffes," but remembering that it was "Feed my lambs." Then you will find church builders not so ambitious to raise their steeples high (are they to hang the feed baskets on for loftiest minds?), but rather aiming to provide commodious places for the Sunday school and the social study of the Word, not forgetting the low racks for the little lambs. Then you will find pastors remembering that it is more possible for the long necks to reach down than for the short necks to reach up. And then, on the other hand, in the realization of this formal and vital unity, you will find in the Sunday school provision for the sheep as well as for the lambs; food for babes not only, but strong meat for strong men; and the followers of the Crucified doing as the Master did "about all Galilee, both teaching in their synagogues and preaching the gospel of the kingdom."

So far as indicated by the reports, the pastors are, for the most part, in the schools, as far as the arrangements and their other duties permit. Probably this is not true in all cases. A large majority of those who say anything about it report the pastor as generally present at the sessions of the Sunday school. In more than one third of these cases he has a Bible class. In a smaller number he sums up the lesson regularly or frequently. In a number he is the superintendent or assistant superintendent of the school, or president of the Sunday-school society. General oversight is generally granted "so far as desired by him." A few say "No," to this particular. One, "Not above the superintendent." Another, "He never interferes."

The true relation evidently is, if he is pastor of the church, and the school is part of the church, that he should be pastor of that too. A pastor does not run a church or rule it,—at least not in a Congregational church. He is not the rector or director; but he has influence, and he ought to have more than any other member of the church, or he ought not to be put in a position of responsible leadership. He is called to be the pastor and the teacher (so our calls still read), and in this teaching function of the church he ought to be qualified, and if qualified authorized, not to dictate, but to advise, and that without any suspicion of interference. Nothing but the absolute impossibility of doing it can discharge a pastor from the responsibility for the general oversight of the teaching and the spiritual interests of the school; and as a preacher, he may often find a five-minute sermon on the lesson for the application of it, the instruction having been already given, to be his most effective preaching.

III. THE WORK OF INSTRUCTION.—Keeping in view the aim of the Sunday school, as it has been stated, "to impart a thorough knowledge of the word of God as the foundation of Christian faith and life," our last question is, How can this instruction be best given, and upon what plan? What are the advantages, and what, if any, are the imperfections of our present methods?

Perhaps the best basis for a brief discussion of these topics will be furnished by a summary of the drifts as appearing in the reports received.

As to preparation, about one third of the schools reporting have a teachers' meeting, weekly, for the study of the lesson. In others, the pastor has a Bible class during the week, and in a few cities union meetings are held, under the auspices of Christian associations or Sunday-school unions, for the same purpose. Many schools furnish the teachers with papers or lesson helps, which, to a considerable extent, seem to have taken the place of and lessened the demand for the old-time teachers' meeting.

As to doctrinal teaching, only a very few, perhaps a dozen, report a church creed as regularly taught, and about as many the Westminster or the Child's Scripture Catechism; a few others "mean to do it"; while the remainder simply say that they do not, or, by not saying the contrary, imply it; about forty want a new catechism, and about forty do not, — in both cases, probably, representing individual feeling rather than a general demand. If general, it is so very general that it has not taken the trouble to voice itself.

Scripture is memorized "some," "not much," "very little"; a few answer boldly, "Yes."

About thirty schools report temperance organizations. In the greater number, this grace is taught in quarterly or occasional lessons, in concert exercises and addresses, by papers and library books, and in a few by pledges. One school does nothing because, it says, "we are all sober," and others do all that they can, because that is still true of them.

Under this head, in my judgment, comes the matter of benevolent contributions. About one hundred schools report that they give part of what they raise; about fifty give nothing; only five give all, as they only can who are supported by the mother church.

Nearly all have concerts monthly, bimonthly, quarterly, occasional, and semi-occasional. The tendency is apparently away from the theatrical and exhibitional to the scriptural, topical, and practical. They are thought to be of service in various ways. A very few report them as used for review of lessons, and to enforce the truths taught during the quarter.

No question was asked as to the system of lessons used. Some of the Conferences volunteer the report that all their schools use the International Lessons, and the indications are that they are wellnigh universally adopted. And yet, all these matters of teaching Scripture, doctrine, and duty range themselves around this omitted question, What system of lessons and instruction do you use? For it depends largely upon this as to what kind of teaching is to be given about the word of God itself, and as to what place is to be found for regular and systematic instruction in Christian doctrine and morality; and this will modify both the preparation for teaching and such occasional gatherings as may be held apart from the regular sessions of the school.

Let us see how far we have come in the direction of the best plan, and what progress there is yet to be made. There can be no possible question but that the Sunday school has been making progress. There is certainly a great stride from the days when Robert Raikes gathered a few street boys together on Sunday to teach them their letters; but Robert Raikes was not in the line of the work of which we are speaking at all. Our theme is the church school, for the education in Christian truth of the children of our congregations and communities. That began with the simple study of the Bible, and with the commitment to memory of the verses which were to constitute the lesson. There were two elements involved at the start which never should have been withdrawn. God's word hid in the memory is very apt to find its way into the heart. Pity it is that so often this storehouse of memory should stand with open doors for the chaff and the dirt to blow through, and should not rather be filled with the finest of the wheat. And the study of the Word, Bible in hand, is worth far more than the same study, lesson-paper in hand. I wish, with all my heart, whatever machinery we have for aid in preparation, that it might all be banished from sight in the gathering of the Sunday school. A familiarity with the Book, and with the books which it contains and with their places in it, is a familiarity which does not breed contempt, but promotes a reverent understanding. Our lesson helps ought never to print the text; that would compel the use of the Book.

In those early days there was no general plan of study even in the individual school. Every man did that which was right in his own eyes, and there was no king in the Sunday-school Israel. Nor were there special helps: Henry and Scott and Doddridge were the teachers' guides. Then came the first step towards uniformity, — the question book; the lessons printed, which was no help; questions and questions, which were; big type and little type, which were a matter of taste. It was a plan mechanically quite as good as those leaves which, if for the healing of the nations, are yet easily scattered to the winds of heaven or earth, or those products of our publishing houses which bear twelve fruits (I omit the italics), "yielding its fruit every month."

The trouble with the question-book and the lesson-paper is not one of mechanical construction, but of mechanical use. It is one thing to use a gate to swing on, and quite another to go through it into the Lord's garden. Nor is it any advantage, but only an incumbrance, to carry the gate with you into the garden, or the question-book into the class.

The question-book brought in the days of teachers' meetings for study, the book only analyzed; the teachers' meetings brought a comparison of views and the synthesis of the lesson. The human book of questions and the divine book of answers were all. This was a great step toward the intelligent study and teaching of the Scriptures. It characterized the days before the unifying influence of the great revivals had been felt through our churches of every name.

Then came the plan for a great union system of lessons to be used in all parts of the Protestant world; a plan which the International Committee perfected, issuing their result in 1872. A seven years' course was laid out, and adopted by a very large and increasing number of our American Sunday schools (beyond them we need not look) from 1873 to 1879. With the beginning of last year commenced a second septenniad, which will be completed in December, 1886.

Let us give full credit to the advance in Sunday-school work and in Bible study to which this system has led. It has called attention to the work and to the study, and has excited wider interest and more general participation in them than had ever been known before. The sentiment of unity has inspired many to join a pursuit in which so many were engaged. The uniformity of lessons has given opportunity for more general conference and comparison of methods than would have been possible under another system. The concentration of light upon particular parts of Scripture has facilitated their right understanding by the many. And study leads to study; and interest awakened in regard to a part leads to greater interest in the whole. Then, too, the study has not been confined to a few books, and those the ones already best known. The selections have been made from the whole Bible, and to some extent, especially where liberally supplemented by superintendents and pastors, has led to a better knowledge of the Book. And yet granting all this, and it is much to grant, I say it confidently, brethren, the end is not reached yet. There is great advance still possible. There is much land yet to be possessed.

The present method, while it spurs to study, and scatters it over the whole Bible, is yet utterly unscientific, and it is not adapted to lead to "a thorough knowledge of the word of God." Its method is not that by which any other study is successfully pursued. It lacks entirely the element of progressive advancement, except as it advances through or over the pages of the two Testaments.

We need, in the study of that library of divine truth which we call the Bible, something of the method which, in the study of all other branches of learning, is found to be indispensable to real progress. We need a graded system of progressive instruction in the Sunday school as much as we need it in the day school. Our Sunday-school work has progressed; but it has come only about as far as the district school of the country towns; and it has the added disadvantage of a uniform lesson, the temporary value of which has been already acknowledged, but which continued too long in its present form can only be a hindrance. What would you say of the school board of this city, or of any town or village in the State, if they should issue an order that to-day all the schools and classes under their care should study the geography of Florida; in arithmetic, the Rule of Three; and a certain story in the readers; and that day by day there should be an identical bill of fare for all attendants? Would it be considered a great advance if the whole city, State, country, civilized and uncivilized world, if you please, should be studying the same lesson at the same hour?

On the other hand, all wisdom says, Grade your schools. There are certain elementary truths in all departments of learning which it is possible and important for the youngest children to learn. Beyond these you cannot drive or draw them. Later, you cannot keep them to these; they will have passed beyond them.

Since these last paragraphs were written, Dr. J. H. Vincent has said in the Congregationalist, "The Sunday school should be graded, and the lines drawn as sharply between the primary and the senior as in connection with our public systems." He adds valuable suggestions in the way of carrying out such a plan. I am glad that so strong and wise a Sunday-school man is at work on this problem. I believe it is going to be solved.

Such a system alone can be adapted to the varying ages and capacities of learners. It alone gives, not a spurt of sentiment, but the spur of steady progress. Nothing wearies like plodding round and round in a treadmill of steps or study with no advancement. Nothing keeps up interest like yearly advancement and change in the kind of study and of teaching, and often of teachers. Our boys tire of the Sunday school, and want to get away from it at sixteen because (apart from or in addition to all we may say of the carnality of the human heart) they are doing there substantially just what they did at six. A few verses of Scripture are read, — it does not make much difference whether it is from Job or John, — a brief explanation of the hard words and thoughts is given, and the practical lessons, which they have heard over and over again, are enforced. The boy's and the young man's desire for an advancing course, both for its outward dignity and its mental progress, ought to be met. A boy of sixteen is not ashamed to be in the high school; he would be to be in the primary or grammar school; and he is more interested in his geometry or his Greek than he was in his geography and his speller at ten. Bible study can be made more interesting than geometry and Greek, and for as many years. The best way to attract scholars to a school is to have the best work done in it. The biggest kind of a bell, rung over an empty table, will soon cease to attract boarders.

What shall we do, then? Something like this: Give the little children the Bible stories, and their simplest teachings. They want pictures; the Bible is full of them for the ear and for the eye. Biography comes next. The story of a life. There are no grander ones than the heroes of the Old Testament and of the New. There is none in all literature which equals the life of Jesus; and they should be taught as lives, progressive, unfolding in relations and in character and in influence, and may be made as real and as interesting as the lives of Washington or Franklin. Then comes the history. The story of a nation; the history of Israel, and the history of the Christian church.

Somewhere, perhaps it should be here, should be a study of the Bible itself, — its history, its structure, its parts, its progress; the distinctive features of its various books, and the reason for the place they occupy, — a most important and neglected branch of study which alone can furnish the foundation for a true knowledge of its meaning and the value of its parts.

Then comes a course on Christian morals, which all that has gone before has amply illustrated. Only now it may come in systematic form. We are pleading for a course of instruction in morals in our secular schools; we ought surely to have it as a course in our religious schools.

Then comes a course of doctrinal instruction, in which your church creed, and either some ancient form of sound words or that better catechism which is to be, may be taken as a basis for finding what the Word says on the grandest themes.

I have hinted a six years' course, or longer, very crudely in these few words. But here you have a place for your teaching of the doctrines, a place for temperance and all the Christian duties, a place for learning what the Bible is as well as what it contains; and on this basis, you are ready to take up any book, to analyze it, to come to a comprehension of it; and one book of the Bible, thoroughly understood, is the best appetizer for more.

A school in Western New York had, years ago, a system of this sort. Its plan was this: A year on the parables of Jesus; a second on his other teachings; a third upon his life; a fourth upon the planting of the Christian church; a fifth upon the Old Testament referred to in the New; a sixth on the doctrines of theology and prophecy: and examination was the only way from one grade to another.

I can only refer to one or two objections; there will be many made. You are implying a work far beyond the ability of the average Sunday-school teacher. I confess it; but there can be no objection to having better ones. Some of these are capable of becoming so, and the others can easily be dispensed with. I believe in fewer teachers and better. I believe in large classes rather than small ones, even for personal influence, which is the greatest argument for the small class. A class of twenty-five is better than one of five from Monday until Friday; why not on Sunday? Then you will need rooms instead of pews, and other adjustments, which can easily be made.

But what about the lesson-helps? They will adjust themselves to the demand. A better course will bring out better helps; and it will be no disadvantage if they shall not be either so fragmentary in their method, or so perishable in their form, that they will add nothing to your aids to Bible study after they have helped you in the work of a single week. The money which many of our teachers spend on transient helps, which is thrown away, would in a few years give them each a valuable library of Bible lights for permanent use; and it is not beyond the limits of possibility that the International Committee might construct or adapt a general plan, on the basis of which as now the various denominations should furnish helps and text-books, so that the advantage of united effort and compared work might be maintained.

But cannot this end be reached by supplementary lessons? Not by the many, even if it be possible to the few. For one who can accomplish a little by supplementing, there are a thousand who can effect nothing. One thing is certain: if this plan of graded and progressive instruction is a better way, it can be carried into effect.

I have given you frankly and simply my honest thoughts upon this theme. I need not say a word of its importance, as I have not said a word of our dependence on divine guidance and grace in it. The consciousness of these underlies all my thought and yours. We need full, frank, free conference on these matters. I am glad that it has a place, though at the eleventh hour, in this conference. There is brain enough and consecration enough in our churches, and readiness enough to take the best way, when it is made evident that it is better than the one in which we are walking. What we need is consultation and comparison of experience and of views. We are having more facilities. The Congregational superintendents of our State have lately organized for this purpose; those of Boston and its vicinity have been so organized for a year or two to their great advantage. Our newly appointed Sunday-school secretary is bringing to the work his rare enthusiasm and tact. Let us stand by him.

Whatever we do, let not this work be carelessly done; for we are training the sons and daughters of the King.

TREASURER'S REPORT.

RULES OF THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION.

I. NAME. — This body shall be called THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF MASSACHUSETTS.

II. OBJECT. — Its object is to secure Christian union, fellowship, and intercourse among the ministers and churches; promote spirituality, and to co-operate with one another and with other ecclesiastical bodies in advancing the Redeemer's kingdom.

III. DOCTRINAL BASIS. — This Association agrees to the Declaration of Faith adopted by the National Council of Congregational Churches in the year 1865, the doctrines therein set forth being understood by us to be distinctly those which from the beginning have been embraced by the churches of New England as the doctrines of the gospel.

IV. DENOMINATIONAL BASIS. — Being based exclusively upon Congregational principles, this Association shall under no circumstances exercise ecclesiastical authority over churches or individuals, or interfere with the government or discipline of the churches, or consent to hear appeals, or give advice in ecclesiastical causes of any kind.

V. MEMBERS. — Each District Association of ministers, consenting to the principles above stated, may appoint, annually, two delegates, each to serve two years; and each District Conference of Churches, also so consenting, may appoint, annually, three delegates, who shall be laymen, each to serve two years; which delegates, with the Secretary, Registrar, Treasurer, and the pastor of the church with which the annual session is held, shall compose the General Association. Delegates from corresponding bodies, ministers appointed to preach sermons, and chairmen of committees attending to present reports, shall be honorary members, together with such other persons as the Association may vote to admit.

VI. OFFICERS. — 1. A Secretary, a Registrar, and a Treasurer shall be chosen by ballot, each to serve three years from the close of the session at which the choice was made; to these offices any member of any Congregational church connected with this body shall be eligible.

2. A Moderator and an Assistant Registrar shall be chosen by ballot from the members at each session to serve during that session.

3. The Secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Association, collect the statistics of ministers and churches, and have charge of the printing thereof; distribute the publications of the Association, and preserve, for the permanent use of the Association, copies of all its publications.

4. The Registrar shall make the records of each meeting, and preserve them as the permanent property of the Association; to whom the Assistant Registrar shall render his aid. He shall seasonably notify the time and place of each annual session.

5. The Treasurer shall receive all money raised for the use of the Association, disburse the same as directed, and present an annual report, to be audited as the Association may direct.

6. The Secretary, Registrar, and Treasurer shall be ex-officio members of the Association, and be the Committee of Publication unless another be chosen. Their travelling expenses in attending the several sessions shall be paid by the Association.

VII. QUORUM. — Twenty-five delegates shall constitute a quorum.

VIII. ANNUAL MEETING. — The annual meeting shall be held on the third Tuesday of June, at four o'clock P. M. (or at some other more convenient hour), at such place as shall have been duly designated.

IX. HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY. — The Massachusetts Home Missionary Society may annually elect two delegates, to be members of this body, while it consents that this body may nominate two persons for membership in the Executive Committee of that Society.

X. CORRESPONDENCE. — Official fraternal intercourse with the several State Congregational organizations, and with other denominations, is sufficiently had by the representation of this body in the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States.

XI. ORGANIZATION. — The pastor of the church of the place of meeting, or the Secretary, may call the Association to order and preside in the meeting until it be properly organized. The certificates of the delegates present shall be presented, only the names of members being read by the Registrar. The Association shall then be organized by the choice of a Moderator and an Assistant Registrar, and the Moderator shall open the session with prayer. A Committee on Credentials shall then be appointed, to whom all certificates shall be referred.

XII. COMMITTEES. — 1. The committees for the session are these:

(1.) A Committee on Credentials, who shall be appointed by the Moderator immediately after the opening of the session.

(2.) A Committee on Nominations, to nominate the following and any other committees referred to them:—

(3.) A Committee of Arrangements, consisting of three, of which the pastor or some member of the church shall be one, to prepare the business of the session; and no business shall be introduced during the session but through the hands and with the approbation of the committee; but if said committee decline presenting any item of business proposed by any member, he shall have the privilege of appeal to the Association.

(4.) A Committee to audit the Accounts, who shall report the state of the treasury and the sum in their opinion necessary to be paid the next year by the churches of the several conferences connected with this body.

2. To act after the adjournment:—

(1.) A Provisional Committee of five, of whom the Secretary or Registrar shall be one, to arrange the schedule for the next annual meeting; to select a preacher for the associational sermon, and persons to prepare such written papers as they shall deem desirable.

(2.) A State Committee on the Work of the Churches, who shall make an annual report to this body upon the work of the churches and state of religion, unless otherwise ordered at any session.

XIII. EXERCISES.—The time of the annual session shall be occupied by devotional services, the consideration of the state of religion, the wants and methods of home evangelization, addresses, and discussions of practical religious interest, and attention to the objects of benevolent enterprise sustained by the churches.

XIV. SPECIAL ORDERS.—1. At the opening of the session, on the morning of Wednesday and Thursday, the Moderator shall take the chair at the hour to which the Association stands adjourned; shall immediately call the members to order; shall direct the roll to be called; shall open the meeting with prayer, and cause the Minutes of the preceding day to be read; and the session of each day shall be closed with prayer.

2. The associational sermon and Lord's Supper shall be assigned to Tuesday evening. Wednesday evening shall be devoted to exercises having special reference to the people of the place of meeting, or a sermon may be preached, the preacher to be selected by the Provisional Committee. One session of the Association shall be devoted to the cause of Home Missions.

3. Each annual meeting shall be closed with a psalm or hymn and prayer.

XV. PLACE OF MEETING.—Previously to the close of each meeting, the General Association shall specify a place for meeting the next year; and the church of the place of meeting selected is requested to make preparations to celebrate the Lord's Supper in the course of the service. The Lord's Supper shall be administered, generally, without remarks.

XVI. RULES OF ORDER. — 1. Every motion, on being seconded, shall, if requested by the Moderator or any two members, be reduced to writing; and no motion shall be opened to discussion until it be seconded.

2. The Moderator may speak to points of order in preference to other members, rising from his seat for that purpose, and shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the house by any two members; but he may not speak to the merits of the question without leaving the chair, and placing some other member in it to preside while he speaks.

3. No member shall speak more than twice on the same question without leave of the Association.

4. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received except for adjournment, laying on the table, amendment, postponement, commitment, or the previous question. The previous question is this: Shall the main question be now put? and the effect of adopting it shall be to put an end to debate, and to bring the Association to a direct vote upon the amendments, if any are pending, and then upon the main question proper.

5. If a question under debate contain several parts, any member may have it divided and a question taken on each part.

6. Every member, when speaking, shall address himself to the Chair, and shall be subject to no needless interruption; if he act disorderly, it shall be the duty of the Moderator and the privilege of other members to call him to order.

XVII. AMENDMENTS. — 1. Any of the above rules, except the first five, may be amended at any annual session by a two-thirds vote, the proposed amendment having been submitted in writing on the day previous to that of the action.

2. Amendments to either of the first five articles shall not be made except upon their proposals at the annual meeting next prior to that of action, and after notice has been sent to the several associations and conferences, and by a two-thirds vote.

STATISTICS OF THE CHURCHES.

EXPLANATIONS.

THE statistics are in two parts:—

I. Those of pastoral supply, membership, additions, removals, baptisms, Sabbath schools, and families; and, of ministers, lists of ordinations, installations, dismissals, and deaths.

II. Those of charities and expenses, in which the churches are arranged by Conferences, these latter tables being prepared by Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Secretary of the Committee on the Work of the Churches, and beginning on page 113.

The tables of the first part, given in the pages next following this page, contain the names of all the Congregational churches in Massachusetts, the towns and cities being arranged alphabetically; churches in each town according to age; and of each church, (1) its town; (2) its name (if it have a peculiar one), which is always followed by "ch."; (3) its locality in the town when that locality has a name distinct from the town. When the name of the church follows the name of a locality subordinate to the town, it shows that the church has a distinct number in that subdivision of the town, or it is evidently needed for clearness.

These reports are obtained by the Scribes of the several Conferences, and by them are forwarded to the Secretary.

The column specifying ministers is corrected up to the time of printing. Church members and families are reported as numbered on the morning of Jan. 1, 1881. Admissions, removals, and baptisms cover the year 1880. "Absent" are not additional to "males," "females," and "total," but included in them. "Sabbath school" includes total membership of teachers and scholars Jan. 1, 1881, or when the school is in operation (if not at that date), covering "branch schools" and "mission schools," so far as maintained by the reporting church.

The months and days in the dates of the organization of churches are omitted. They will be found in the publication of 1873, those of churches since organized being given in the list of new churches each year.

"Ordained" denotes the date on which the person was originally set apart to the ministry "by the laying on of hands." "Installed" denotes the date of his present pastorate. The letter "p." denotes installed pastors; all others are serving without installation.

In no instance is the report of any church in these statistics copied from the returns of previous years. But there is included in the totals a careful estimate of the numbers in any unreporting church or Sunday school (except in cases where no report has been had for two years), and also any missing items of "absent,"—which are assumed to be, in each case, equivalent to the average.

Blanks in any column of figures are never equivalent to "none," but mean "no report"; but blanks in the column of ministers do mean that the church has no pastor or acting pastor, and the blank is left for the convenience of those who note changes.

☞ All post-office addresses are to be found in the "List of Ministers," and not in the tables.

A. H. Q.

STATISTICS OF THE CHURCHES.

NOTE.—This table is arranged alphabetically by towns and cities. If it is not known in what town any locality having a distinct name is situated, refer to the INDEX OF TOWNS AND CITIES, where towns and parts of towns (having Congregational churches) are arranged alphabetically: e. g., Assonet in Freetown; Whitinsville in Northbridge.

NOTE. — The "year" means what changes were comprised in the twelve months preceding January 1 of the year mentioned, except that the columns under "Ministers" comprise the twelve months ending with the time of closing the "copy" for printing the Minutes, usually reckoned at June 30. The table was begun in 1866, all preceding years now given being compiled from past Minutes, — the number of churches in some years varying from the Minutes as they were to what they should have been.

The changes in list of churches, ordinations, installations, etc., for the past year, condensed in the above table, are given in detail in their proper place.

* Prior to 1876, "acting pastors" are included in "others" in columns of deaths of ministers.

In the above table, the columns of "Additions," "Removals," "Baptisms," "Sabbath School Average," and "Benevolent Contributions" cover the twelve months next preceding January 1 of the year mentioned in a given line. The pastoral supply (only) was regularly corrected to a date some months later than January 1 (usually July), but this does not change the general accuracy in any case. The number of churches, members, and of Sabbath schools was enumerated January 1 of the year mentioned. The number of churches "vacant" includes all churches supplied by licentiates, or ministers of other denominations. * Absentees prior to 1855 doubtless stated too low by defective returns.

NAMES OF MINISTERS

IN THE PRECEDING TABLES, IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER, WITH THE POST-OFFICE ADDRESS OF EACH, AND WITH THE NUMBERS OF THE PAGES IN WHICH EACH NAME OCCURS IN THE STATISTICS.

THIS list includes only pastors or acting pastors and members of Associations. Its post-office addresses often differ from the foregoing pages.

An alphabetical list of licentiates follows this list.

A star (*) prefixed to any name in this list denotes that the person, although supplying a church, is not a member of any Association in this State. A few such, though not supplying churches, are inserted by their own wish.

In this list the first column of figures gives the page which denotes membership in an Association of Ministers.

The second column of figures in this list gives the page in which a person will be found to be in pastoral service. A blank in either case signifies,—in the former, that one is not a member of any Association in this State; in the latter that he is not reported to be in pastoral service in this State.

Where two pages are mentioned in the first column of figures, it shows that the person is a member of two Associations.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE. — Rev. William Barrows, Rev. William H. Hubbard, Rev. Charles W. Mallory, Bros. Freeman Walker, and Stephen C. Weld were chosen as the committee on nominations.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS. — The committee on nominations reported the following as a committee of arrangements: Revs. S. Leroy Blake, George R. W. Scott, and Albert G. Bale.

TEMPERANCE. — Rev. Wilbur Johnson presented the report of the committee upon church work against intemperance.

It was voted that this paper be referred to a committee to report during the session.

Mr. Robert R. Bishop, president of the Senate of Massachusetts, delivered an address upon the work of the Church and State against intemperance; followed by remarks by Revs. Daniel P. Noyes, Albert H. Plumb, George A. Oviatt, Owen Street, and Dea. Hamlin.

The committee of arrangements reported an order of exercises for the evening meeting.

After prayer by Rev. John W. Chickering, the association adjourned until the evening meeting.

EVENING SESSION.

The devotional exercises of the evening were held in the Rollstone church, at 7.30, and were conducted by the moderator, assisted by Rev. Washington Gladden.

The associational sermon was preached by Professor Tucker, of Andover, from Heb. xii. 28, 29.

The administration of the Lord's Supper closed the service, Revs. William Barrows and George A. Oviatt officiating.

The association then adjourned.

SECOND DAY.

BUSINESS. — The association opened its morning session at 8.30.

The registrar called the roll of delegates.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Allen Hazen.

Rev. Bradford M. Fullerton moved that the associational sermon be printed with the minutes. Referred to special committee.

The association received a telegram conveying the fraternal greetings of the General Association of the State of Maine, as follows: —

FRANK E. CLARK, moderator.

E. F. DUREN, secretary.

Referred to special committee.

On motion of Rev. Edward N. Packard, all Congregational ministers present were invited to sit as honorary members of the association.

MORMONISM. — Rev. John H. Lockwood presented the following communication from the Hampden East and West Associations: —

“It was voted that a committee be appointed to request the General Association to memorialize Congress to take immediate and persistent action for the abolition of polygamous Mormonism in Utah and other Territories; also to make an appropriation for the removal of illiteracy from the Territories where Mormonism prevails, as is proposed in other portions of the country.”

Referred to special committee.

RELATION OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO THE CHURCHES. — Rev. Winfield S. Hawkes presented the following resolution: —

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed, whose duty it shall be to report, at the next meeting of this association, on the Sabbath school as related to the work and life of the churches;

Also, to prepare and report a recommendation on this subject, to be presented to the National Council to be held in the fall of 1883.

Which, upon his motion, was laid upon the table.

AMENDMENTS. — The secretary moved to amend Rule XII. by taking clause (4) of sec. 1, and transferring it to sec. 2 as clause (3).

Rev. William H. Hubbard moved to amend Rule XII., sec. 4, clause (2) by adding the following: —

The State committee on the work of the churches shall consist of the secretary, the registrar, the chairmen of committees of local conferences, and twenty-one members at large. The members at large not to be eligible for more than three years.

Also to amend Rule IX. by adding —

The two persons thus nominated shall be from the membership of the association at the time, and shall not be eligible for nomination for more than two years in succession, and shall make report concerning the work of the society at the next meeting of the Association.

The secretary presented the report of the treasurer, Dea. William L. Greene, which was referred to the auditing committee.

At 9.15 the devotional exercises were held, conducted by Rev. Benson M. Frink.

COMMUNION OF CHURCHES. — After the devotional exercises, the special report of the State committee on “The Communion of the Churches in regard to their Work,” ordered by the last General Association, was read by Rev. George M. Boynton.

COMMITTEES. — The nominating committee reported the appointment of the following committees: —

Auditing committee. — Dea. George S. Saunders, of Cambridge; Dea. Charles R. Bartlett, of Rutland; and Dea. Edward P. Burgess, of North Brookfield.

Members ex-officio. — The secretary and the registrar of the association.

The committee on intemperance. — Rev. Albert H. Plumb, Rev. Wilbur Johnson, Rev. John W. Dodge, Rev. Charles H. Hamlin, and Rev. Joshua Coit.

The report was accepted and adopted.

UNION OF CHURCHES IN WORK. — Bro. Joseph S. Ropes, of Boston, gave an address upon “The individual and local action of the church among neighboring churches.”

Rev. John W. Harding followed with an address upon "The duty of the stronger churches to the weaker."

Bro. James White read a paper upon the subject, "The duty of the churches in reference to the organization of new churches."

Rev. Henry A. Stinson spoke upon "The duty of the churches in regard to destitute localities," with especial reference to "The difficulties and methods in cities."

Rev. Washington Gladden followed with an address upon "The difficulties and methods in rural districts."

Rev. Thomas G. A. Coté spoke upon the "The duty of the churches in reference to the condition and wants of our foreign-born population."

The subject was then opened for general discussion.

COMMITTEES. — The nominating committee reported the following committees, and their recommendation: —

On the motion relating to the printing of Dr. Tucker's sermon: — Revs. Bradford M. Fullerton, Albert H. Plumb, and Washington Gladden.

On the resolution of the Hampden East and West Associations touching Mormonism: — William B. Washburn, and Revs. John D. Kingsbury and John W. Harding.

On telegrams: — The moderator, secretary, and Rev. Albert H. Plumb.

Members of executive committee of Massachusetts Home Missionary Society: — Rev. Smith Baker and Rev. Abijah P. Marvin.

FOREIGN-BORN POPULATION. — The matter presented by Rev. Mr. Coté respecting work among the foreign-born population was referred to a committee to report during the session.

After prayer by Rev. Charles R. Seymour, of Winchester, the association adjourned until 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

REPORT OF AUDITING COMMITTEE. — The auditing committee reported as follows: —

The committee report that they have examined the account of Dea. William L. Greene, treasurer, and find that it is correctly cast and properly vouched, and that there is a balance due the treasurer of $223.28.

They recommend that a sum equivalent to four (4) cents for each church member be asked from the churches for the ensuing year, and they indorse the request of the treasurer that these collections be made as far as possible at the fall session of the conferences, and that prompt payment be made to the association treasury.

The report was accepted and adopted.

The committee on telegrams reported as follows : —

To the General Conference, Bangor, Me.

Your greeting heartily returned; see Ephes. i. 2, 3. Our prayer for you, Ephes. iii. 17, 19.

To the General Association, Middletown, Conn.

The General Association of Massachusetts sends Christian greeting. See Heb. xiii. 20, 21.

NATIONAL COUNCIL. — It was voted that the treasurer be authorized and directed to pay to the treasurer of the National Council such sums as have been or are asked for from this State, pro rata with the amount asked for from all the churches in the several States.

The committee on the associational sermon reported, —

That, as the Congregationalist would publish Prof. Tucker's sermon, as a matter of information, they recommend that the association take no further action.

TEMPERANCE. — The committee on the report upon intemperance reported as follows : —

The committee to whom was referred the report of the committee on intemperance, presented to the association yesterday, beg leave to express their appreciation of the value of the suggestions contained in the report, and of the importance of the work of the churches in this respect.

The committee believe that the church is a vital mainspring of action upon this subject, and that the work of this association in organizing and directing the temperance sentiment of the Christian community towards practical results should be continued, and, to this end, recommend the re-appointing of the State committee of five, whose duty it shall be to take charge of the matter, in its relation to the churches, in the same manner as last year, and to present the subject by report and addresses at the next annual meeting of the association.

The report was adopted, and the same committee reappointed for next year.

THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES. — The State committee's report on the work of the churches was presented by Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, and the report was adopted.

Adjourned for meeting of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society.

EVENING.

The association met in the Rollstone church at 7.30 P. M. The secretary presented the fraternal greetings of the General Association of Connecticut, which were as follows: —

The General Association of Connecticut to the General Association of Massachusetts:

Dear Brethren, the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.

NATHANIEL J. BURTON, moderator.

The following committee was appointed to report on work among our foreign-born population: —

Rev. Henry A. Stimson, James G. Buttrick, and Dea. Edward I. Thomas.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Sereno D. Gammell, of Lynn.

Addresses were made by Revs. Lyman H. Blake, of Westfield; Oliver S. Dean, of Milford; and Robert R. Meredith, of Boston.

After the benediction, by Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, the meeting adjourned.

THIRD DAY.

The association commenced its session at 8.30, the registrar calling the roll.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Charles B. Rice, of Danvers.

AMENDMENT OF RULES. — On motion of Rev. Wm. H. Hubbard, it was moved to amend Rule IX. according to the notice given on the preceding day.

After discussion, the business was arrested for the devotional services.

It was voted to appropriate thirty minutes for business, from 9.45 to 10.15 A. M.

Devotional services were conducted by Rev. John D. Kingsbury.

AMENDMENT OF RULES. — On resuming business, the amendment to Rule IX. was adopted. The following resolution was then offered : —

Resolved, That it is the sense of this meeting that one of the two nominees for membership in the executive committee of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society is eligible for only one year.

Adopted.

The amendment to Rule XII., sec. 2, clause (2), of which notice was given on the preceding day, was then adopted.

Rev. Wm. H. Hubbard moved the following resolution : —

Resolved, That it is the sense of this association that one third of the "members at large" of the state committee on the work of the churches, appointed this year, shall be eligible for only one year; and one third, for two years.

Adopted.

It was voted, on motion of the secretary, that clause (4), sec. 1, Rule XII., be hereafter placed as clause (3), sec. 2.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL COMMITTEE. — It was moved that the resolutions of Rev. Winfield S. Hawkes, and the appointment of a committee under the same, be taken from the table. Adopted.

It was voted to amend the resolution by making the committee five instead of three, and on report of the nominating committee the above committee was constituted by the choice of —

Revs. Winfield S. Hawkes, Albert E. Dunning, Robert R. Meredith, Smith Baker, and Bro. George Beal.

FOREIGN-BORN POPULATION. — The committee on work among our foreign-born population reported as follows : —

Resolved, That the executive committee of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society be requested to give special attention to the spiritual needs of our foreign-born fellow-citizens, and consider if the time has not come when the society should secure the partial or entire services of a general missionary agent, or superintendent of this work.

Adopted.

It was voted to send the following telegram to President Magoun, of Iowa College : —

"Be assured of the heartfelt sympathy of the Massachusetts General Association both for the State and the College."

PROVISIONAL COMMITTEE. — The nominating committee reported that the officers of the association, with Rev. Benjamin F. Hamilton, of Roxbury, and Rev. Michael Burnham, be a committee to select a place for the next meeting of the association, and to appoint the provisional committee.

Adopted.

The committee of arrangements recommended that, after the address by Rev. Smith Baker, Bro. George Beal and Rev. Albert E. Dunning address the association for an allotted time.

Adopted.

ADDRESSES ON SUNDAY SCHOOLS. — At 10.15 Rev. Smith Baker presented a paper on "The relation of the Sabbath school to the church." Bro. George Beal gave a report on Sunday-school statistics, and Rev. Mr. Dunning spoke on the work of the Sunday-school and Publishing Society, which was followed by general discussion.

The secretary presented the following: —

Resolved, That the association gratefully recognizes the enlargement of the work of the Sunday-school Society, and commends the society to the attention and support of the churches.

Adopted.

On motion of Rev. S. Leroy Blake, it was —

Voted, That this body recommend to the local conferences that they admit to their permanent membership the Sabbath-school superintendents of the churches within their limits.

Adopted.

VOTE OF THANKS. — The following resolution was presented by Rev. Charles B. Rice, and was adopted by a unanimous vote: —

Resolved, That the thanks of this association be presented to the Calvinistic and Rollstone churches in this city, and to the members of other neighboring churches, for the generous and hearty hospitality with which we have been entertained; also to the committee, who have assisted in providing for our comfort, and in making preparation for the work of the association; and also to the officers of the Fitchburg and Old Colony, and Boston and Lowell Railroads, for their courtesy in furnishing transportation at reduced rates to members of the association.

The moderator in person tendered the thanks of the association to the pastors of these churches, which were responded to by Rev. George R. W. Scott, and Rev. S. Leroy Blake.

CLOSING EXERCISES. — The minutes of the day were read and approved, after which the hymn, "I love thy kingdom, Lord," was sung.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Avery S. Walker, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Charles Seccombe, of Springfield, Dakota, when the association adjourned.

REPORTS OF THE STATE COMMITTEE UPON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES.

I.

ABSTRACT OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INTEMPERANCE.

UNAVOIDABLE changes in the membership of the committees on intemperance, which compelled a reorganization and renewed consultations, caused much delay in its action during the year. Early in 1882 the following explanatory and suggestive circular was issued: —

“Dear Sir, — The State Committee, of the General Association of the Congregational Churches of Massachusetts, upon the Work of the Churches against Intemperance, beg leave to ask your co-operation. More than two years have been spent in consulting, organizing, and overcoming difficulties. Meantime the wisdom of our plan has been vindicated by a similarity of ideas and organization in some recent outside movements under high auspices. But all these lack some important elements of efficiency possessed by the church. The churches are God’s chief agencies for good. Is He not calling, in both the old and new issues of this practical branch of work for all righteousness, that they pour into it the strength He has given them?

“THE MOVEMENT SEEKS

“1. To secure special effort against intemperance by each church, in its own way, according to circumstances, as the Spirit of God may guide.

“2. Hence to enlist some person in each church who will make suitable and unwearying exertion to obtain this.

“3. To secure authority for his efforts, through appointment by his church, as a committee to lead in this department of its work.

“If your church has not already taken action in the matter, will you not give your labor and influence to secure it at an early date?

“IN GENERAL CHARACTER

The movement is directed to draw out against intemperance the great reserve force in churches and communities, by inducing a continued, active, and prayerful study of the subject. Hence it is suggested that all efforts be practical, toned with charity; such as make enforcement of existing laws more prominent than efforts for their alteration; recognize the merit of those who are temperate without pledges or total-abstinence views; oppose the open bar; and hold up always the true standard of duty, — Christian self-denial for the good of the weak.

“AS PRACTICAL MEASURES,

The committee would suggest, as approved by experience, help to worthy outside efforts; temperance organization in church and Sabbath school;

temperance lessons and library books; infant instruction in children's meetings, or as 'Bands of Hope' or 'Young Crusaders'; visitation of inebriates' families; mention in church manuals, and in addresses to new members; and special temperance gatherings, such as concerts, annual picnics, and union meetings.

"MORE SPECIFICALLY,

The early adoption of the following is respectfully urged:—

"I. The periodical temperance concert of prayer and conference. Why cannot temperance work receive an impulse from this source as well as mission work? An effective reporting system can be arranged. Longer addresses can deal with perpetually changing phases of the subject, the nature of stimulants and narcotics, the physiology of the body they injure, and an endless variety of information suited for public instruction upon intemperance, and greatly needed. Most important also is the accompaniment of prayer, and of a regular collection as a basis of funds for measures III. and IV. below.

"II. The presentation, at such meetings and elsewhere, of such pledges, radical or partial or temporary, as can be most successfully used. Especially for children, limited pledges may be more welcome to many parents. The family pledge, used in one of our churches in the form of a dignified statement of principles and purposes, is worthy of a trial.

"III. The judicious, systematic, and extensive circulation of printed matter. The quietest methods often produce deepest convictions. Many a young person may be saved by a book or tract seen in time. Many a turn in public sentiment is sought and obtained by flooding the community with documents.

"IV. An occasional series of lectures through the conference; arranged by aid of the Conference Committee, if desired; by speakers whose position, character, wisdom, and experience command respect; especially upon the duty of Christians and churches to this work. Has not lecturing upon temperance been left too much to the irresponsible and injudicious?

"V. The devotion to this topic of, at least, one Sabbath in every year.

"The committee believe there is yet time for efficient work the present season. But the movement is not limited to times. We need to keep the fountains of influence continually flowing. This vital issue deserves greater prominence in the regular work of the church. It should be pressed with the same persevering and hopeful spirit with which other religious work is done. A report to the Conference Committee is greatly desired from each church by the first of May, detailing the efforts and progress for the year."

From the lateness of the issue and the more recent absence in Europe of one of the committee, the immediate results and consequent reports were naturally far fewer than desired.

CONFERENCES AND CONFERENCE COMMITTEES.—Of twenty-two conferences reported, fourteen had committees appointed by conference, and four have been served by brethren acting in part as such. At least, therefore, eighteen conferences out of the twenty-five have been reached and probably quickened by this movement. Within the three years of this committee's labors, seven of these conferences have given earnest attention to the evil of intemperance, by discussions, addresses, resolutions, or requests to individual pastors. Hampshire East, at the April meeting, passed resolutions recognizing the duty of the church to occupy a right and leading position with reference to temperance, and requesting, 1. That the pastors preach on some phase of the subject once a year. 2. That it be made the special theme of prayer and conference meetings once in three months. 3. That the Sunday-school libraries be furnished with temperance literature. 4. That the churches consider the expediency of some rule in their manuals as to the use of intoxicating drinks. The system of Conference Committees is raising up a company of efficient temperance leaders among our churches. The power exerted by the annual circulars, personal influence, repeated appeals, and successful examples of some of them, the past year, cannot easily be estimated, and cannot fail of precious results.

WORK OF THE CHURCHES. — In several of the reporting conferences, the churches have done a great amount of work within the three years. Pastors have been generally faithful. In the Norfolk, many churches have regular temperance meetings. In the Mendon, many unite with other denominations for the same purpose. In Suffolk West, the year has been one of marked progress. Seventeen churches out of nineteen report work through Sabbath schools or periodical union meetings. Half the churches of Middlesex South report co-operation with outside organizations. In the town which contains the greatest cider factory on the continent, no member of the church drinks, or traffics in the product. The churches of Brookfield Conference have taken bravely hold, needing no further advice or help. A somewhat general plan of prayer meetings, extra lectures, and increased activity has resulted from our movement. The work has gained a footing in the western counties. More than half the churches of Hampshire unite with some active outside organization or have one of their own. Throughout most of the reporting conferences, the occasional Sabbath-school temperance lesson and concert, often with pledges, the occasional temperance prayer meeting, and frequent remembrance of temperance in pulpit, prayer, and address, are becoming common. Among special instances are the Medway Village church, adopting a total-abstinence pledge, then presenting it, with good success, for the signatures of every man, woman, and child; the Watertown church making a similar pledge a condition of membership; the temperance society of the South Framingham church, with membership open to all who will sign, but officers elected at the regular business meeting of the church; and the successful system of the Florence church, which turns the Sabbath school, once a quarter, into a temperance society, presents pledges to the young people, and instruction by which the adults profit.

SHADOWS AND LIGHTS. — Notwithstanding that the object of securing individual workers in every church is far from realized, that the work seems slow to some, and the whole plan is suspected by others, it is felt that something like this should be continued. The slowness of the churches will be removed by better understanding of the plan, and as the Conference Committee grows to be known within his conference as a moving spirit in temperance work. The doubting pastor will see in time that a better organization of the church for its work is a help to his own. Whatever more dazzling methods may be valuable, they are most worthy of confidence, as spontaneous movements of the churches, born of the still small voice. Already we see whole conferences awakened to the work. We see an activity of our brethren, in the recent political uprising that has swept licenses away from so many towns; which speaks the natural result of quiet educating methods, resting upon faith in the gospel influence as the great power for temperance. As the Union regiments at Lookout Mountain, roused in their patriotism by facing a definite object, and by the exhilarating influence of an atmosphere above the clouds, are said to have advanced of their own accord and carried the frowning heights, so the churches of Christ, awakened in their love by the definite issue in this temperance work, and by the heavenly atmosphere of quickened spiritual life, may be trusted to carry the contest to the highest point and the fullest triumph.

SPECIAL REPORT ON THE METHODS NOW IN USE FOR THE COMMUNION OF CHURCHES IN REGARD TO THEIR WORK.

THE most important occasions wherein the churches enter into communion respecting their work are those conferences which have gradually come to include all the churches of our State. The stated conference is the only regular and sure opportunity for this duty and privilege. These conferences were instituted at different times during a period of fifty years. The "Brookfield Associational Conference," which to this day has no written constitution or separate records, and is but a department of the Brookfield Association, was the first conference of churches provided in this State. The date of its institution is June 13, 1821. The others were instituted at the dates given in the following list: Essex South, Norfolk, and Worcester North, in 1827; Essex North, Worcester South, Middlesex South, and Barnstable, in 1828; Pilgrim, 1830; Middlesex Union, 1833; Franklin, 1843; Woburn and Taunton, 1849; Hampden, 1850; Worcester Central, 1852; Old Colony, 1856; Mendon, 1858; Andover, 1859; Berkshire South and Hampshire East, 1860; Suffolk North and Suffolk South (same day), 1861; Hampshire, 1865; Berkshire North, 1867; Suffolk West, 1873.

It will be noticed that after the first, in 1821, there was a pause of six years; then three were agreed upon in 1827, four in 1828, one in 1830, and one in 1833, a period characterized by much religious interest. Another pause followed of ten years, till 1843; but from 1849 the process was going on at intervals generally of not more than two or three years till, in 1867, the whole State was covered. In 1873 the Suffolk West was carved out of the Suffolk North, which had become inconveniently large.

THE OBJECTS FOR WHICH THE CONFERENCES WERE FORMED. — Nearly all the conferences express the object of their organization. A glance at the abstracts of their constitutions will show the perfect oneness of their aim. It was purely spiritual and practical, and may be briefly described as Christian union, fellowship, piety, activity. There was hardly a sense of organization, but only of a coming together for a delightful and profitable intercourse. The period from 1827 to 1833 was a time of ingathering; and to meet thus in sacred and precious conference was esteemed a privilege. The language of not a few of the constitutions suggests this dominant spirituality of purpose. One of them defines its object thus: "To draw closer the cords of Christian fellowship, excite a holy ardor in the Kingdom of the Redeemer, promote a spirit of active piety, and awaken a heartfelt desire for a revival of pure religion."

THE DISCLAIMER OF AUTHORITY. — One who knows anything of the jealousy with which the Massachusetts churches guard their independence feels deeply the necessity that no suspicion should be allowed of any possible secret growth of dominion out of this new usage. The fear was so quick that nearly all the conferences found it necessary to insert among the first articles of their constitutions the most explicit pledge that nothing of the kind should ever come about; and the rest omitted this pledge probably because the possibility of such a danger was beyond their conception. They all meant to guard not only against any authority over doctrine or discipline, but also against the gradual rise of a tendency in that direction through consent of the conference to act as a council. They were also at pains to organize many local benevolent societies, this both in particular churches and among the churches of a conference. The Suffolk churches — among the last to come into this organized relation, from the very fear, as is well known, of such secret and gradual acquisition of authority — were especially explicit. "Under no circumstances," says the Suffolk South, "shall the conference exercise ecclesiastical authority or interfere with the government and discipline of the churches or consent to hear appeals or give advice in ecclesiastical causes of any kind." The meaning of all the other conferences has been that which is here so clearly expressed.

THE MEMBERS OF CONFERENCES. — The conferences are composed of pastors and delegates of the churches. Eight specify acting pastors as members; probably all consider them as such. Two allow churches to send an additional delegate when without a pastor. Brookfield makes all members of the Association members of the conference. The Suffolk South and the Suffolk West make all Evangelical Congregational ministers present honorary members. Five constitutions declare all church members present to be honorary members; and probably in the other conferences usage makes them such.

The number of delegates varies greatly. Brookfield admits but one; Andover, Franklin, Pilgrim and Worcester North admit six; two others, four; seven, three; nine, two. Hampshire East allows two of the four delegates to be women. In other conferences no distinction as to sex is made in the constitutions. It is evident that the limitation of numbers is only for the saving of time.

OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES. — Berkshire North and Franklin call their presiding officer president; all the others call him moderator. Most choose this officer at each meeting; about half a dozen for a year, one for two years, and one for five years. The clerks, scribes, or secretaries, acting as treasurers, are generally chosen for three years. Some conferences divide the labor of this office into two, having a registrar (in one instance serving during the good pleasure of the conference) and a statistical secretary. A "Standing," "Business," "Executive," Committee is very frequently found. A "Committee of Arrangements," a "Provisional Committee," almost always exists. So also we find a "Committee on Church Work," or on "the Work of the Churches," or "Home Evangelization," or "Home Missionary Committee," a "Committee on Sunday Schools" and a "Committee on Temperance." The Franklin County Conference and Benevolent Association has a more complicated organization than others. It acts as a sort of auxiliary to nine benevolent societies, for each of which a corresponding secretary is chosen by the conference from its own members; and also a Committee on Home Evangelization and a Committee on the State of the Churches. The object is to stimulate the benevolence of the churches toward all these causes, and to look after the feeble churches within the county.

THE CONFERENCE MEETINGS — All the conferences have a spiritual aim, as appears in the phraseology which sets forth their object. All hold devotional meetings. These open the meetings of each day, and often occupy entire sessions. All provide for papers on practical themes, followed by discussions. Many also provide opportunity for the presentation of the work of the churches through the leading benevolent societies. Many likewise, but in different ways, endeavor to reinforce the Sabbath-school work. Usually the reports of the home work of the churches and the state of religion are made in the spring. Frequently the condensed narration of the work of the churches is read to the conference, and almost universally it is furnished to the State Committee, for use in making out their report. Meetings are often opened with a sermon. Eleven conferences especially provide in their constitutions for the celebration of the Lord's Supper, — some once, some twice, a year; and ordinarily this is preceded by a sermon.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS. — In the Worcester South Conference the Committee upon the Work of the Churches consists of persons appointed by the churches, one from each. Every member furnishes a written narrative of the work of his own church. An abstract from the report of the chairman is printed for general circulation through the churches, as well as furnished to the State Committee. Two conferences have a "Doctrinal Basis." In the Brookfield Conference, the church seeking admission must have "satisfactory articles of faith"; and, if it changes its articles, must submit them to the conference for inspection. The Pilgrim Conference takes the Declaration of Faith made in Plymouth in 1865. The Mendon constitution provides for a Christian convention to follow the conference under the direction of the church with whom it meets. In some parts of the State, informal neighborhood conferences, often called fellowship meetings, are frequent. In other parts they are held upon invitation by any church. In Boston, union meetings of twenty or more churches have been held with good effect. The Hampshire East Conference now employs an evangelist to labor in destitutions and feeble churches, under direction of the committee on waste places, which reports annually. He is paid from free gifts of the churches. The Hampden Conference has been quite watchful and sympathetic in the endeavor to encourage the churches of the hill country. It has had a system of mutual visitation, which has been a blessing to all parties.

REVIEW. — It appears, then, that the churches of this State have provided sufficient opportunity for communion respecting their work in the conferences which they have established. The conference is an institution of a purely spiritual origin, of great simplicity, of the utmost flexibility, and of unbounded possibilities of effectiveness. It is a natural outgrowth of the apostolic church order. As one brings up before his imagination these vital communions, covering the State, his heart goes out in loving homage to the multitude of pastors and brethren, and honorable women, more numerous still, to whose piety, affection, and zeal this unique institution owes its origin and growth.

Thus our conferences, born of spiritual sympathies and yearnings, bear the mark of their origin in the distinguishing character of their spirituality. The spirit of devotion, a desire for communion in this devotion, and of rising through this communion into the upper regions of Christian life and energy, pervade their constitutions, and are, on the whole, a marked trait of their sessions. At first, it was almost the sole trait. But to this have been added, gradually and most naturally, a customary methodical survey of the field occupied by the churches; a more complete and accurate statement of their condition, progress, and methods; fuller reports of the results of experience, and a united study of the practical problems which, in these agitated times, are continually arising; so that now the churches accomplish much more in their conferences than at first. The method now in most extensive use is the following:—

a. Every church furnishes a written statement, early in the year, of everything in its work and condition, and in the condition of the surrounding community of which it thinks a knowledge will be useful to its neighbors. This includes, of course, its own statistics.

b. These written statements are collated and condensed into one, covering the whole territory of the churches, presenting in one view whatever is contained in the original narratives, with whatever more the committee preparing it has been able to add from other sources. In case of revivals, the written narrative, necessarily much condensed, is supplemented, sometimes, by more detailed verbal accounts.

c. A few of the conferences make any significant facts brought out in this report a subject of discussion, and, whenever the nature of the case suggests, of action. But this is not done in all.

d. When such discussion does not take place in immediate connection with the presentation of the report, it nevertheless often comes up at another time, for the committees of arrangement are on the alert for important practical themes.

e. In parts of the State, the churches hold informal meetings at regular or irregular seasons, designed sometimes for the general benefit, and at others for the purpose of becoming more intimately acquainted with the condition of some one church, and of combining to encourage and assist it. There are sometimes meetings of the entire body of the churches, known as "Neighborhood Conferences," or as "Fellowship Meetings." Again, for the purpose of comforting and strengthening one another, church visitations are arranged, either during the conference services, or by special invitations of churches that wish them.

f. The written reports read to the conferences are furnished to the State Committee, and are by it summed up and submitted to the General Association, and such portions as seem to call urgently for action are specifically considered. But this consideration is restricted within narrow limits, since the time of the Association is always compactly filled.

g. The Committee on Church Work (bearing different names in different conferences) are generally authorized correspondents of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, which looks to them for counsel respecting churches needing aid, and for information in regard to new regions in cities, new factory and railroad villages, and any growing districts that may soon need a church. By vote of the Association and of the Society the latter is responsible for seeing to the seasonable formation of new churches. In the case of churches needing aid, this arrangement works well. As to new churches, the plan has proved ineffective, and the committee recommend that this work be definitely laid down by the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, and assumed by the local conferences.

CONCLUSION — Such is the method now existing. Is the communion of our churches respecting their work all that we want?

Your committee respectfully submit:—

1. That the system is excellent. It is in fullest harmony with our principles. It appeals exclusively to the love and conscience of the brethren. It gives them opportunity for the most perfect possible communion and co-operation in their work. The only limit to its effectiveness is the limit of the zeal of the churches. We suggest no change in the system. But,

2. The system embraced in the conferences and the General Association can be worked to much better effect than at present, in all its departments.

Congregationalism has been charged with lack of unity and of ready concentration; but in this system it possesses an opportunity adequate to the development of all the force residing in the churches, in the line of any local or any general work, and for such concentration as may at any time be needed.

We then ask this General Association to recognize, with gratitude to Almighty God, the excellency of this system, and for the sake of its greater effectiveness to adopt and give such weight as may be to the following RECOMMENDATIONS. — 1. We recommend that more full and accurate reports be rendered by the individual churches.

2. We recommend that the special work undertaken during the year, or any unusual religious interest, be fully reported by the individual churches.

3. We recommend that the stronger churches make more manifest in various ways their sympathy with the weaker ones, and with each other.

4. We recommend that conferences, by committee, exercise more active supervision of the organization of new churches; of the needs of feeble churches and destitute localities; and also of the condition and spiritual wants of our foreign-born population.

By order of the State Committee,

DANIEL P. NOYES, Secretary.

ANNUAL REPORT ON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES.

THE reports received from the churches are more than usually imperfect. Many are so irregularly and diversely made up that only a portion of their material can be advantageously used.

The "Requests for Information" are scantily answered. From the replies to the question respecting "the payment of expenses of delegates to councils," we think it safe to infer that, almost universally, such payments are not made by the churches.

As to the Communion of Churches in Work, and in respect to their work, the Essex South Conference makes the confession that "our present communion is altogether disproportionate to the amount of the work done. We have fallen into the habit of having a vast amount of pious talk over a very little." And is there not, sometimes, ground for an acknowledgment of this nature? Is it not true that conference meetings not seldom fall below their proper standard of gravity and vigor, and have not the air of grappling with serious questions and difficult problems? Worcester South bears testimony in favor of a union of churches, in the work against intemperance, in efforts to reach neglecters, and in Fellowship Meetings. From the Taunton Conference we learn that in one of the towns, at least, West Attleboro, the Congregational churches account themselves "virtually one in their work," and "meet quarterly for prayer and conference." And shall we not say, that in very many of our towns such a union ought to take place? Moreover, it is not easy to see why we should limit this communion in prayer and conference to our own denomination. Churches planted in the same community owe it to the Lord that they unite in his work. The Pilgrim Conference finds itself constrained to testify against the custom of receiving and dismissing ministers without a council. Only two pastors in this conference were installed by a council. The churches in which the pastoral relation is most stable are the most prosperous. "The most important measure for improving the communion of the churches is an increase of the permanence of this relation."

It strikes us as somewhat remarkable that the great question, How can our churches more effectively consult and combine, in their conferences and elsewhere, for Christianizing the population within the conference limits? is in many respects wholly overlooked. It would be hardly fair to infer that in those parts of the State the ministers and churches have a low estimate of the value of their conferences; and yet we apprehend their estimate to be lower than it should be. Conferences can be so conducted as not only to keep the religious state of all its communities clearly in view, but also in such a manner as to leave no community to settle down into utter carelessness and indifference, and no single church unstimulated and unencouraged. Just so far as churches are important bodies, their meetings for consultation about their work are important, and may be made effective. And the question, In what way can this best be done? is worthy of earnest consideration.

THE CHURCHES: BUILDING, REPAIRS, PAYMENT OF DEBTS. — From Essex North we learn that at Groveland, repairs of the church edifice have been cheerfully made. From Byfield, that a considerable sum has been laid out upon the meeting-house, adding largely to its attractiveness; and also on the parsonage. In West Newbury, first, the debt has been paid, the system of weekly collections has been adopted, with the effect of securing a prompt payment of dues.

In Franklin Conference, a new church has been built at Turner's Falls; and Benardston has spent on repairs, $700. In Middlesex Union, the Calvinistic Church, Fitchburg, and the church at Leominster have paid all debts. In Norfolk, South Weymouth, 2d, and South Weymouth, Union, have made important repairs; and South Braintree has built a commodious chapel. Essex South reports the Dane Street Church, of Beverly, as having paid a debt of $6,000; Maple Street, Danvers, "a large amount"; Gloucester has raised its church edifice, lengthened it, added new rooms, and made various improvements at a cost of $12,000, all substantially provided for, and mostly paid; Lanesville and Lynnfield Centre have liquidated their small debts; the First Church, Lynn, a debt of $13,000; Saugus, $2,250; South Church, Salem, $6,000; Middleton, $1,300; Marblehead, $773; and Rockville has received almost money enough for a new church, lacking only about $500.

Charities. — The report of the Hampden Conference remarks upon "the great difference manifest between the charities of different churches whose expenses seem to indicate about the same pecuniary ability. Indeed, the returns are noteworthy, especially as showing that some one department of religious work is apt to be pushed into great prominence, while others are neglected. Some give prominence to Sunday-school work, some to "evangelistic" work; some are noted for system and regularity in giving, more than for anything else; a few seem equally faithful in the things that are least and those that are greatest."

The report from the Pilgrim Conference remarks upon the "serious mistake," "that so few of its churches take up contributions for our societies for church building, ministerial education, and Sunday schools; and the still greater mistake, on the part of about half of the churches, that they make no contributions to the three great missionary societies. We regard this course as not only wrong, but absolutely suicidal." "A weak church will only become more impoverished, and find increasing difficulty in raising the salary of their pastor, while neglecting to do anything for those destitute of the Gospel in our own country and in heathen lands."

Worcester Central reports that the Union Church in Worcester has more than quadrupled its beneficence, by means of the weekly offering. The Central Church, of the same city, still holds, by this system, the advanced standard reached three years ago. The churches of Essex South report a steady gain for the last five years.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION AND TRAINING — The Sunday-school returns proving very imperfect, Mr. George Beal has been requested to supply the lack, from additional facts in his possession, and he reports as follows:

SUNDAY SCHOOLS — “That there has been a gain this last year we infer from the fact that we know there was a gain in one conference of five hundred and sixty-six and in another of one hundred; also from the fact that there has been a steady increase for the last ten years: for the report of 1872, giving the membership in 1871, shows that there were 90,851 in five hundred schools; and since that time we have increased at the average rate of 1,121 per year. This is a healthy growth. The average attendance the last year was about 62,000, or about sixty per cent.

There seems to be quite a difference in the average attendance in the different parts of the State, — the schools in one conference in the eastern part of the State averaging sixty-three per cent; the schools in one conference in the western part of the State only fifty-one per cent; two of the Suffolk conferences averaging sixty-two per cent. There might be an improvement in this respect; for we have some schools whose average is eighty-two and eighty-five, and quite a number whose average is seventy and seventy-two, which is a good healthy condition, although eighty per cent should be the standard. The average in 1871, ten years ago, was sixty-seven per cent.

Benevolent Contributions. — Usually about one half of the schools report something for benevolence; but we have reports from only eighty-nine schools, giving $8,450 73 for this purpose; and from those who have reported, the average is quite small, the schools in one conference giving only about twenty-three cents per member (Norfolk); in another (Suffolk North), twenty-six cents; in another (Franklin), twenty-nine cents; and still another organization (Superintendents' Union), thirty-five cents per member. The question does not seem to be understood; for the schools of some of the conferences have reported the total amount of contributions, and do not say anything about benevolence.

We do not consider it benevolence, to contribute money to buy library books or singing books. The church should provide the school with all needful apparatus, just as much as provide a room for its use; and it should educate the children and youth of our Sunday schools to give to worthy benevolent objects; then when these are grown up, we shall have more liberal givers in our churches. A Sunday school that gives $1.00 per member is considered to be doing very well. Where churches do not or cannot provide for the Sunday school, a good rule is to have the school understand that for every dollar contributed for itself, it should give an equal amount for benevolence. There are some schools that set a good example in this respect. One of five hundred and fifty-seven members contributed $779.82, which is $1.40 per member, and gave $400 for benevolent objects. Another school (2d Dorchester), of four hundred and forty-eight members, contributed $500.72 (this is about $1.12 per member), and gave it all away.

Objection may be made to these instances, as they are large schools. We note one small school in the country, of one hundred and forty members, which contributed last year $306.52 (about $2.19 per member). This shows what can be done if one sets about a thing in earnest.

The Sunday school is one department of the church. Is the church in the Sunday school? We regret to say that it is not, to the extent that we could wish. In localities where we think the church is doing the best in this respect, about forty per cent, or two fifths of the church are in the Sabbath school. This is better than it used to be; but we ought to expect much more than this all over the State, since a part of the day has been given up to the Sunday school, — and this brings us to speak of the pastor's class. These classes are increasing, and we hope will be the means of bringing many adults into our schools, — members of the church as well as those outside.

Let more of the church come into the Sunday school, and then some of our superintendents could report more than one third or one fourth, or one fifth, as some of them do now, and then our superintendents may be able to obtain teachers when wanted, as they so often are; and then, too, what an encouragement to the young to see the Church of God studying the Word of God in the pastor's class and Sunday school, and finding a delight in it, too.

Now, on the other hand, do the children attend the church service? They certainly should. We have endeavored to learn the facts in some localities, and find that from forty to forty-two per cent of the children under fifteen attend the church service. We say that the children should attend the church service once at least on Sunday, even if they do not go to the Sabbath school. In regard to this matter an appeal should be made to the parents.

Temperance. — There is an increasing interest in the temperance cause in our Sunday schools; but it seems to lack systematic organization. Some of our schools have a temperance society of one kind, and some of another. Some are short lived, and others lose the interest, unless it be made interesting. The best organization that I know of is one connected with the Sunday school in Quincy, and is called the Young People's Temperance Union. It is really a temperance school. They meet once in two weeks, on a week-day evening. They have class instruction for twenty minutes or so, and then miscellaneous readings, singing, and addresses. The text-book used is "Julia Colman's Manual and Catechism." There are —

Three Grades of Membership. — First, those who sign the "Iron-Clad Pledge," which is to abstain from liquor, tobacco, and profanity. Second, those who sign against the use of liquor only. Third, those who sign neither. These last come to be instructed in the principles of "temperance," and advance from one grade to the other until they reach the Iron-Clad.

Conversions. — We have not been able, in the short time given us, to obtain much information on this very important question. From six conferences, and parts of others, we have reports from ninety-five schools, giving seven hundred and seventeen as having united with the churches from the Sunday schools. It is probable that never before was there such an interest in the study of the lessons as now. May this continue to increase until it shall bring in the whole resident membership of our churches to study the Word of God! So brethren, let us give a little more heart work in this department of our church work, for it is indeed a very hopeful field; and then we may be able next year to report a very large increase in the number of those who have united with the church from the Sunday school through the instrumentality of faithful, efficient Sunday-school teachers."

OTHER METHODS OF CHRISTIAN TRAINING. — From Norfolk Conference we hear of young people's meetings as well attended and hopeful. Maternal associations have also proved useful, in a different but very valuable way. Sociables, with literary exercises, have been worked in so as to prove an excellent auxiliary. Franklin Conference tells us of a pastor's class in the Pilgrim's Progress once a week, and of a Sunday-morning prayer meeting for the young. From the Pilgrim Conference, we hear of sermons especially prepared for the young. One pastor preaches a seven-minute sermon just before the second hymn of the morning, suiting the hymn to the theme. Five churches of the Worcester Central Conference report that they make much of prayer meetings for the young; which, however, do not appear to differ particularly from those which are so frequent all over the State. One of the churches reports an effort to strengthen the ties between baptized children and the church, by presenting them with Bibles, upon an occasion when they are assembled before the pulpit and receive a charge from the pastor. The same usage has been instituted in churches of the Suffolk South Conference, and elsewhere, as noticed in the "Miscellaneous Notes" below. One very impressive occasion is reported, when no less than thirty-one were thus recognized as under the church's care. Two churches of this conference report monthly sermons to the children. One distinctly proposes that "no neglecters shall be neglected." "The most cheering thing in this year's reports," says the Suffolk South committee, "is the frequent mention of special work with the young. Sunday-school work is steadily growing in skill and power. Never has so frequent mention been made of special labors of pastors to draw the children into early and intelligent experience of the work of the Holy Spirit." Elsewhere, within the State, the plan of organizing young people into "A Circle of Learners in the Christian Life" has been adopted, for the study of the grand facts which form the basis of Christian experience, and for the gradual preparation of the minds and hearts of the young for a public confession of faith. This seems a good name for a kind of vestibule, through which young people may find themselves, almost before they are aware, upon the very threshold of the church, and, in habits and character, ready for entrance. The religious newspapers have published accounts of a similar plan, under the style and title of "The Society of Christian Endeavor."

The effective education of the young and their early confirmation in all the habits and avowals of an open and an active Christian life are engaging the interest of pastors as never before, and seem to be among the most promising signs of the times.

OUT-DISTRICTS. — Only eight conferences make any mention of out-districts. Such imperfect returns it is not possible to collate into results of any value. The only important matter of fresh interest is the fact that the Hampshire East Conference employs a missionary, who labors with excellent success among the destitutions and with churches, under the direction of a committee of the conference. In connection with his labors, there have been conversions; backsliders have been reclaimed, — some of the cases having a very marked interest.

Your committee desire to call the attention of the Association to the imperfection of these reports as an instance of the correctness of what they have said in their Report on the Communion of the Churches.

The outpost labors of the churches of this State constitute a very important department of the work of its churches. To omit some adequate account of them would be a gross injustice to both pastors and churches. We ask the churches to note the importance of a complete report on outposts every year.

NEGLECTERS. — The following brief statements contain about all the facts and hints reported from the pastors, upon this topic, in addition to those noted under other heads. From one of the best towns of Franklin County comes the statement that the neglecters form about two fifths of the total population, including Romanists, — and three quarters of them are nominally connected with that church. Much effort is made in their behalf. Middlesex Union says, Neglecters are to be found in all the towns. They can be reached whenever the churches will. Norfolk reports them “of every sort, — those not in sympathy with evangelical truth, Universalists, Spiritualists, Nothingarians, rich and poor, native and foreign. Various efforts are made, and with some success.”

The pastor in South Abington has divided his parish into districts, with visitors to each. Like other manufacturing towns, this has a large floating class. We often find church members who do not present their letters. Through the district committees, the pastor receives the names of all the families not belonging to any other parish; and these are called upon, and encouraged to attend church and Sunday school. This effort has been quite successful. Plymouth reports about forty per cent neglecters. “The gospel is carried to them and all around them. If more can be done than is done, it is not apparent. The church has determined what neglecting families are properly within its own reach, and it does not neglect them.” From another town we hear: “The pastor visits all. There are none to whom the gospel is not carried.” From still another town essentially the same account reaches us. A third says, “There would be no difficulty in reaching neglecters if the members had a mind to work.” An experienced pastor writes: “The gospel can here be carried in the shape of groceries, coal, articles of clothing”; to which may be added, if carried, not sent. In Worcester Central, seven out of nine churches replying, think they can determine “the families properly within their reach.” The Central Church, Worcester, employs a lady as church missionary, who visits families recognized as under the church’s care. This proves a very efficient method for bringing children to the Sunday school, neglecters to prayer meetings and church, as well as for rendering a service of Christian help. From Worcester South comes a plaintive acknowledgment that descendants of many a family, once regular attendants, are now habitual neglecters, the chief reasons being a growing love of ease, the force of a bad habit, and lax views of the sacredness of the Sabbath. "Little is gained."

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES OF THE CHURCHES. — Berkshire South reports one church (Southfield) closed, and another (Sandisfield) as supplied with Baptist* preaching for some time, a matter which seems to call for the notice and inquiry of its sister churches. The report remarks: "Something must be done to sustain the weak churches of our hill towns, or else they will die out entirely." Hampden follows suit, with the record that Montgomery has ceased to hold public worship, other denominations occupying the ground; thus compelling us to ask, whether our denomination is not as well fitted as any other to cherish weak churches; and whether we are always as prompt with our effective sympathy and support as we should be. Why has Montgomery been given up?

Middlesex Union makes the record, that now all its churches, except one or two, have but one preaching service. Several have adopted Congregational singing, also responsive readings, adding much to the interest. Many have weekly offerings. Its churches are all in universally good condition. We hear also of responsive readings as having been introduced in some of the congregations of Norfolk and Worcester South Conferences, which also is known to be true of others in various parts of the State.

The report from Suffolk North institutes a comparison of the present condition of the churches with that of ten years ago, — 1881 with 1871. "Two churches have joined another conference; three have ceased to exist; five new ones have been organized. The membership has gained 721, an average of 72 yearly. The fifteen churches which were in the conference ten years ago have gained 1,010, or over twenty per cent. But the contributions show a surprising falling off. — from $40,909.73 to $27,380.98. But the year 1871 was the high-water mark in the benevolent gifts of the churches of the State, which were then larger than before or since. The Old South was at that time included in this conference, with charities of more than $11,000. Comparing the contributions of the thirteen churches reporting in both years, there appears, in 1881, a gain of $1,104.44; while the contributions of the State decreased about $100,000."

This report also furnishes interesting and instructive narratives of church work. We quote from two: —

THE FIRST begins by remarking upon the lack of acquaintance among the members of neighboring churches, and thinks that the Young Men's Christian Association and the Fellowship Meetings have both done good in promoting a better acquaintance.

The picture of the general religious condition of this parish is pleasant, and may be worth recording, as a specimen of our times. "The congregation is worshipful, old and young attending alike. The service of song is good. The exercises are: preaching at 10.30 A. M. and 3 P. M.; Sunday school at 1.45 P. M.; prayer meeting at 7,—a 'full Sabbath' The people appear to enjoy their Sabbath in worship; but regularity in attendance is not universal. The day is almost always impressive, spiritually restful, and has a manifest tendency to the promotion of peace and goodwill; and in conversions, this year has been effective. The religious culture and conversion of young people is the main effort of the church; and many, indeed most of them, are hopefully followers of Christ."

"The pastor makes it his duty to keep in sympathy with the young, and, from the time they reach the age of thirteen or fourteen, to gain, so far as possible, a personal influence with them, endeavors to attract them to the prayer meeting and the preaching, and tries to be attentive to their wishes and needs. The same spirit and endeavor characterize the habits of members of the church. For example: young men and young women, when out of employment, are helped to obtain places; others are aided in their school studies, or in independent courses of study and reading; any books which young people may desire to have in the Sunday-school library are purchased, if suitable,—as they always are; and the prayer-meeting topics for the present year were almost all selected by young people. at the written, personal request of the pastor."

THE SECOND reports: "The congregations and the Sunday school have increased in numbers during the year. The growth of the city partially accounts for this; but much is due to our careful and thorough system of visitation. The parish is divided into ten districts, each in charge of a visitor. These visitors are organized into a committee, with a chairman and secretary. They are expected to go over their districts as often as once in two months. Each has a pass-book, containing the names of families attending the church. In these books new names are entered and facts recorded, to be reported at the monthly meetings of the committee, and, if important, to the pastor. This committee is a stirring instrument to stir the church up to good works. It is the foundation of all that is good in our plan of work."

"The Monthly Concert Committee has made the concert the most popular meeting of the month. With careful attention to music, and to the securing of brief and thorough reports, a great body of young people has been drawn to attend. The missionary spirit has been much developed within the last two years. The Ladies' Missionary Society co-operates with boards of Foreign Missions, Home Missions, and the Freedmen. There is a flourishing society of young ladies, auxiliary to the Woman's Board. The Children's Missionary Society, in connection with the Pastor's Catechism Class, has continued to sustain a scholarship at Hampton, Va. The interest in the home work has grown relatively more than that in the work abroad. Half the time in the monthly concerts is given to home missions. The system of weekly offering for church support is continued another year, with great happiness and success. It secures one result, in no other way to be so fully attained,—the loyalty of the young people and the children. In our temperance work we still use the Church Total Abstinence Society, the Women's Union, and the Juvenile Temperance Union."

The Suffolk South tells us of the new Bible service of one of its churches, which thus secures more study, more worship, more interest, and a better attendance. The pastor prizes above all opportunities the ten or fifteen minutes at the close. A year's trial secured a unanimous vote to keep this, as the best arrangement for the afternoon. The pastor has a weekly class for inquirers and young converts. The church has its Children's Sunday, and presents Bibles to baptized children when seven years old. Jamaica Plain has pastor's classes for the young, for the purpose of teaching the little folks how to become disciples of the Lord, and instructing others in the nature and duties of church membership. For six months he had an attendance of from a hundred to a hundred and fifty on a course of lectures on the books of the Bible. Here, also, Bibles are given to baptized children when seven years old. The Boylston Church has defined the limits of its parish, by conference with other pastors, and all the ground is carefully gone over, from house to house, by the pastor, aided by three deaconesses, a city missionary, and special committees. A year's trial has caused the people to become greatly attached to the repetition, in the Sunday service, of the Apostles' Creed, and responsive readings. The Walnut Avenue Church, together with responsive readings, is practising the chanting of the Psalms. It finds a brief prayer meeting after the evening service helpful. Its prayer meetings have been improved in all respects by the appointment of committees who arrange printed lists of topics, secure a leader of the music, invite attendance, and provide several persons to take part. Its neighborhood meetings are large and interesting. This report speaks with praise of the Visitation Meetings held for two winters past among the Boston churches. Special mention is also made of daily union meetings during Passion Week. The Olivet Church divides its congregation into sixteen districts, each under a visitor. It holds the Communion once a month, followed by the Church Fellowship Meeting. On Sunday evening, at the close of the service, a Testimony Meeting is held. On Sunday afternoon, ordinarily vacant, there is occasionally a meeting of young people for personal conversation on the way of salvation. The church at Hyde Park reports that in the fifteen years of its present pastorate its numbers have increased from thirty-eight to five hundred and three; the Sunday school, from one hundred and twenty to four hundred and fifty; and that eighty-two out of its ninety communions have witnessed additions to the church. An excellent meeting-house and parsonage have been built, repeatedly improved, and all paid for.

It is not improper here to call attention to the admirable work which the Congregational churches of Boston and vicinity are doing through their City Missionary Society, with its twenty-three missionaries. Its receipts last year were $19,567.13; for charities, $11,249.65; total, $30,816.78. The ten years ending in 1879, compared with the ten years ending in 1850, show an increase of from five to seven fold in labors and benevolence; and the opinion has been expressed by an able religious statistician of another denomination, the Rev. Daniel Dorchester, D. D., that "it is probably the most thoroughly organized, intelligent, and spiritual body of laborers in the United States." It affords one of the best examples to be anywhere found of a good work well done. Its report for the year 1881, prepared by its secretary, Rev. Albert H. Plumb, D. D., ought to be in the hands of all the pastors. The work is too large to be fitly set forth here. Though strictly a part of the work of the churches, we must refer those interested in it to the society's own documents.

The net gain of the Essex South churches last year was but two; in 1880, the net loss was five; and in 1879, it was eighteen. Several parishes are declining in numbers. "After all allowances, a deplorable record." "It shows some radical fault in our methods," adds the report. "May we not all humble ourselves before God?"

The North Church, Lynn, reports a liturgical service, embracing the following parts: Organ Voluntary and Anthem; Responsive Reading from the Psalms; the Lord's Prayer; the Gloria Patri; the Apostles' Creed and the Te Deum. "We find," the pastor remarks, "that people like participation in the service. The liturgy is the property of the whole church. It belonged to the mother of us all, before the Episcopal daughter assumed the legacy." The pastor teaches a class in the Sunday school called the Waiting Class, and composed of those waiting for the children. Fifty persons are sometimes present in it. He also reports an Evening Bible Service, in which he is assisted by a chorus of forty voices; and he says of it, as David of Goliath's sword, "There is none like that: give it me." In this Conference, the trend of opinion is toward only one preaching service, a separate Sunday-school service, and a prayer meeting, Bible service, in the evening; also, responsive readings and congregational singing are gaining ground.

REVIVALS AND RELIGIOUS INTEREST. — The Centre Church, Haverhill, reports special religious interest. "The Week of Prayer brought out very large and interesting meetings, which were continued for some weeks. The hearts of Christians were made glad by the turning to the Lord of some who immediately engaged in definite work, in which they still continue." The number quickened and strengthened is quite considerable. To the North Church, Newburyport, the year was one "of signal blessing." The Week of Prayer developed an interest which continued in special meetings held for five weeks, resulting in twelve or more hopeful conversions, and a general quickening of the church. The benefit was felt through the year. Much interest was awakened among the young, which still continues. In West Newbury, First, — a church long in a depressed condition, — there were fifteen additions; and the prospects of the church, both spiritual and temporal, have greatly improved. In Berkshire North there was a revival at Adams, resulting, so far as reported, in the addition of fifty-eight persons to the church, on confession. From Franklin County is reported an interesting revival in Greenfield, Second, This also began with the Week of Prayer. There was preaching for a time every evening, and about seventy-five hopeful conversions; twenty-one persons had already united with the church.

A number of the churches of Hampden County were blessed with seasons of special interest. At Indian Orchard, fifty-six were received to the church; at the Hope Church, Springfield, forty-nine; by the Second Longmeadow, twenty-eight; the Mittineague, West Springfield, twenty-six; and the Union, at Three Rivers, eighteen. In all these fields the work was general, and lifted the community to a much higher spiritual plane. These five churches added no less than one hundred and seventy-seven to their membership; the remaining thirty-two added only eighty-nine. Mid-dlesex Union reports special interest at Townsend and Lunenburg, — nine, all children, having been received at the former, — and additions at every communion to churches in Fitchburg and Leominster. From the Norfolk Conference, the Second Church, Attleborough, reports that in the autumn of 1880, its church work was systematized with much detail. The most efficient of the committees was the Prayer-Meeting Committee. This committee held private meetings to pray for the descent of the Spirit, to talk over the best methods for making the prayer meetings interesting and fruitful, and to divide among themselves the work of bringing back wayward or inactive church members. The work was performed with quiet faithfulness and wisdom, and results were soon apparent. In November and December, the tide of interest rose higher and higher. In January, the church united with its Methodist neighbor in union meetings, held for five days. Three brethren of the Young Men's Christian Association joined the pastors in labors for ten days. There were about fifty conversions in that time. One hundred persons in all gave evidence of renewal. The work was very quiet, exceptionally free from emotional excitement. In the Congregational Church, at least, there has been no reaction. The increased attendance at prayer meetings has been maintained with the highest degree of activity, and the most affectionate relations between pastor and people. The church is in a better condition than for years.

Still again, in connection with the Week of Prayer, the Church of the Pilgrimage, Plymouth, "is grateful to say that a special interest was awakened which resulted in about twenty-five conversions, mostly among the young members of the Sunday school. Meetings on Tuesday afternoon and during four week-day evenings were held for several weeks. It was a quiet, genuine work."

The churches of the Suffolk North added one hundred and eighteen on confession. Special interest was enjoyed in the Maverick Church, resulting in twenty-seven additions; also in the North Avenue Church, Cambridge, with "conversions not a few"; and in the Highland Church.

In the Suffolk South, the church at Dedham "began the year with an earnest determination to call upon God until he sent a blessing. Besides general prayer meetings, small circles of those of the same age and sex met regularly. Soon a thoughtful and tender spirit appeared among the unconverted. Then, for a while, at almost every meeting of the young men and young women by themselves, new confessions were heard. A revival more quiet, more genuine, more free from reaction, we have never seen. Twenty three young people united with the church, and the end is not yet." Saundersville, in Worcester South, reports a quiet and encouraging work of grace among those from ten to eighteen years of age, with some older. There was only faithful Sunday-school teaching and plain and pointed preaching, — no unusual efforts.

From Essex South, the pastor of the Lunenburg church writes that a revival of considerable power came, as a blessing on preaching that was plainer and closer than usual. In Gloucester, the Week of Prayer opened a season of interest. The churches were aided by a brother from the Young Men's Christian Association, who conducted union meetings of three denominations for two weeks, in afternoons and evenings. There were many hopeful conversions. Forty have united with the Congregational Church, and others will doubtless follow.

CONCLUSION.

Such is the story of 1881, so far as told in reports to this committee. It is not a remarkable history, and yet the year, all things considered, cannot be accounted an unprosperous year. Financially it has been excellent, while in labors it has certainly been abundant, ingenious, wise, and hopeful. It has laid foundations for greater things than now appear.

The following points of especial importance are brought to view in the foregoing narrative:—

I. The obvious practicability of a definition of the parishes of our churches, by which every church knows with almost perfect exactness the bounds of its responsibility; also the importance of this knowledge as a reminder to duties otherwise likely to be forgotten, and as a suggestion of the simple organization that is often necessary to their fulfilment.

II. The Communion of Churches in work: (1.) The actual co operation of the churches of the same town. (2.) Mutual assistance of churches of neighboring towns. To which may be added: (3) Assistance rendered by conferences to their feeble churches. (4.) The Communion of Churches in regard to their work, as in "Fellowship Meetings."

III. The value of the system of weekly (or monthly) offerings. In many communities this is plainly very great.

IV. The advantage of using the Psalms in our Sabbath services; either in the form of responsive readings, according to the parallelism, or in a Congregational chant.

To which may be added the recital of the old Aposto'ic Creed, and of the Lord's Prayer.

V. The custom of a public presentation of Bibles by the church to its baptized children, upon their reaching the age of seven years, with suitable forms and services.

VI. The systematic instruction of young people in the great topics of the Christian faith and Christian living, with a view to a better preparation for admission to the church, — as in Circles of Learners in the Christian Life, and in Societies of Christian Endeavor.

Other topics are brought forward in this committee's Report on the Communion of the Churches.

We close with a single recommendation, — That the General Association request the Provisional Committee of next year to assign to the State Committee on the Work of the Churches the duty of selecting the topics and arranging the programme for the Wednesday-morning meeting.

By vote of the State Committee,

DANIEL P. NOYES, Secretary.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL AND THE CHURCH.

BY SMITH BAKER, LOWELL.

THERE are in the United States quite seven millions of Sunday-school scholars, and nearly one million of Sunday-school teachers. From these schools, during the past year, there came into the evangelical churches of America about one hundred and forty thousand members. Such a record reveals that the Sunday school is not a mere pastime for the exercise of a goodish zeal, but an institution of such proportions and work as to rightfully claim and receive the best culture, the ripest wisdom, and the most devoted spirit of God's people. It is no longer an experiment or a charitable manifestation of pity for poor and neglected children, or a kind of annex to the other services of the Lord's day; but it has become an institution, next to the sanctuary in importance and claims upon the Christian heart.

We are not at this time to discuss how it has become such, but to recognize the fact. Like a child, it has come into the arms of the church, opening its eyes, stretching its limbs, and asking to be fed. It is too late to discuss whether we ought to have Sunday schools, or whether we will have them. We have them. The only question now is, How much shall we make of them? God has thought best in this era of his advancing kingdom to bring them forward as a new means of grace and of evangelizing the world. Will the church accept the trust in all its fulness and unfolding power, or allow it to struggle for its life and waste its possibilities? While Christian truth, like the "Incarnate Truth," changes not, but is the same yesterday, to-day, and forever, the forms of presenting the truth, like Christ himself, do change with the revolving centuries, and unfold with the incoming years. While there is a permanent, eternal truth, there is no permanent, unchanging way of presenting the truth. As the life of the tree is the same in the roots and branches and twigs, and from year to year, but its manifestations are new each budding spring, so with truth. This is the mission of new ways to give old truths freshness, as the summer brings out a new beauty from the old roots. The Sunday school has not attained to a perfect way of working, but, like nature, at this hour, is in its blooming fruit-forming period. We cannot push it back or root it out. We must either nurture or stifle its possibilities.

There are four ways the modern Puritan church has of teaching the truth: 1. In the voice of the living preacher proclaiming the Word. 2. In the Sunday school, with its social exegetical study of the Word. 3. In the social meetings of the church, with their experimental testimonies to the truth of the Word. 4. In the Christian press penetrating to hearts and places where the preacher, the school, and the assembly of the saints do not carry the Word. The pulpit is first; the Sunday school its right-hand support; the prayer meeting its left-hand support; and the Christian press the assistant of each. The Sunday school is not a substitute, but an institution of itself, with its own mission. It is not a substitute for the Christian nurture of the family, but supplements and helps the family. Those parents most faithful in the family are most faithful in the Sunday school; and though now and then a parent may be found who neglects the religious culture of the home because of what is done in the Sunday school, such a one reveals so much the more that the culture of such homes needs the Sunday school as a supplement. The true, ideal school should and does assist the Christian nurture of the true, ideal home. The school, in a most necessary manner, supplements the Christian education of those families, and many of them professing Christian families, where there is no direct religious education. Where the home neglects the spiritual nurture of its children, shall not the church become their religious mother? The Sunday school interfering with Christian family culture! As well speak of the pulpit interfering with the closet, — rather as the pulpit brings the closet into a more intelligent communion with God, yea, as the pulpit establishes a closet of prayer where there was none before, so the Sunday school quickens and makes home instruction.

Again, the Sunday school is not to be a substitute for the pulpit and the sanctuary. No sentiment is much more pernicious than “The pulpit for adults, and the Sunday school for children.” Both are for all. The adult who is young enough to attend church is young enough to be in the Sunday school; and the child who is old enough to be in the Sunday school is old enough to attend church. Neither class is to be excused from either place, but if either institution is to give way to the other, the Sunday school should give way to the pulpit. The sanctuary is first, and if man, woman, or child, for good reasons, cannot attend both, the preaching is to be chosen before the school. If the child can attend but one, let that one be the preaching of God’s Word by his ordained ministry. The impression made by worship and the place of worship upon the young heart is worth more in the formation of character and the fixing of right tendencies than any special lesson teachings of the school; but in a well and properly regulated family and church these do not conflict with but assist each other. All such questions as, What hour shall the school be held? and, How much time shall be given to it? are of a purely local nature, to be decided by each church, so as to reach the greatest number of persons consistent with the best work to be done.

The Sunday school is a substitute for the absence of religious instruction in the secular school. The time was when the Word of God received at least a respectable recognition in the common school, the academy, and the college; but more and more such instruction has disappeared from our institutions of learning, until the most of our denominational schools have as little religious teaching as the purely State universities. Indeed, it is a question with many thoughtful minds, Why have denominational schools, where in so many of them there is much less fear of any positive religious teaching than in purely State schools? If it is contrary to the spirit of a republic that its schools should teach from the oracles of any religion, then God, seeing the logical result of democratic government, has raised up the Sunday school, placing it in the hands of the church to do what the State cannot, or at least will not, do. If the children of our land are to receive religious instruction, it must be from the Sunday school. The necessity is upon us. What the State has given up, the church must take up. Secular education in our country knows nothing of religion. In severing the church from the State, we have taken religion from the public schools. There is a sad inconsistency between the energy and money spent to increase and endow schools of literature and science and the little given for religious culture.

Again, the Sunday school comes as God's answer to the demand created by the universal revival in Bible study. God's Word was never before studied so much or so well as at the present time. More Bibles are bought and owned, more commentaries are made and used, than ever before. The best minds in all branches of the church are giving their best culture to its critical exposition, and the best men and women in all our churches are teaching these results of the best scholarship. The secular newspapers are scattering not less than one million expositions of the Sunday-school lesson each week, and more than five million lesson helps and question books are scattered among the people each week. During the last year, in our land, not less than six thousand conventions and institutes for the discussion and exemplification of Sunday-school ways and means have been held, or more than one hundred each week, or sixteen each day, making in all about sixteen years of conventions in one year; all of which is a revelation of the position Bible study and the Sunday school have attained to in our Christian activities. The church or the denomination who now by unsympathetic neglect provide not for the Sunday school in their plans and labors, will themselves fall behind in usefulness, growth, and rewards. One fourth of the Congregational churches in our land are without a Sunday school, and while the Methodists raise yearly for Sunday-school work and publications nearly $120,000, and the Baptists nearly $90,000, and the Presbyterians about $76,000, the Congregationalists raised last year less than $6,000.

Notice, also, the Sunday school is, and is to be, more and more the home-missionary arm of the church. Not a kind of dove-cot appendage to follow behind home missions, but a John the Baptist of the frontier church. Our nation, filling up with emigrants as it is, is not to be saved to Christ by preaching to adults alone, whose beliefs and habits are formed, but these increasing millions are to be Americanized and Christianized through their children by means of the Sunday school.

Men correctly tell us that in the new States and Territories we must plant the Christian academy and college, but an hundred-fold more we need to plant at once, upon every mountain-side and in every valley of our new-forming States, the Christian Sunday school, to save not only the statesmen, but the common working men and women who are to be the fathers, mothers, and voters of the next generation. We should not value the college any the less, but the Sunday school more; for the hope of our nation is not in the classical education of the few, but the Biblical instruction of the masses. Not only in the new portions of our country, but in this city, and all our cities and towns in New England, with the unsaved multitudes of our new population, the missionary arm of the Church is the Sunday school. The constant change which is taking place in the character of our population is un-New-Englandizing our people; and, if the incoming generations of our laboring masses do not revolutionize our religious character, it will be because the present generation gather the children of these masses into the Sunday school and teach them the Word of Life. Harvard and Yale, and Amherst and Dartmouth and Bowdoin, cannot secure New England to herself. The work must be done lower down, among the children of the uneducated. New England is to-day her own most important mission field. The instinct of self-preservation rolls this responsibility upon the churches.

In the sure revolvings of a democratic government, social, financial, and political power is constantly changing. As with the paddles in the wheel of a great steamer, those which are up now are next down, and those which are down now are next up. In a republic, those families now on top in social life will in a generation or two be at the bottom, and those now at the bottom will come to the top. The future leading men in commerce, state, and church are not to come from the homes of education and wealth, but from the cottages of the poor, the laboring man, and the widow. Boys who, in the struggle for life and with life, gain strength of will, are to push one side the sons of wealth and culture. The future mothers, who are to give to our country the men for the time to come, are not the daughters in our cultured Christian homes, but the maidens from the families of the poor, whose ambition is less for art and more for motherhood. The church which is to be strongest in the future is the one which shall gather into its instructions and hold most by its sympathies the children of the poor.

The relation, then, of the Sunday school to the church is that of a child to its mother, and it claims the deepest love and best nurture the mother can bestow. This best nurture includes the best management. The government of the school should never be committed to the school itself, or even to the teachers of the school, but always be in the hands of the church, that the church may place in it and over it the best minds and most consecrated hearts, the highest examples of Christian manhood and womanhood in her membership; and these selected men and women should be held responsible to and report to the church concerning the trust committed to their keeping.

This nurture includes also an abundant supply of means. The financial support of the school should not be left to the pennies of the children or the self-imposed tax of the teachers, but, next to the pulpit, it should receive the first attention in the financial plans of the parish. It is too true, however, that in most of our societies more money is raised for church music than for Bible instruction, and in many of them more is paid for the services of one graceless member of a quartet than for all Sunday-school expenses. This nurture also includes the best opportunities for work, the best rooms, the best chairs and seats, the best maps and charts, the best ways and seasons. It requires not a little grace for an adult Christian to enjoy Sunday-school work with the inconvenient means given. How much more disagreeable, then, for an unsaved child to come from a pleasant to an unpleasant room for the study of God's Word! This nurture includes the best teaching, not only in matter but in manner. The most of our teachers are common men and common women from the common walks of life, with common intelligence and the most limited preparation in the art of teaching. The church is in all possible ways to throw about these good men and women the means of learning how to teach as well as what to teach. We cannot raise the standard of the truth to be taught, for the Word of the Lord is perfect; but we can elevate the manner of the teaching, and so lift the character of the work done. No teacher should be permitted to feel that he confers a favor upon the school in becoming a teacher, but rather that he is honored in being permitted to be a teacher. This nurture includes an official recognition by and connection with the church as a part of its organized form of Christian labor.

Mission schools should be branches of the church school over which the church has control.

Distinct mission schools are not to be encouraged except in such communities as are at too great a distance from the church school for the children to attend. Of all children, those of non-church-going parents need most to be brought under the influence of a church home, which is not done on the independent mission plan. No pupil should feel he is a mission scholar, but a real member of the church school. We sometimes heathenize pupils by treating them as heathen. If your church school will not receive into its membership those for whom mission schools are intended, then reorganize, and make the mission school the church school and the church school the mission school, and you will come nearer to Christ and the Christian idea.

Mission schools are generally failures, unless they lead to the church,—the good they seem to do will be but transient. In certain localities of our larger cities they may be needed; but there they should always be branch schools, leading the children to some church home.

Return to the thought that the home-mission and local-mission work of our churches must be mainly done through the children, and we see the need, not only of the preacher, but of the "Sunday-school man,"—the trained Sunday-school man. The time was—not far in the past—when to be known as a Sunday-school man endangered one's standing for ability; but that day is fast passing away, though even now too many of our would-be leading men look down upon it as well enough for superficial and young men, while they discuss greater questions pertaining to the flood and prehistoric man.

The Sunday-school men must mainly be found among the pastors, who, while on the one hand they proclaim God's message, shall, on the other, be the shepherd of the lambs and the leader of the people, organizing and drilling them in what and how to teach.

Our home missionaries need much more to be men who can reach and organize the people into the study of God's Word than they do to understand German philosophy. Even in New England, four times in six, it must be the pastor who shall give character and efficiency to the Sunday school, and in our mission fields the proportion is larger; but it is safe to say that one half of our pastors are the most inefficient of organizers and Sunday-school men. The inability or indisposition of some of our educated men to do practical work is one of the greatest weaknesses of our denomination. To lift culture above sense is a mistaken culture. The denomination which is to possess our land is not the one which shall be most careful to publish a little of the best literature or give away a few thousand of the best books, but the one who shall organize and sustain the most Sunday schools. The church of the future which shall have the wealth, the brains, and the hearts of the coming generations is the one which shall most reach the masses through their children. This fact should give a recognition of the Sunday school and its mission at Bangor, Andover, Yale, and Chicago, with a course of lectures, so that our new pastors who go out to lead God's people shall be leaders of men, not simply in what to teach, but how to teach, — not only in “substance of doctrine,” but in organized practical work; for the great need of our times is not some new and more happy presentation of truth, but more efficient leading of God's people in ways of work. The old truths are new enough; it is the old ways that have become rusty.

There should be a network of Sunday-school institutes from Maine to California, for the help of the common men and women who with limited culture and time are seeking to do the best they can as teachers of God's Word. The pastors must mainly do this in connection with their own teachers, and help do it in connection with such other pastors as their wisdom shall dictate. Instead of one Sunday-school bishop stretching himself from one end of the land to the other, there should be a dozen of them, not correcting proof-sheets behind a screen at the Congregational House, but in the field, organizing and drilling and arousing our pastors and teachers to better work; and instead of the small sum of $5,000, there should be $200,000 for the pushing of this foundation work.

Again, the Sunday school should have an official recognition in our church gatherings. The next most important officer to the pastor in the church is the Sunday-school superintendent. He represents the hopes of the future. Let the office have a recognition in our church meetings. Let the superintendent be a standing member of our local conference, as the pastor is. Such would be good Congregationalism. In our county and State conferences give at least one half a day each year to the consideration of Sunday-school ways and means. The laughing-time at Sunday schools is past. Its serious time has come. No form of aggressive church activities demands more earnest, generous, intelligent, and prayerful attention. None comes closer to the hearts of the people; none is more pleasing to Christ; none more hopeful. Its days of gush are gone. Its time of work is here. The children are coming. The tramp of their feet and the ring of their voices are heard upon the threshold of our churches; and the Christian culture of children is the question which will not go down, but presses more and more upon the attention of the church; and defeat, yea, shame, will rest upon that denomination which goes not out to meet and receive them.

Dr. Mitchell, at the Pan-Presbyterian Alliance in Philadelphia, said: “To a closer intimacy with Sunday schools, general assemblies and presbyteries are now calling our sessions and pastors. Every assembly in America, and in some branches of the church, nearly every presbytery, has its special committee on Sunday schools, and devotes a special session to their interest. A few of the choicest and most practised of our ministers have been set apart by the church to give to this work their undivided care. They are travelling from the Atlantic to the Pacific, seeking by institutes and conventions and normal classes, and by addressing synods and presbyteries, to inspire all pastors and teachers with their zeal, and direct them to the best methods of labor. It is by such ecclesiastical recognition and nurture as this, given by pastors and sessions and presbyteries, and by helpful means, sustained and commissioned by the church, — it is by these means our schools are to grow, and to grow in loving union with the churches.” To all of which our hearts respond a warm amen.

When thus the local church and the collective churches give to the Sunday school an official recognition from bottom to top, then the people will see its worth, feel its importance, love its aim, and cherish it in their prayers. The schools themselves will become safe in their teaching, efficient in their means, correct in their methods, and successful in their results; and then will be realized the true order of Christian nurture.

First, the family, — from the family to the sanctuary, — from the sanctuary to the Sunday school, — from the Sunday school to the communion table, — from the communion table to a life of Christian endeavor, — and from a life of Christian endeavor to the home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens.

THE DUTY OF THE CHURCHES IN REFERENCE TO THE ORGANIZATION OF NEW CHURCHES.

BY JAMES WHITE, BOSTON.

THE work of organizing new churches is specially important in view of both the rapid increase of our population and the constantly occurring changes in its location. During the last thirty years people have been congregating in the centres of business. From our hill towns and farms and from other lands they have poured into our cities and villages. The boundaries of these are being extended constantly over fresh territory to provide for the new population and to replace the homes which have yielded to the increasing demands of business. Besides, on our railroads and along our water-courses, new cities and villages are occasionally springing up.

The religious need of every such new community, of sufficient size, can only be met by a promptly organized Christian church. The colporteur and the Sunday school may prepare the way for its formation, but no institution can ever be a substitute for it. Not only does the new community imperatively need the church with its ordinances and all its various appliances, but the cause of Christ equally needs the favorable opportunity then presented, as it can never be again, to lay well her foundations there.

But who shall undertake the work and undertake it at the right time? The church to be formed usually requires that some men of established character and influence withdraw from a neighboring church and identify themselves with the new enterprise. The men wanted for leaders in the new church will surely be missed from the old. Those who are associated with them in church fellowship and work, and who appreciate their worth, are not likely to be listening for the call which takes their associates to another field of Christian effort.

Many favorable opportunities have been lost because new churches were not organized at the right time. Many mistakes have been made by the organization of churches where they were not needed and where they weakened the neighboring churches, from which they drew their first members. Sometimes the new organization, though formed at the right time and place, has not received sufficient strength from the old, and one or both have permanently suffered in consequence.

Some years ago it was evident to all that the time had come for the division of the only Congregational church in a large and growing New England village. The pastor warmly seconded the movement; but it was said that he used his strong personal influence to prevent the removal to the new church of every desirable parishioner. His language to a friend in a neighboring town, with whom he was conversing on the subject, was, "Every house must have its sink."

The new church settled as its pastor one of the ablest and most acceptable ministers of our communion, but both churches have suffered from that day to this. — the one because it did not give, and the other because it did not receive sufficient financial, social, and spiritual strength.

The work of organizing new churches requires the unbiassed judgment of men of experience and wisdom. This our conferences can furnish. Every conference can have a permanent committee, consisting of men qualified for the work and interested in it, and who shall hold the position as long as practicable. They should be men of established character and influence. Their action would be mainly in the way of suggestion and counsel, but need not be for this reason less effective and useful. They should judge of the need and place for the new church and the means necessary. They could render a decision which would be sustained by the common sentiment of the whole conference. The duty of organizing and participating actively in the work will of course devolve upon the church and individuals of the neighborhood. The aim should be to combine in every case the best judgment which the churches of the conference can furnish and the hearty and liberal co-operation of those who ought to lead personally in the work, and to enlist, as far as possible, the whole community to be benefited by it.

If a committee of each conference should give to this service the requisite thought and effort, the value of its work would soon make its usefulness evident. It would come to have great influence, and few churches would be formed without its sanction. Less mistakes would be made by organizing churches where and when not needed, and when not expedient. Fewer favorable opportunities would be lost. Churches begun under such auspices would have the moral support of the whole Christian public. The money, and the social and moral strength required, could be more easily secured at the start. The spiritual force of our denomination would be better distributed and more wisely directed for progressive Christian work.

Again, in combined action for this purpose, the churches can do something to teach men the value of the church, as compared with other organizations, for doing Christ's work. They can impress upon them the fact that the church is the institution of his own appointment, which he honors with his perpetual presence and power. As a denomination, we have been conspicuous for our readiness to unite with almost all others in establishing and maintaining organizations, which at the best can do only inferior work. Should we not be more zealous in giving to new and growing communities, at the favorable time, a church of that order which has done so much for us, and which, with an enlarged knowledge of the truth, can do even more for others?

Again, the churches in combined action can do much indirectly for this cause by developing a stronger denominational sentiment. By timely discussion attention can be directed to the importance of sustaining our own societies and institutions. Our Sunday School and Publishing Society is a case in point. Properly equipped, as it ought to be, and that speedily, and then supported by the denomination, it would do valuable work in preparing the way for the establishment of new churches.

And finally, the churches can aid in this cause by stimulating the definite work of church extension. It is a service in which laymen of influence and wealth can be specially useful. In 1828 there was a feeling in Boston that there ought to be another church of our order at the northern part of the city. Deacon Safford left Park Street Church to join others in forming Salem Church on Salem Street. After seven years he returned to Park Street, having first raised by subscription sufficient money to pay the debt of Salem Church. In two months he left Park Street again to assist in organizing what is now known as the Central Church. This church gained strength so rapidly, that after two years, in 1837, he returned again to Park Street. In 1843 he left Park Street again to join others in organizing Mt. Vernon Church. Most churches in recent years do not willingly spare such men, much less encourage them to connect themselves with a new enterprise. But with a true appreciation of the work, and a proper enthusiasm in it, such a record as this would not be so exceptional.

THE DUTY OF THE CHURCHES IN REGARD TO DESTITUTE LOCALITIES IN THE RURAL DISTRICTS.

BY WASHINGTON GLADDEN, SPRINGFIELD.

“THE duty of the churches in regard to destitute localities” is to supply them with the gospel. It is a shame to us that in our two hundred and sixty-second year of the occupation of this territory there are any destitute localities in city or country; any neighborhoods in which sufficient privileges of worship are not put within the reach of all; any populations to whom the gospel invitation is not statedly spoken. The destitute localities ought to be evangelized.

The branch of this topic assigned to me respects destitute localities in the rural districts, — the difficulties and methods of evangelizing these. I shall assume that the large towns — those of from five to ten thousand inhabitants — belong with the cities in this classification, the conditions in these large towns being substantially the same as in the cities. All that I am concerned with, therefore, is the problem of evangelization in the smaller country towns.

The difficulties are first to be considered.

1. The people of most of these small towns are widely scattered, and not easily collected for religious services.

2. Many of these towns are steadily diminishing in population; the young and enterprising remove to the West or to the larger places; many farms are abandoned or neglected; the tendency of real estate is downward; and a feeling of discouragement respecting the future pervades the community.

3. While these populations have been diminishing in the way I have described, portions of them have been undergoing a process of degeneration. Many of the more enterprising citizens have gone away; but there is a class of the stupid-shiftless, who never have energy enough to get very far away from the place where they were born: they are too lazy to walk away, and they never save money enough to pay to be carried very far; so they needs must stay. You will find nests of such families here and there upon our New England hills. Some of our oldest families they are too. They have descended from a thriftless and vicious ancestry. Out of this degenerating stock come some of the worst specimens of humanity that the land contains. The most thoroughly brutalized human beings that I ever saw I found upon the hills of Berkshire, when I used to explore them. They were native Americans. Their ancestors had lived for more than a hundred years in the same neighborhood. They dwelt upon the mountain-side in cabins, unfurnished and utterly squalid. The manner of their subsistence was a problem hard to solve. This class is not large; but I fear that it is increasing. Its representatives are found in most towns, and are the perpetrators of many of the beastly crimes that disgrace the rural districts. Those who have read Dr. Dugdale's terrible treatise will remember that "The Jukes" were native Americans. The difficulty of reaching and evangelizing the people of this class will at once be recognized.

4. An aggravated type of sectarianism is another obstacle in the way of Christian work in the smaller towns. The petty peculiarities of the sect are generally regarded in these communities as "great principles"; and the number of those who refuse to sacrifice the cause of Christ to the idols of their tribe is, unhappily, not very large.

5. As a consequence, numerous weak churches often divide a small population among them. There are scores of towns with a thousand inhabitants or less that have from three to five churches.

6. The feebleness of these churches results in short pastorates and long vacancies. Mr Woodbury's report on this subject, read at the last meeting of the National Council, makes this plain. A lack of intelligent and vigorous leadership in occupying the waste places is therefore inevitable.

7. Many of these churches are themselves receiving aid from the home-missionary funds of their several denominations, and the habit of dependence does not always foster missionary enterprise.

One of the young men of my church has collected the ecclesiastical statistics of several of the towns of our own county, in which there is food for thought. Let me give you the story of one of the best of these towns, premising that, so far as the figures are estimates, they are those of the pastors of the several churches, and are not, therefore, likely to be underestimated. The town has an area of nineteen square miles; is, therefore, about four miles and a half square. Its population in 1880 was nine hundred and fifty-seven. It supports four churches, each of which has now a pastor, — Congregational, Baptist, Methodist, and Roman Catholic. Each of the churches has a house of worship, and the four are close together on the village street. The strongest of these churches, numerically, is the Roman Catholic, if its pastor's figures are to be trusted; and, after making allowance for some overstatement, it will still be true that this church has much the largest membership and much the largest congregation. The town contains a considerable manufacturing village, and the operatives are largely Roman Catholics. The membership of these churches is as follows: Methodist, 58; Baptist, 65; Congregational, 120 (of whom 37 are a sent); Roman Catholic, 220. The average attendance on a pleasant Sunday, as estimated by the pastors, is: Methodist, 90; Baptist, 50; Congregational, 100; Roman Catholic, 290. Of Sunday-school scholars there are, in the Methodist school, 35; in the Baptist, 35; in the Congregational, 75; in the Roman Catholic, 100. The Methodists have sometimes one and sometimes two services on Sunday; the Baptists and Congregationalists each have two services besides the Sunday school. The Roman Catholic population must number at least 300, leaving but little over 600 souls to be divided among the three Protestant churches. It is not necessary to say that the pastorates of churches like these must ordinarily be short, and the vacancies long; that the work of reaching the out-districts and rescuing the neglecters from heathenism must be fitfully and partially done. The present pastor of the Congregational church is a man of rare qualities of mind and heart, and he has stuck to his post now six years, doing faithful service; but his pastorate is a great exception in the recent history of this church. And it is easy to conjecture the ways in which he is hampered by slender support, by the weakness of his church, and by the jealousies of sect.

Such are some of the more obvious and common difficulties with which the evangelization of the rural districts is environed. There are exceptional neighborhoods in which these conditions are not found; but in these neighborhoods there are no serious difficulties.

What now are the methods to be employed in the evangelization of the rural districts?

The employment of evangelists by the county conferences is sometimes resorted to. There may be circumstances under which this is the wisest course; but it seems to me better as a rule to enlist in this work the membership of the local churches. If there were only enough of sweet reasonableness and consecration among the Christians of these local churches to bring about the abandonment of part of their organizations and the consolidation of their forces, strength enough would be developed for the occupation and cultivation of some, at least, of these neglected districts. And it is not clear that any method of evangelization will prove efficient, or secure any permanent results, that does not start with the earnest purpose of healing the deplorable divisions among the Christians in the smaller towns, and of consolidating their strength for the work that lies about them. If they have not enough of the spirit of Christ to sacrifice their small denominational preferences for this great gain, it is to be feared that they have not enough of his spirit to do any valuable service for him; and not only so, there is great reason to apprehend that the narrowness and unloveliness of their temper would do much to neutralize any efforts that might be made by others for the salvation of the heathen of the vicinage whom they in their schisms have left to perish.

The first step to be taken, therefore, toward the reclamation of these waste places ought to be a patient and resolute endeavor to bring the Christians in their neighborhood into unity and co-operation. I am not sanguine enough to believe that this could be done in a day; but I believe that if the Congregationalists of this Commonwealth were in earnest about it, and were willing to take the pains and make the sacrifices necessary to secure it, very important gains in this direction could be gathered before long. And perhaps the Congregationalists might find some work of this sort near their own doors. Seventeen towns of this State, none of which has a population of over 1,400, — the average population of which is exactly 1,101, — have each two Congregational churches. Probably the list could be extended. One town, with a population of 1,855, has three Congregational churches; one, with a population of 2,237, has five Congregational churches. In some of these cases the distances between the churches are considerable; but an extra mile of travel is a small price to pay for an efficient church. It is plain that the Congregationalists must cast a few meeting-houses out of their own eyes before they can proceed to cast any notes out of the eyes of the Methodists.

If we could have in the neighborhood of each of these destitute places one united, efficient, consecrated church, a church full of the spirit of Christ, the destitute places would soon be evangelized. Such a church would find methods of doing the work and ways of overcoming the difficulties. It would be ready to content itself with one sermon a Sunday, that its pastor might preach Christ in the distant neighborhoods during other parts of the day; it would organize itself into working bands and carry the gospel to the districts remote from its sanctuary. Such a church might be formed in every such locality, if those who profess to be the disciples of Christ were willing to be, what those of Antioch were called, Christians. And I believe that the work of securing this unity and co-operation is the work to which the churches represented in this body are called of God. If Congregationalism has any function, it is to be the solvent of this tough and bitter sectarianism, — to lead in the work of healing the schisms by which in the whole land, but especially in the rural districts, the church is shorn of its power. To do this work we must be willing to make sacrifices, to part with many historic churches, to lose our denominational life, in more than one place, for Christ's sake and the gospel's. I trust that our knowledge of the spiritual laws is clear enough to enable us to see that this way lie not only duty but peace and prosperity and power.

RULES OF THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION.

I. NAME. — This body shall be called THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF MASSACHUSETTS.

II. OBJECT. — Its object is to secure Christian union, fellowship, and intercourse among the ministers and churches ; promote spirituality, and to co-operate with one another and with other ecclesiastical bodies in advancing the Redeemer's kingdom.

III. DOCTRINAL BASIS. — This Association agrees to the Declaration of Faith adopted by the National Council of Congregational Churches in the year 1865, the doctrines therein set forth being understood by us to be distinctly those which from the beginning have been embraced by the churches of New England as the doctrines of the gospel.

IV. DENOMINATIONAL BASIS. — Being based exclusively upon Congregational principles, this Association shall under no circumstances exercise ecclesiastical authority over churches or individuals, or interfere with the government or discipline of the churches, or consent to hear appeals, or give advice in ecclesiastical causes of any kind.

V. MEMBERS. — Each District Association of ministers, consenting to the principles above stated, may appoint, annually, two delegates, each to serve two years ; and each District Conference of Churches, also so consenting, may appoint, annually, three delegates, who shall be laymen, each to serve two years ; which delegates, with the Secretary, Registrar, Treasurer, and the pastor of the church with which the annual session is held, shall compose the General Association. Delegates from corresponding bodies, ministers appointed to preach sermons, and chairmen of committees attending to present reports, shall be honorary members, together with such other persons as the Association may vote to admit.

VI. OFFICERS. — 1. A Secretary, a Registrar, and a Treasurer shall be chosen by ballot, each to serve three years from the close of the session at which the choice was made ; to these offices any member of any Congregational church connected with this body shall be eligible.

2. A Moderator and an Assistant Registrar shall be chosen by ballot from the members at each session to serve during that session.

3. The Secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Association, collect the statistics of ministers and churches, and have charge of the printing thereof; distribute the publications of the Association, and preserve, for the permanent use of the Association, copies of all its publications.

4. The Registrar shall make the records of each meeting, and preserve them as the permanent property of the Association; to whom the Assistant Registrar shall render his aid. He shall seasonably notify the time and place of each annual session.

5. The Treasurer shall receive all money raised for the use of the Association, disburse the same as directed, and present an annual report, to be audited as the Association may direct.

6. The Secretary, Registrar, and Treasurer shall be ex-officio members of the Association, and be the Committee of Publication unless another be chosen. Their travelling expenses in attending the several sessions shall be paid by the Association.

VII. QUORUM. — Twenty-five delegates shall constitute a quorum.

VIII. ANNUAL MEETING. — The annual meeting shall be held on the third Tuesday of June, at four o'clock P. M. (or at some other more convenient hour), at such place as shall have been duly designated.

IX. HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY. — The Massachusetts Home Missionary Society may annually elect two delegates, to be members of this body, while it consents that this body may nominate two persons for membership in the Executive Committee of that society.

The two persons thus nominated shall be from the membership of the Association at the time, and shall not be eligible for nomination for more than two years in succession, and shall make report concerning the work of the society at the next meeting of the Association.

X. CORRESPONDENCE. — Official fraternal intercourse with the several State Congregational organizations, and with other denominations, is sufficiently had by the representation of this body in the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States.

XI. ORGANIZATION. — The pastor of the church of the place of meeting, or the Secretary, may call the Association to order and preside in the meeting until it be properly organized. The certificates of the delegates present shall be presented, only the names of members being read by the Registrar. The Association shall then be organized by the choice of a Moderator and an Assistant Registrar, and the Moderator shall open the session with prayer. A Committee on Credentials shall then be appointed, to whom all certificates shall be referred.

XII. COMMITTEES. — 1. The committees for the session are these:

(1.) A Committee on Credentials, who shall be appointed by the Moderator immediately after the opening of the session.

(2.) A Committee on Nominations, to nominate the following and any other committees referred to them: —

(3.) A Committee of Arrangements, consisting of three, of which the pastor or some member of the church shall be one, to prepare the business of the session; and no business shall be introduced during the session but through the hands and with the approbation of the committee; but if said committee decline presenting any item of business proposed by any member, he shall have the privilege of appeal to the Association.

2. To act after the adjournment: —

(1.) A Provisional Committee of five, of whom the Secretary or Registrar shall be one, to arrange the schedule for the next annual meeting; to select a preacher for the associational sermon, and persons to prepare such written papers as they shall deem desirable.

(2.) A State Committee on the Work of the Churches, who shall make an annual report to this body upon the work of the churches and state of religion, unless otherwise ordered at any session.

The State Committee on the Work of the Churches shall consist of the Secretary, the Registrar, the chairmen of the Committees of Local Conferences, and twenty-one members at large. The members at large not to be eligible for more than three years.

(3.) A Committee to audit the Accounts, who shall report the state of the treasury and the sum in their opinion necessary to be paid the next year by the churches of the several conferences connected with this body.

XIII. EXERCISES. — The time of the annual session shall be occupied by devotional services, the consideration of the state of religion, the wants and methods of home evangelization, addresses, and discussions of practical religious interest, and attention to the objects of benevolent enterprise sustained by the churches.

XIV. SPECIAL ORDERS. — 1. At the opening of the session, on the morning of Wednesday and Thursday, the Moderator shall take the chair at the hour to which the Association stands adjourned; shall immediately call the members to order; shall direct the roll to be called; shall open the meeting with prayer, and cause the minutes of the preceding day to be read; and the session of each day shall be closed with prayer.

2. The associational sermon and Lord's Supper shall be assigned to Tuesday evening. Wednesday evening shall be devoted to exercises having special reference to the people of the place of meeting, or a sermon may be preached, the preacher to be selected by the Provisional Committee. One session of the Association shall be devoted to the cause of Home Missions.

3. Each annual meeting shall be closed with a psalm or hymn and prayer.

XV. PLACE OF MEETING.—Previously to the close of each meeting, the General Association shall specify a place for meeting the next year; and the church of the place of meeting selected is requested to make preparations to celebrate the Lord's Supper in the course of the service. The Lord's Supper shall be administered, generally, without remarks.

XVI. RULES OF ORDER.—1. Every motion, on being seconded, shall, if requested by the Moderator or any two members, be reduced to writing; and no motion shall be opened to discussion until it be seconded.

2. The Moderator may speak to points of order in preference to other members, rising from his seat for that purpose, and shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the house by any two members; but he may not speak to the merits of the question without leaving the chair, and placing some other member in it to preside while he speaks.

3. No member shall speak more than twice on the same question without leave of the Association.

4. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received except for adjournment, laying on the table, amendment, postponement, commitment, or the previous question. The previous question is this: Shall the main question be now put? and the effect of adopting it shall be to put an end to debate, and to bring the Association to a direct vote upon the amendments, if any are pending, and then upon the main question proper.

5. If a question under debate contain several parts, any member may have it divided and a question taken on each part.

6. Every member, when speaking, shall address himself to the Chair, and shall be subject to no needless interruption; if he act disorderly, it shall be the duty of the Moderator and the privilege of other members to call him to order.

XVII. AMENDMENTS. — 1. Any of the above rules, except the first five, may be amended at any annual session by a two-thirds vote, the proposed amendment having been submitted in writing on the day previous to that of the action.

2. Amendments to either of the first five articles shall not be made except upon their proposals at the annual meeting next prior to that of action, and after notice has been sent to the several associations and conferences, and by a two-thirds vote.

STATISTICS OF THE CHURCHES.

EXPLANATIONS.

THE statistics are in two parts :—

I. Those of pastoral supply, membership, additions, removals, baptisms, Sabbath schools, and families; and, of ministers, list of ordinations, installations, dismissals, and deaths.

II. Those of charities and expenses, in which the churches are arranged by Conferences, these latter tables being prepared by Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Secretary of the Committee on the Work of the Churches, and beginning on page 90.

The tables of the first part, given in the pages next following this page, contain the names of all the Congregational churches in Massachusetts, the towns and cities being arranged alphabetically; churches in each town according to age; and of each church, (1) its town; (2) its name (if it have a peculiar one), which is always followed by "ch.;" (3) its locality in the town, when that locality has a name distinct from the town. When the name of the church follows the name of a locality subordinate to the town, it shows that the church has a distinct number in that subdivision of the town, or it is evidently needed for clearness.

These reports are obtained by the Scribes of the several Conferences, and by them are forwarded to the Secretary. The non-reporting churches have received several requests for information from the Secretary, in addition to those sent by the Scribes.

The column specifying ministers is corrected up to the time of printing. Church members and families are reported as numbered on the morning of Jan. 1, 1882. Admissions, removals, and baptisms cover the year 1881. "Absent" are not additional to "males," "females," and "total," but included in them. "Sabbath school" includes total membership of teachers and scholars Jan. 1, 1882, or when the school is in operation (if not at that date), covering "branch schools" and "mission schools," so far as maintained by the reporting church.

The months and days in the dates of the organization of churches are omitted. They will be found in the publication of 1873, those of churches since organized being given in the list of new churches each year.

"Ordained" denotes the date on which the person was originally set apart to the ministry "by the laying-on of hands." "Installed" denotes the date of his present pastorate. The letter "p." denotes installed pastors; all others are serving without installation.

In no instance is the report of any church in these statistics copied from the returns of previous years. But there is included in the totals a careful estimate of the numbers in any unreporting church (except in cases where no report has been had for two years), and also any missing items of "absent," — which are assumed to be, in each case, equivalent to the average.

Blanks in any column of figures are never equivalent to "none," but mean "no report"; but blanks in the column of ministers do mean that the church has no pastor or acting pastor, and the blank is left for the convenience of those who note changes.

☞ All post-office addresses are to be found in the "List of Ministers," and not in the tables.

NOTE. — The “year” means what changes were comprised in the twelve months preceding January 1 of the year mentioned, except that the columns under “Ministers” comprise the twelve months ending with the time of closing the “copy” for printing the Minutes, usually reckoned at June 30. The table was begun in 1866, all preceding years now given being compiled from past Minutes, — the number of churches in some years varying from the Minutes as they were to what they should have been.

The changes in list of churches, ordinations, installations, etc., for the past year, condensed in the above table, are given in detail in their proper place.

* Prior to 1876, “acting pastors” are included in “others” in columns of deaths of ministers.

† This decrease due in part to the larger number of churches falling to report this year.

In the above table, the columns of "Additions," "Removals," "Epitisms," "Sabbath School Average," and "Renewal Contributions" cover the twelve months next preceding January 1 of the year mentioned in a given line. The pastoral supply (only) was regularly corrected to a date some months later than January 1 (usually July), but this does not change the general accuracy in any case. The number of churches, members, and of Sabbath schools was enumerated January 1 of the year mentioned. The number of churches "vacant" includes all churches supplied by licentiates, or ministers of other denominations. Totals are given in some cases by the churches, instead of detailed reports, which accounts for the totals given above. In the Sunday School column the number reported by 478 schools is given without making an estimate for the non-reporting churches.

Absentees prior to 1855 doubtless stated too low by defective returns.

NAMES OF MINISTERS

IN THE PRECEDING TABLES, IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER, WITH THE POST-OFFICE ADDRESS OF EACH, AND WITH THE NUMBERS OF THE PAGES IN WHICH EACH NAME OCCURS IN THE STATISTICS.

This list includes only pastors or acting pastors and members of Associations. Its post-office addresses often differ from the foregoing pages.

An alphabetical list of licentiates follows this list.

A star (*) prefixed to any name in this list denotes that the person, although supplying a church, is not a member of any Association in this State. A few such, though not supplying churches, are inserted by their own wish.

In this list the first column of figures gives the page which denotes membership in an Association of Ministers.

The second column of figures in this list gives the page in which a person will be found to be in pastoral service. A blank in either case signifies,—in the former, that one is not a member of any Association in this State; in the latter, that he is not reported to be in pastoral service in this State.

Where two pages are mentioned in the first column of figures, it shows that the person is a member of two Associations.

TEMPERANCE. — Rev. Wilbur Johnson presented the report of the committee on intemperance, and discussion ensued, in which the following gentlemen participated: Gen. John L. Swift, Rev. John W. Chickering, Dea. Phineas Field, Bro. Dana B. Gove, Rev. William M. Cornell and Rev. Daniel P. Noyes.

Voted, That the recommendations contained in the report of the committee on intemperance be adopted.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE. — Rev. Edward N. Packard, Rev. George R. W. Scott, Rev. Francis B. Perkins, Capt. William Kimball, and Bro. Henry D. Noyes were chosen committee on nominations.

COMMITTEE OF ARRANGEMENTS. — The nominating committee reported the following as committee of arrangements: Rev. Benjamin F. Hamilton, Rev. Nathaniel H. Eggleston, and Bro. George S. Marshall, and as AUDITING COMMITTEE, Dea. Edward P. Burgess, Dea. John N. Denison, and Dr. John S. Andrews.

Voted, That all Congregational ministers present at this meeting be invited to sit with the association as honorary members.

After prayer by Rev. Charles R. Seymour, of Winchester, the association adjourned.

EVENING SESSION.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Edward P. Hooker. The associational sermon was preached by Rev. Pres. Julius H. Seelye, of Amherst College, from the text, Luke xxiv. 46, 47, after which the association celebrated the Lord's Supper, Revs. William T. Eustis and Heman P. De Forrest officiating.

SECOND DAY.

BUSINESS. — Association met at 8.30 A. M., and was led in prayer by Rev. Leonard S. Parker. Records of the last meeting were read. Rev. Marshall M. Cutter was re-elected secretary, and it was Voted, That the customary compensation of the secretary be continued.

COMMITTEE ON MORMONISM. — Rev. John D. Kingsbury made report on behalf of the committee appointed to memorialize Congress for legislation against Mormonism. Report accepted.

Voted, That a committee of three be appointed to take into consideration the matter of simplifying the reports and statistics of the churches and report next year.

Business was suspended for a devotional service from 9.15 to 10 A. M., conducted by Rev. Gabriel H. De Bevoise. On resuming business the chair was occupied by Rev. Edwin B. Webb.

WORK OF THE CHURCHES. — Rev. Albert C. Sewall reported on the subject of Benevolent Contributions. Remarks were made by Rev. William Barrows, Rev. Henry A. Stimson, Rev. Avery S. Walker, Rev. Gabriel H. De Bevoise, Rev. Jesse H. Jones, and Rev. Edwin B. Webb.

A paper was read on Missions in Cities and Large Towns, by Rev. Charles F. Thwing; and another by Rev. Henry A. Stimson on Work among Foreigners, followed by remarks by Rev. George Wiberg, Rev. Henry T. Rose, Rev. Charles B. Rice, Rev. Albert H. Plumb, and Rev. Joseph Danielson. Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Association met at 2 P. M., and was led in prayer by Rev. John D. Kingsbury. The treasurer's report was presented and referred to the auditing committee. Rev. Abijah P. Marvin read a report as a member of the executive committee of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society appointed by this association. Rev. Smith Baker and Rev. George W. Phillips were nominated members of the executive committee of the Home Missionary Society for the next year.

REPORTS AND STATISTICS. — Rev. Frank G. Clark, Rev. Marshall M. Cutter, and Bro. Benjamin C. Hardwick were appointed a committee to report next year on the subject of Reports and Statistics of the Churches.

THIRD DAY.

Association met at 8.30 A. M.

Prayer was offered by Rev. George F. Stanton.

Records of yesterday were read and approved.

At the request of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society the subject of collecting special statistics of the foreign-born population was referred to the committee on the work of the churches with full powers.

The following nominations from the nominating committee were confirmed: —

AUDITING COMMITTEE FOR 1884. — Dea. John N. Denison, Dea. John C. Proctor, Dea. Ezra Farnsworth.

DELEGATES TO THE NATIONAL COUNCIL. — Rev. Samuel G. Buckingham, Rev. Albert C. Sewall, Rev. John L. Withrow, Rev. Theodore T. Munger, Rev. Henry M. Dexter, Rev. Henry A. Hazen, Rev. Benjamin F. Hamilton, Philip Moen, Esq., Samuel Johnson, Esq.

Voted, That the delegates to the National Council have power to fill any vacancies in the delegation.

The roll of the association was read and approved.

Devotional services, conducted by Rev. Nathaniel H. Eggleston, were held from 9.15 to 10 A. M.

A telegram was received as follows: —

FARMINGTON, ME., June 21, 1883.

The General Conference of the Congregational Churches of Maine sends hearty, fraternal greetings, Ephesians vi. 23.

F. E. CLARK, moderator.

E. F. DUREN, secretary.

To which it was voted to send the following reply:—

“The Massachusetts General Association receives the greetings of the brethren in Maine, and returns Christian salutations, Colossians i. 9-11.”

SABBATH SCHOOLS. — A report on Sabbath schools was presented by Rev. Francis N. Peloubet; also a paper by Rev. Winfield S. Hawkes on “The Sabbath School as related to the Work and Life of the Churches.”

On the recommendation of the Sabbath-school committee appointed one year ago, the following communication to the National Council was adopted, and the Rev. Robert R. Meredith was authorized to present it to the Council and urge corresponding action by that body:—

The committee appointed by the General Association of Massachusetts, at its last annual meeting, at Fitchburg, in June, 1882, to prepare a communication to the National Council on the Sunday school, as related to the life and work of the churches, respectfully submit the following:—

THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF MASSACHUSETTS TO THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF THE UNITED STATES:

Brethren,— We are persuaded that you fully recognize the fact that the Sunday school includes, to a large and increasing extent, the work of the churches in Bible teaching and in the religious training of the young, and that no department of the church is more important to the matter of knowledge of scripture, to its increase in numbers and power, to the cause of temperance, the preservation of the Sabbath, and all moral reforms.

It is, therefore, of the highest importance that the Sunday school should be recognized and adopted by the church as its teaching service, aiming to make it one with the church in the persons composing it, the government controlling it, the doctrines taught in it, and the work done by it.

It is of the highest importance that the teachers in the Sunday school be well qualified to expound the Bible; that pastors and officers should be acquainted with the methods of Sunday-school administration found to be most effective, and interested in the steps which promote progress in this work.

This, as the concern of the churches, may be greatly promoted by its consideration in their deliberative assemblies, and by such thorough organization as shall give to the work the sanction of the churches and suggest methods for its operation.

We, therefore, the General Association of Massachusetts, request the National Council of Congregational Churches to advise:—

1. That the general associations and conferences appoint standing committees on Sunday-school work, with a view to the gathering of statistics and information from all the Sunday schools within their bounds, to setting apart a time each year for hearing the reports of these committees, and for popular addresses on this subject; to the end that local associations and conferences may be persuaded to devote time to this matter in their meetings, and that measures may be adopted for the improvement, increase, and greater thoroughness of Sunday schools, and to make all workers in them feel the interest and sympathy of the churches in their teaching labors.

2. That the churches, for the sake of promoting unity in this work, and of enabling our denomination to produce the best literature for Sunday schools, encourage the use of the lesson helps and other literature published by our denominational Sunday School and Publishing Society.

3. That the churches make more earnest, systematic, organized efforts to gather all classes into the Sunday school; and especially that they sustain by their prayers and gifts the missionary work of our Sunday School and Publishing Society, which is the fostering and organization of Sunday schools throughout the entire country.

WINFIELD S. HAWKES,
ROBERT R. MEREDITH,
SMITH BAKER,
ALBERT E. DUNNING,

Committee.

The nominating committee was authorized to arrange the place and to appoint a provisional committee for the next annual meeting of this association.

REPORT OF AUDITING COMMITTEE.—The report of the auditing committee was presented, and the association voted to recommend that a sum equivalent to three cents for each member be asked from the churches for the ensuing year, and that the conferences which are in arrears be specially requested to make up their arrears for last year.

Voted, That the provisional committee for next year be requested to devote the meeting of Thursday morning to the interests of Sabbath schools, and that a committee be now appointed to co-operate with the provisional committee on this subject.

A paper on "The Influences and Agencies inducing men to enter the Ministry a Generation ago" was presented by Rev. Aaron M. Colton, of Easthampton.

The Sabbath-school committee of last year was reappointed to co-operate with the provisional committee for next year as follows: Revs. Winfield S. Hawkes, Albert E. Dunning, Robert R. Meredith, Smith Baker, and Bro. George Beal.

Voted, That the thanks of this association be tendered to the churches of this city, which have, through their families, given us so cordial and hearty a reception, to the provisional committee for their labors in planning and preparing for this meeting, and especially to Rev. Benjamin F. Hamilton, whose labors have been indefatigable and unstinted in all matters pertaining to the convention.

CLOSING EXERCISES. — After the reading of the minutes, and singing, prayer was offered and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Augustus C. Thompson, senior pastor of the Eliot Church, when the association adjourned.

EZRA A. STEVENS, moderator.

ALBERT G. BALE, registrar.

HENRY A. HAZEN, assistant registrar.

THE ANNUAL REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES FOR THE YEAR 1882.

IN presenting the annual report of the State committee on the work of the churches, your committee wish the association to bear in mind that the paper here given is but a part of its report. Immediately upon its organization, during the sessions of the last association, it divided itself into six subcommittees. (1.) On Sunday Schools. (2.) On Church Work in Cities and Large Towns. (3.) On Church Work in Villages and Rural Districts. (4.) On our Foreign-born Population. (5.) On Intemperance. (6.) On Methods of Benevolent Contributions. One of these, on "Work in Villages and Rural Districts," proves unable to report this year, owing to the unavoidable absence of its chairman and the failure of efforts to supply his place. The others are present, and are included in the State committee's report. It remains for its secretary to gather up such matters as are not covered by the topics just named.

GENERAL SPIRITUAL CONDITION.—The accounts from the various parts of the State, as usual, differ, but the impression, upon the whole, is that the past year has been a season of decided, though not remarkable, prosperity. It has been marked by a visible energy, activity, and growth. Since the present year opened quite a number of the churches have enjoyed rare measures of blessing. The Pilgrim and Old Colony Conferences suffer a continual drain of emigration. But a good spirit prevails. The Sunday schools in the former are declared the most flourishing department of its church work. The "general review" given us of the latter pronounces the retrospect to be encouraging, even in the face of a net loss. These conferences are among the weaker ones of the State. From those numerically and financially stronger, stronger reports come. Yet we are led to inquire whether the interest in the endeavor to develop the working power of the local church within its parish is as strong as formerly. We fail to note in the conference reports indications and illustrations of a particular inventiveness in this direction. This may be attributable, however, to a mere defectiveness in the reports.

THE CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND CONVERSION OF THE YOUNG.—In connection with the increased attention paid to the Sunday school, there has been developed an interest in the whole question of the education and conversion of the young people. A church in the Suffolk North Conference mentions that the catechetical class never did so well; the young people's prayer meeting and literary society have been well sustained. There have been twenty Sunday-school scholars added to the church. Another speaks of the class in the catechism "not large but regular," and the young people's prayer meetings are large and earnest. Eight churches of the Suffolk South mention "special measures" for the benefit of the young; and "in this," it is remarked, "is found the most striking and hopeful feature of the year's work." We read of an organization of children from eight to fifteen years old, called The Young Covenanters. "A card containing a simple covenant to serve Christ, and attend church, Sunday school, and the meetings of this association, is signed by each member. Meetings are held weekly, on Thursday afternoon, at the close of the public schools. A pleasant form of service is followed, — singing, repeating of the covenant or a passage of scripture, a chant, and an extempore prayer, which the children repeat, sentence by sentence, after the pastor. They bring notes of the sermon taken in church, the text, the subject, the heads, and remarks: i. e., of the regular sermon, as well as the five minutes' children's sermon; also a lesson paper on some biblical character or truth. There are about forty in the class. This is the brightest thing in the pastor's work." Another church has "a class from eleven to nineteen years of age, meeting on Saturday afternoon for instruction in the doctrines and duties of the Christian life, and to bring them at once to Christ." In another there are "two classes, held on week days. The junior takes in children from ten to sixteen years of age. The senior is mostly composed of church members. There is also a mission circle, a society for social and literary culture, — to attract some not religiously inclined, — and a boys' Sunday-evening prayer meeting. Of sixty children who have been in the pastor's classes during the last three years fifty-nine are now believers in Christ." Again, we find a "pastor's-aid society" among the young people. Still again, a "band of mercy," to reach "street Arabs," and a mission circle of "pilgrim gleaners." Another pastor "meets the boys and girls alternately, for conversation, prayer, reading the Bible, and a story." We also hear of a church that has a "temperance class of a hundred, with valuable instruction and results." We hear of pastors' Bible classes, with prayer meetings in connection with them, and also of "young people's associations held monthly."

In the Pilgrim Conference, one of the churches reports "a society of Christian endeavor, in regular form," and finds it "a good means of developing the efficiency of the younger members." We hear of the same society from Franklin Conference; from Essex North, two; and from Worcester South, "two, with marked profit in securing expression from young Christians and leading them to take part in social meetings." In another case, a meeting of young people who have recently become interested promises similar results. In two others such meetings have been held for years. "There is an increasing feeling that effort in this direction is that to which the Spirit is now calling us." In Essex North a "society of Christian endeavor" is "doing a good work"; and another, that has been in operation but a part of the year, "is regarded as the most hopeful movement for Christian nurture that has been made for years." From the Andover Conference, we hear of a "class to train young Christians in Christian work and doctrine." From Taunton is reported an endeavor "to enlist children in all the regular church work, and to make them feel that we are all one"; also, of a "pastoral-aid society and a catechetical class in preparation for joining the church"; and again, of a “lecture class taking notes of an outline of New Testament history and the creed of the church.” Several churches in the Old Colony hold ex ra services for children. They report three “societies of Christian endeavor.” Already conversions are mentioned as results. One church speaks of a ladies’ society of the same name and object. Five churches mention young people’s classes and societies of different names and forms as held with interest and good success. From Hampden comes this specific description and testimony: “We have a society of Christian workers for young people between eight and thirty. Meetings are held every two weeks, in which every one has part. Aims: 1. To secure a firmer hold upon the young. 2. To arouse more interest in the study of the Bible and in missions. 3. To give the young a meeting especially adapted to them. 4. To train young Christians for all kinds of Christian work. 5. To persuade others, especially the baptized children of the church, to begin the Christian life as early as possible, in preparation for full church membership.” The pastor testifies that “in every one of these lines have marked results been seen in less than three months from the formation of the society.”

From the Norfolk Conference comes this: “We endeavor to bring out the children to the prayer meetings, and try always to have something adapted to them which they can understand. We do not believe in separating the children so much from their elders. I believe they understand more of spiritual truth than we give them credit for; and, judging from their questions and answers, more than some who are much older. I think the tendency of the times is to divide and scatter too much, instead of uniting and consolidating. We have had several conversions in our school during the year. Our church realizes the importance of working more earnestly for the conversion of the young. We have introduced no new forms in our worship, believing the old to be good, and, if well used, all that is needful.”

CHURCH CARE OF BAPTIZED CHILDREN.—Within a few years the churches have awakened to a sense of duty towards those young people who have been dedicated to God in their infancy, and have sought to testify their affectionate interest and care by presenting to these children, generally upon their reaching the age of about seven years, a copy of the Bible. Reports of such gifts come this year from churches in five of the conferences. We cannot doubt that in others the usage prevails to some extent; yet from one the word comes, “Almost nothing done.” From another conference we are told, “No more care for them than for others.” A third confesses, “Few children baptized; no effort in their behalf reported.” A fourth acknowledges, “Only eighteen baptisms of children returned.”

CHURCH SERVICES.—From the Andover Conference, a church reports that it has re-established the afternoon preaching service, with decided benefit. “We fill the Sabbath full of religious services. We take pains to invite the floating population.” In the Middlesex Union, all the churches but three hold only a single preaching service. The two churches at Fitchburg and the Leominster church have a second sermon in the evening; and in one of these there is a prayer meeting before the evening service.

From churches in eleven conferences came reports of the use of responsive readings, and other modifications, in phrases like the following: "Some make use of chanting; some, responses; some, the Lord's Prayer." "Responsive readings are regarded as a very attractive and profitable part of the service." "Nine churches out of twelve reporting mention responsive readings at the morning service. All like the plan. The Lord's Prayer and Doxology are common. At one church the Apostles' Creed is repeated. Its peculiar value to children from irreligious homes is much commended." Again, "Responsive readings are followed by chanting the Gloria Patri and the Lord's Prayer, in unison." So, "responsive readings enter into the use of nearly all our churches, — acceptably, though with no tendency to increase."

Other modifications are frequently mentioned, like the following: "The pastor preaches every Sabbath to children." "Extra services are held for children." "Nearly all the churches have congregational singing, generally led by a choir." "The pastor preaches nearly every Sabbath to children, — with excellent effect on the Sunday school." Another church aims to have every part of the service an act of worship, including the sermon itself.

Such modifications are evidently common, and are increasing in frequency.

USAGES AND METHODS.—From the Suffolk North we hear of "an order of deaconesses, who look after the neglected in the various districts." Another of its churches has a way of "looking after neglecters at their homes. Many children have thus been brought to the Sunday school; and through them the parents have been reached." One church reports "Roman Catholics converted and many Jews brought to church." From the Suffolk South we learn of the custom of making the regular weekly prayer meeting, which follows the Sunday-school concert, a meeting for the Sunday school. In the Old Colony, "the Ladies' Circle of Christian Endeavor seeks to reach the neglecting classes." In Essex North, a prayer meeting that follows the Sunday school "gives a spiritual tone and life not otherwise attained." Also, a young people's meeting, held at the parsonage weekly, works well.

The following account of the ways of a Springfield church we give in full: (1.) A Bible is presented to every baptized child, which is prized and cherished as a sacred keepsake. (2.) We have a young people's meeting, well sustained, which meets early on Sunday evening. (3.) There is a Wide Awake Association, of fifty or more young people, who raise some $500 a year, which has just furnished a room for the Indian school at Hampton, Va., provided a house for a Western home missionary, supports a girl in a mission school in Austria, helps support a female medical missionary in China, and puts something into our Home Missionary Band. This association also collects missionary intelligence and holds a monthly religious meeting. (4.) There is also a young ladies' missionary meeting, and another of older ladies. (5.) We have a Ladies' Home Missionary Society, meeting monthly, and which furnishes various supplies to the amount of some $500 a year. (6.) Our Woman's Board of Missions raised last year $550 for Miss Talcot, in Japan, and $100 toward Miss Pease's support in the Micronesian Mission. (7.) Our ladies have a Bible-reading exercise, attended by thirty or more, which is valued and enjoyed."

"We also have a mission chapel two miles out of town, which we built and help support, and which promises well. We help in the support of a German church in the town, and a preaching service for French Canadians."

This church is vigorous, watchful, and faithful. There are many like it.

The Walham church reports an Enlistment Band, in which six lines of labor are laid before its members: (1.) Church meetings. (2.) Sunday school. (3.) Canvass and Welcome. (4.) Festival and Social. (5.) Missionary and Relief Work. The Worcester Central Church has found its plan of the employment of a Christian lady, to give her whole time to labor among those under its care, a most gratifying success.

REVIVALS.—Fifteen conferences report seasons of special religious interest. Eight churches in Suffolk North report additions in profession, from ten to twenty-four in number. Auburndale has enjoyed marked religious interest for months. North Village, Newton, has been blessed with a revival and large additions. Norfolk Conference reports an increased interest; more additions than for several years, many, from Sunday schools, of youths from twelve to sixteen years of age. North Andover has been blessed with a revival among the young, bringing upwards of thirty hopeful conversions. Special prayer meetings for the young were begun in September. The French Protestant Church in Lowell has received twelve to its communion. In South Lawrence many children began to show indications of religious feeling in November. Meetings had been held ever since, up to the date of the report, on Tuesday afternoons, at 5 P. M. The starting-point of this interest seems to be found in a company of girls that met in union meetings in private houses. In North Haverhill those received to the church "were mostly brought to the final decision by the influence of evangelistic meetings held in a neighboring church. In the Newburyport North the season of interest began in the Week of Prayer, was fostered by the cordial cooperation of both pastor and people, and has already resulted in a "development of Christian workers in the line of personal effort, in quickened life in prayer meetings, and the hopeful conversion of eighteen souls. God's blessing has been signally present." West Newbury First, which was reported last year as lifted from a long season of depression, again reports deep religious feeling on the part of many young people, and ten additions on profession. A considerable number for this church.

"Middleborough and its vicinity has been visited by a revival of remarkable power and extent. Late in the fall special efforts began to be made. An evangelist, and afterwards the secretary of the Boston Young Men's Christian Association, took part in these labors. As the winter advanced, the whole town was pervaded by an unusual seriousness. Union meetings were held, and the Town Hall was none too large for the attendance. The Central Church had received twenty-four new members by the 1st of March, and more were expected. More than thirty of the congregation of the First Church have expressed a hope. Some three hundred have given evidence of hopeful conversion within the town, and the entire community feels the effect." Rutland reports a quiet work, with twenty additions, and nearly as many more seriously thoughtful. This blessing seems to have begun in some hearts long ago. No "special measures" have been taken. A fellowship meeting of churches, in early winter, was a happy and impressive occasion, and doubtless was helpful; and occasionally neighboring pastors have been present at an evening meeting. This was all. In Princeton, also, there has been a quiet work, mostly among the young, and twenty have, it is hoped, begun the new life. The newly formed Swedish and French churches in Worcester seem to have been blest in their work (of which, however, they make no report), and have each added about thirty to their communion.

The First and Second churches in Amherst have each rejoiced during the year in between thirty and forty additions on profession of faith. In the North and South churches, in the same term, there has also been religious interest. Prescott, likewise, one of the churches of the hill country, has been quickened. In Conway a revival followed faithful preaching and conversation. Montague has been blessed with a renewal of religious feeling and with conversions, largely among the children. Auburn reports interest among young men, and some conversions. The Worcester Central Conference testifies of a good work done for the Lord, witnessed by one hundred and eighty-two additions to its churches upon confession. Duxbury speaks of a considerable degree of interest among young people and children. Five members of the Sunday school have been received into the church, and others are not far away. Plympton has been "most richly blessed." Some twenty-five or thirty in this small parish have been hopefully converted, and seventeen, from fourteen to seventy-five years old, have been received. The "chief instrument" has been "a beloved brother, a member of the State committee of the Young Men's Christian Association." The church was without a pastor. This brother began to hold meetings in July, and continued for four months, one or two a week; and has done all, declining any compensation. "The church is put upon a new footing." With precious results reported from Westminster, and conversions in Ashburnham Academy, in Phillipston and Royalston, this too brief record must close.

And now suffer a word in conclusion respecting the State committee and its work.

It was the main object of the original appointment of the conference "committees on the work of the churches" and of this "State committee," to secure annual reports and discussions on this subject. Such reviews, deliberately prepared by carefully chosen committees, giving recent reports of facts in orderly detail, with a proper emphasis on important points, and carried on connectedly from year to year, and annually discussed, would serve, it was hoped, to keep up an intelligent interest, and to further a well-considered and sustained action. Such reports differ specifically from "essays" in that they contain the voice of the churches. Surely the churches are competent to counsel the churches in these ways.

In years past it has been felt by your committee that it might very easily err in pressing improvements too urgently. They considered that many things must needs be left to time, that wise allowance must be made for the real difficulty of effecting changes, which, if crowded in before their season, must needs do hurt. But since the year 1879, in addition to their endeavor so to shape the records of the year as to stimulate a general church activity, they have adopted the plan of turning attention to one or two important matters.

There are lines upon which the churches need to do better work than in the past. One is found in a prompt and energetic endeavor to reach the unreached populations. The world is coming in upon us like a flood. This coming is the churches' opportunity. It must be met at the West promptly, lavishly, rejoicingly. But also it must be met right here in the older States, in a wise and more masterly care of feeble churches (many of which are enveloped in unreached populations), and in more vigorous efforts in behalf of the foreign-born population. That this may be done, the whole problem needs to be faced here in this General Association and in the conferences, and possibly by methods wholly new. We of the older States shall be in danger of failing in our duty in the newer territories unless we do it better toward the populations that surround us. To this imminent, most difficult task we need now to turn with all possible seriousness. The facts of the situation need to be kept before us in reports and discussions year by year. A certain time in every conference should be given each year to this endeavor. With God's help it can be made successful. We need to give ourselves up to it with that kind of confidence which is the faith that removes mountains. Some of these lines of work have just been brought before you in the several reports of this committee. Others, perhaps some of the same, ought to be brought before you next year. Hitherto, each year the committee's suggestions have been most kindly received. Its recommendations have been almost all adopted. It is now asked that the association will request the provisional committee of next year to leave the Wednesday forenoon of next year's meeting to such reports and discussions of important matters in the work of the churches as the State committee may suggest.

By order of the committee,

DANIEL P. NOYES,
Secretary.

WHAT WERE THE INFLUENCES OR AGENCIES INDUCING MEN TO ENTER THE MINISTRY A GENERATION AGO?

BY REV. AARON M. COLTON, EASTHAMPTON.

I SHALL not, I trust, be held too rigidly to the question. There is a negative side. There is a comparative view. I stipulated for freedom in consenting to write.

First and chief of those influences or agencies, home and home life as then; parental yearnings and trainings; children not turned off upon Sabbath school, as the manner of some is; parental hearts and hopes and prayers that one of the many children in the family — there were the many in those days — might be a minister; mother at home, — her seat and throne, best university in the world, — her love and care and looks and lips; her high hope and low whisper that little tow-head Jamie at her knee might some day be a great and good minister. A half-dozen such favored homes, and then at school near by,

“A little bench of heedless bishops pore,
And there a chancellor in embryo.”

Ambition, say you? Put up thy sword; also thy microscope. We are blessedly human, the best of us, — certainly so when casting in our hearts what manner of man or minister this wonderful child of ours is to be. So, anciently. Hannah lending her Samuel to the Lord; Elizabeth hiding herself five months, and keeping up the while a mighty thinking; Mary keeping all these things, and pondering them in her heart, — and perhaps she didn't keep them very closely either.

The ministers of our long ago, — whence came they? Chiefly from the nursery and snuggery of such Christian homes. Dedication of children to God; the sign and seal; the vows and prayers and tears; parents and children together in the same covenant and holy bonds. It is what used to be heard almost invariably from candidates in their examination for the pastoral office, — my mother said and did thus and so.

2. Let us turn now from the home to the house of God, — not the greatest distance between. The preaching a generation ago. Gospel preaching, — doctrinal, practical, plain, pungent, and pressed home; a something that set one pondering his wicked way, and turning from it; that went to the heart and fixed itself there; that set one asking, with Saul of Tarsus, “Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?” that made a man take and keep for his motto, Conscience and Christ. Those great preachers, Finney, Nettleton, Burchard, Foote, Lindsley, Humphrey, Hewitt, Hawes, Lyman Beecher, N. W. Taylor, Bennet Tyler, Thomas

H. Skinner, Joel Parker, and Edward N. Kirk. I have heard them all, and do well remember their trend and drift. The sinner self-destroyed, ruined, utterly undone; himself helpless, and his case utterly hopeless, except as God, in his sovereign, free, electing love, may see fit to reach down his mighty arm and pluck him as a brand. Sinai first, then Calvary. There was the dying when the commandment came. By the terrors of the Lord men were persuaded. Nettleton's "Village Hymns," "Awaked by Sinai's awful sound." The storm seen gathering, and the fleeing as a bird to your mountain. The sinner, trembling, and almost despairing, and driven to seek and find in Christ the one and only hiding-place. Darkest just before day. Penitential sorrow. Bow on the cloud; of light indeed, but of raindrops also. The drops of grief before the light of smiles. The law our schoolmaster, and the law work thorough. The fallow ground broken up, ploughed deeply, moistened, made mellow; and now a garden of spices, plants of righteousness, strongest virtues, sweetest graces,—humility and holy zeal. Such a RESCUE, and, therefore, now the glad and thankful consecration to God and his service. None the less in those days the inviting voices, the sweet sounds,—never were sweeter,—but carefully in their due place and order. After the fire the gentle, soft sound, as Tholuck translates it.

Now the point and proof. Instance: That revival in Yale College in 1830-1; the depth and power, the passionate longing and pleading for pardon and peace with God; and such members,—under-graduates, tutors, and law students,—devoting themselves then and there to the ministerial calling. So in my native town in Vermont,—seven hundred inhabitants,—revival in 1826; fifty conversions; pungent convictions, great searchings of heart, the surrender and rescue, the daring to hope, the stillness and chastened joy: and of those fifty converts, seven, in no long time, were found in our academies and colleges on their way to the Christian ministry. You might have supposed the good issue; it is in God's plan and method; it is a deep philosophy; it is plain law of cause and effect; it is scripture,—loving much because forgiven much; it is song,—loving him who first loved me.

But again, 3. As to the ministry itself,—the high estimation in which it was held, and of which, in good part, it was worthy. In more senses than one the calling was a high calling. The pulpits were high. The minister was the eminent man among a people; was the one educated man among most peoples; was revered, consulted, deferred to; was oracle and umpire; held the fort by a sort of divine right; was called a divine; was divine, in the Unitarian sense of divine; heard, as others did, the high-sounding cymbals, "venerandi ac reverandi." Something of a prize to be coveted,—such a place and position among men; something of a goal of honor for you, perhaps, if, a little aspiring, you would attain unto what Dr. Cox would have called "the height of conspicuity." Fortunately, or providentially, rather, there was among the young men, fresh from the revivals, the experiences and consecrations we have spoken of, a piety that could and did, in good measure at least, resist the temptations to arrogance and pride, and putting-on of airs,—albeit the tinsel and trappings of an earlier time,—the knee-buckles and powdered hair,—those prime essentials of dignity and gravity, not to say sanctity, had not yet quite faded from mortal vision.

The parson and divine. It is quite conceivable that a good man and humble may covet earnestly a high position as affording him a better field and freedom to serve God and his generation. Certain it is, the young man looking to the ministry in those early days was regarded as worthily aspiring to place himself upon such vantage ground. "This is a true saying,—if a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work." Channing and Emerson agreed in calling the ministry the finest of all the professions.

4. The ministry in those days was held to be the post and place for eminent usefulness. If you want to do great things for the Master, be a minister. Mr. By-Euds and Mr. Money-Love didn't edge up to you with their soft suggestion that you could be just as good a man, and do just as much good in the world, in some other sphere of life, in some shorter, easier, cheaper means and methods, — Christian associations, temperance work, Sabbath school, and personal effort. There were not then these open doors,—or they were not known and recognized as now. William E. Dodge, cultivating as he has done a vast and varied field of Christian activities, would, in the earlier time, have been looked upon as little better or other than a picturesque anachronism,—out of time, place, propriety, prophecy, or possibility, — a somewhat of a sort with the man's conjecture that, in killing Abel, Cain must have obtained from Hartford, Conn., one of Colt's revolvers. No; instead, one highway, cast up and prepared, a royal road, a king's highway for you. If you would work and win, strike for the goal and the prize,—be a minister and preach the gospel.

Well, now, we have the young Christian in the early time,—his conscience and consecration and good impulse. Can he attain to the sacred office? Should he attempt it? Some things will evermore seem adverse. Perhaps straitened means, state of family, time of life, long toil of preparation, long waiting,—perhaps lady waiting,—advice to the contrary, uncertainty of success, burdens of work and care in the ministry, impulse to cut across lots, or climb up some other way,—some one or more of these, ready at all times to hinder and dissuade.

1. Wanted then as ever an educated ministry.

2. Such education, at the easiest, costs not a little.

3. By far the greater number in the ministry and adorning it are not from the rich,—there were not the rich then as now,—but from families of humbler means, perhaps no means at all, except their riches in Christ. It has always been so, and will be in this land

Now our young aspirant of forty or fifty years ago. Many things favoured his wish and choice. Parents will toil and economize to carry their dear boy through, and up to a place so honorable, useful, and sure. The Education Society, a new thing and admirable, with Dr. Cornelius and Prof. B. B. Edwards, rare men, with magnetic force to push its work, brings its offers and appeals, and throws into the question a moral and material weight, which, all things considered, it has not done since, nor can again. Expense of education comparatively small. Boy and family have not been frightened at hearing of college clubs and crews, and contests, journeys, regattas, class-suppers, and secret societies, etc., etc.,—those abominations that make desolate. The times, not of telegraphs and rushing haste, but more patient and plodding, slow and sensible. Ten years not then so very long a time for getting ready to preach. Boy from plough, loom, or anvil, in happy ignorance of luxurious living, had never crossed the plain of ease, nor seen Vanity Fair, except in Bunyan. Boy inured to toil, and could endure hardness. William Goodell, on foot from Templeton to Andover, with trunk strapped to his back, thereby gaining his bent form,—a mark of honor which he could well afford to carry with him through life, as good old Jacob could his lameness, after beating that angel at wrestling. Boy and family have not had their eyes dazzled to blindness by visions of sudden wealth. Boy and family have not had their zeal frozen nor chilled by scepticisms, suggesting doubts whether this much ado about saving men in the present life and present probation be, after all, so needful and wise. Have n't heard disheartening talk about the exacting demands of the age,—how a minister must understand all mysteries, must know everything, and be everything and everywhere,—must be Stuart, Woolsey, McCosh, and Chadbourne, all in one,—pastor, teacher, and evangelist, all in one. Have n't heard a hue and cry about a surplus of ministers,—a cry eagerly caught up in a later day and sounded along the tribes from Beersheba even unto Dan; a great multitude of impotent folk at the pool of Bethesda, or some ministerial bureau, waiting for an angel to come down and put them in; or, a trial almost as humiliating, the walking through dry places, seeking rest and finding none. Have n't read the parable, how on a time sixty men took cars from Springfield for Boston, got out at each of twelve stations, and were counted over again,—the same sixty every time,—and how, on arriving at Boston, the sixty had become seven hundred and twenty,—a great surplus of ministers! Have n't seen, week after week, a Monday's New York daily, showing how pestered and puzzled and perplexed a score of ministers have been to find or frame a something to preach upon, and entertain and draw, and how, in their straits, they did, yesterday, preach science, ethics, æsthetics, culture, the most advanced thought, marriage and divorce, sphere of woman, moral reforms, evolution, every thing, almost, except the gospel of God's love and grace to dying men,—or, as Mrs. Partington has it, “Dispensed with the Gospel.” And, finally, the boy and friends haven't been told, to their amazement, that the average time of a minister in one place and pastorate is about three and a half years; then the breaking up and tearing up, and a removal to,—who shall tell him where?

No. The boy in those days, and yearning to preach the gospel, was happily exempt from most of these and the like dissuasions. The aspects and prospects were brighter,—in these regards at least. There were not seen in those days these so many things of a contrary part to dampen and depress a youthful and Christian ardor.

Boy up there at his work, and with his theme and hope; and so he walks

“In glory and in joy
Behind his plough upon the mountain-side.”

He is thinking, — thinking what to do, what he can and ought. He can think. The isolation and stillness help him. He is not interrupted, and thrown off the track on both sides at once; he hears no railroad whistle; he sees no excursion train; he is not diverted to day-dreams about sociables and suppers, and picnics and festivals, and concerts and lectures. He can think on and clear through to resolve. “Stillness!” But there is music; the air is full of it. Electrical currents, inspiration, uplift, impulsion. Those wonderful revivals, and their baptism upon him; and missions. new, strange, wonderful; and Macedonian cries, and glad responses to them. The mountains labored, and brought forth men and missionaries. — Pliny Fiske of Shelburne, Jonas King of Hawley, Wm. Goodell of Templeton, and other Christian heroes of like precious faith. The spectacle, as then looked upon, — young men taking their lives in their hands, bidding farewell to kindred and country, cheerfully consenting to bear all the great perils and privations of a life in heathen lands, and, not least, never to return; never, no, never. And the Calebs were heard saying, “Let us go up at once and possess it; for we are able to overcome it.” Peter Parker for China, and the walls there to fall down immediately, — were they not as those of Jericho had done? That grand man, Rev. Leonard Bacon, as you might have seen and heard him fifty years ago. Look into his face, — shining as it had been the face of an angel, — while, in notes almost divine, he sings: —

“ See the glory beaming star.
Traveller! Yes, it brings the day, —
Promised day of Israel.”

Hear Dr. Griffin close his missionary sermon with ecstasies and transports, “I see, I see,” and “ Earth rolls the rapturous hosanna round.”

Had not the millennium already dawned?

The situation as then, — the field, the calls. Would not the young man, loving and yearning, and come to the kingdom at such a time, respond, “Here am I, send me”? I think he would. I think he did.

May an old man, in closing, say a word personal to himself? THE MINISTERIAL BRETHERN, — I love them more and more as the years come and go, and more highly esteem them for their worth and work's sake. If I might go back and choose my way of life again, I would choose the Christian ministry, as preferable by far to anything else this world could offer me. I should like right well to do my life-work over again, and would do it better next time, God helping me. I think I would.

RELIGIOUS WORK AMONG FOREIGNERS.

BY REV. HENRY A. STIMSON OF WORCESTER.

THERE can be no question in a Christian mind that the gospel is meant for all men, and is adequate for saving any man. There can be no question that a Christian having a purer gospel than his neighbor is under obligation to do all in his power wisely and lovingly to induce his neighbor to accept the purer faith in lieu of the impure. Are we not brethren? bound, therefore, to help one another by the purest and surest way to Christ?

The little we, as Congregationalists, are doing for foreigners in the United States has of late been frequently reviewed. One half of the white population of the country is foreign by birthplace or parentage; that is, 6,679,943 are foreign born, and 14,922,744 have one or both parents foreign, — in all, 21,602,687 of the forty-three and a half millions of whites in the United States are foreign. In this vast multitude we have one hundred and fourteen Welsh churches, sixteen or eighteen German, and a half-dozen French, Swedish, Dutch, — less than 8,000 members in all, — as representing our definite aggressive work for foreigners. A few individuals are to be found in all parts of the land members of our American Congregational churches, but their number is so small that the inadequacy of our work may fairly be regarded as correctly declared by these statistics. It is a state of affairs which challenges painful attention far and wide. But our concern to-day is with the foreigners in Massachusetts. According to the census of 1880, nearly one half the aggregate population of the State, or 882 832 out of 1,783,085, is foreign. Of these 443,491 are foreign born, and 439,341 the children of such. To understand readily where our work lies, it is desirable to know in what sections of the State the foreign population is situated, and to what nationalities it belongs. Dividing the State in half by the eastern border of Worcester County, the foreign population is as follows: —

IN THE EASTERN SECTION.

Barustable County . . . . .	4,682
Bristol . . . . .	71,223
Dukes . . . . .	400
Essex . . . . .	108 874
Middlesex . . . . .	164,871
Nantucket . . . . .	400
Norfolk . . . . .	42,912
Plymouth . . . . .	18,369
Suffolk . . . . .	242,184

IN THE WESTERN SECTION.

Berkshire . . . . .	32,052
Franklin . . . . .	10,079
Hampden . . . . .	55,413
Hampshire . . . . .	19,656
Worcester . . . . .	111,717
Total . . . . .	228,917

In 1870 forty-three per cent of the population of the State was foreign. In 1880 forty-nine and one half per cent. This ratio is apparently increasing, so that to-day more than one half our population is foreign.

The principal nationalities represented among us are the following:—

Irish . . . . .	536,781
French Canadian . . . . .	(about) 101,500
German . . . . .	38,224
Scandinavian . . . . .	8,195

During the decade ending with 1880 the Irish immigration reached its maximum, and shows now a loss of ten per cent in ten years in the ratio of total of foreign born. During the same period the French Canadians gained six per cent. The Scandinavian element is new and rapidly increasing.

Of these foreigners, one and all, it may be said, "they have come to stay." The French Canadians, the least stable of immigrants, have recently protested against the public statement that they are here only to earn money and return home. They show that not a few of their number have become owners of real estate. Many are naturalized, many have engaged in permanent occupations, and some already hold public office. We are forced thus to recognize that these foreigners, be it for better or worse, are now and henceforth a large and steadily increasing class in the permanent population of our favored State. Should immigration entirely cease, the ratio of foreigner to native will continue to increase, owing to the size of their families; with immigration continuing as at present, the increase will be rapid. The problem of the foreigner may well be regarded as the most important that confronts us.

In this vast foreign population we have four small churches with an aggregate membership of less than 300.

A series of inquiries has been addressed by your committee to all our churches, to learn as fully as possible what the actual situation is. Two hundred and ninety-four churches have replied. Of these 33 report that they have a number of foreigners in attendance at church and Sunday school, and 41 others that they have a few. Quincy reports "a great many in attendance." Amesbury says, "One fourth the church and one third the Sunday school are foreign." Newton, North, "Two thirds of church and Sunday school." The Highland Church, Boston, has "a Sunday school of 500, in which a native-born child is the exception." The Shawmut and Phillips churches of Boston and the Dedham church reach a good many Germans through their mission chapels. The Greenfield church and Boylston Church, Jamaica Plain, are also doing special work among the Germans. The Payson Church, Easthampton, gets nearly all the children of foreigners into the Sunday school. The Ludlow church reports, "one third the adult attendance at the Sunday service, one seventh of its membership, and one third of the children in Sunday school are foreign." The churches of South Attleboro, Braintree, Berkley, Wilmington, and the Second Pittsfield report pleasant relations existing between their pastors and the foreign population, with prospect of usefulness. The Central Church, Fall River, reaches very many foreigners, and is "pushing the work with excellent results." The Mt. Vernon, Boston, and the South Church, Lawrence, make a specialty of work among the Chinese. The Lowell, Southbridge, and Worcester churches are aiding churches they have recently started among the French; and the Worcester churches are also erecting a place of worship for the Swedish Congregational Church. The church at Three Rivers holds special services for the French, and the Summer Street Church, Worcester, has a service for Armenians.

The returns from the churches reveal, first, very plainly, that little has as yet been done. In the main, whatever the reason, our Congregational churches have ignored, or sought to ignore, the presence of the foreigner. His name appears at rare intervals on our roll of members, and, in the way of specific, well-directed, earnest effort in his behalf, we have not much to show. What little has been done is principally in the eastern section of the State.

Second, it appears that wherever effort has been made good results are obtained. The flourishing French Church in Lowell is composed almost entirely of converted Romanists. The churches doing special work among the Germans report regular attendance, converts every year, and faithful membership. The Swedes are reported grateful for recognition wherever invited to church and Sunday school. No church in the State has probably made so large a gain per centum or enjoyed more uniform revival influences than the single Swedish church we have in our connection. Several churches report that their attentions to their Catholic neighbors have been followed with a marked change in their demeanor and an evident breaking down of prejudice.

Third, it is perfectly manifest that the existing state of things is largely due to neglect. Not a few churches apparently take no notice whatever of the foreigners in their neighborhood, and do not know whether they are few or many, still less what their spiritual condition may be. Others again have a feeling that they are doing their whole duty in conducting regular services every Sunday. If anybody, foreign born or native, desires the gospel, he will find it there promptly on time at half past ten o'clock Sunday morning. They recognize that few seem to want it on those terms; but their skirts, they think, are clean. Others again have a feeling that these foreigners all have some form of religion of their own, that that is sufficient for them, and that it is either impossible to induce them to change it, or the attempt will expose us to the invidious charge of proselyting.

What are the facts? Many of the Swedes and most of the Scotch and English are Evangelical Christians, having a right to expect and sure to be grateful for brotherly Christian welcome. The remainder of the Swedes and most of the Germans are Lutherans; they belong to a Protestant church that is alien to our land, historically connected with the state, and entirely unfitted to do the special religious work here required.

It fails to hold the third generation, and loses largely the second, while not a few of the first are quickly carried away by the strong forces of the new world of both life and thought in which they find themselves. If these Protestant immigrants and their children are to be saved for Christ, they must be brought as quickly as possible and as thoroughly as possible into fellowship with ourselves. Their own churches do not in their practice maintain the distinction between converted and unconverted men, and while to the immigrant they have for a time the charm of the associations of home, in contrast with the more aggressive forms of faith which he sees about him, they quickly lose their power. That these Protestant foreigners can be reached is witnessed by the fact that our Baptist and Methodist brethren have already received so many into their communion. The latter have no less than 40,000 German members, and report them as among their staunchest and most valued adherents.

The remainder of the foreigners are nominally Roman Catholics. All know how well they are provided with churches, how vigilant are their priests, and as a rule how devoted the people are to their form of faith. Many of them are without doubt sincere Christians. At the same time, it is also to be recognized that their religion is corrupt, that their church is utterly alien, that their people are practically without the Bible, and that even in Catholic countries the hold of the church upon the men is very light. In our own land it is still less firm, and there is a constant stream of children from Catholic households drifting into irreligion and often into vice. We have long felt the need of sending missionaries to Italy, Spain, France, Bohemia, and Mexico; now the Lord has brought these people to our doors. If we have a purer faith, we are not only under obligation to do all in our power to impart it to them, but by as much as it is purer and better we must believe that the effort to impart it will be successful.

In the fourth place, the practical question is one largely of method. How is this great work to be done? First of all, it is perfectly plain that when no special effort is put forth nothing will be accomplished. If you would catch fish, you must have the right kind of hook, baited with the right bait, and cast in the right place. You must go where the fish are, and mean to catch them.

The church that reports in response to the inquiry, "Are you making any direct effort to reach foreigners?" "Yes, we have preaching every Sabbath"; or that other, that replies, "They pursue their own course undisturbed by us"; or that other, that says, "No, because they are Roman Catholic"; or still that other, that answers, "No, for it might be useless," of course will accomplish nothing. On the other hand, where a church, be it large or small, in city or country, recognizes that it has work in hand, — for the Lord has brought foreigners to its door, — will speedily discover the successful way of reaching them. The Easthampton church seems to be doing the work no less efficiently than the Highland Church in Boston, and the churches in South Attleboro, Berkley, Tyngsboro, Sherburne Falls, and Ludlow, no less than the Shawmut in Boston, and those in Lowell and Fall River. Here it is a pastor who has found his way to the hearts of the foreigners by personal visitation; there a Sunday-school teacher who has gathered for himself a class of foreigners; here a church makes special effort to secure the attendance of foreigners at its regular service by personal invitation, cordial welcome, and assigned sittings; there by having separate services in their interest; here a church has a chapel devoted to foreigners situated close to their homes; there other churches combine to support a missionary giving his whole time to this work.

Whatever the method, where something is done there are results. Wisdom comes with experience, interest is awakened, hearts are touched, and a double blessing quickly follows to the stranger at the gate, and no less to the church that ministers to him. The man who for years has been doing the largest work among the French Catholics in Canada was won from Catholicism, and helped on into the ministry by the Elliot Church of Newton. The German of whom most is to-day expected by the Congregational churches of the United States was taken out of a saloon by one of our churches only a few years since. The largest contribution toward the debt of an important Congregational church was recently made by a successful merchant, who, as a poor Catholic Irish boy, was first won to its Sunday school, and then to Christ and a large Christian manhood.

Here is a vast mass of throbbing life rolled up against our churches. It offers to us infinite contributions of strength and unmeasured opportunity of usefulness, if we attack it vigorously, earnestly, determined to win souls for Christ. It becomes a portent of evil that no man can estimate, a judgment that no man will care to meet, if we continue to treat it as we have done in the past. This foreign problem has up to this hour been our Waterloo. Not a few of our churches have suffered irretrievable injury, — some have even gone out of existence, — through the simple pressure of the foreigner. We have left these men and women, our neighbors, to themselves. We have been indifferent as to what form of religion they have, or whether they have any. We have suffered them either to be massed against our churches and our civil institutions alike by the Church of Rome, or to be swept away into defiant infidelity. The most urgent home-missionary work to which the providence of God is calling our churches lies not in Arizona and New Mexico, but at our very doors, for on our doing it, and doing it successfully, will depend in no small degree our very existence in the years to come.

MISSIONS IN CITIES AND LARGE TOWNS.

BY CHARLES F. THWING, CAMBRIDGE.

THE problem of missions in cities and large towns is the most serious problem which the Congregational churches of Massachusetts have to solve. It is the most serious by reason of the twofold consideration that the large proportion of the people of the old Bay State dwells in cities, and also that so large a proportion of this population belongs to the mission classes. If twenty-two per cent of the people of this country live in cities, more than seventy per cent of the people of Massachusetts have their homes in towns of more than ten thousand inhabitants. This Commonwealth has a larger number of cities of twenty thousand people or more than any other State. Pennsylvania has nine, New York twelve, Massachusetts thirteen. Massachusetts has fifty-seven towns of more than five thousand persons, and thirty-one towns and cities of more than ten thousand persons. About twelve hundred thousand of her nearly eighteen hundred thousand inhabitants live in towns of more than five thousand population. What proportion of this population, — more than equal in size to the city of New York — belongs to the neglecting or the neglected classes, it is impossible fairly to estimate; but it is just to affirm that several hundred thousand are, if not neglected, at least neglecting.

What direct effort, then, are the Congregational churches making to reach these masses? Nearly one third of all our churches in this Commonwealth are located in these cities and large towns. What are they doing to make Christian these neglecting classes?

The reports received allow comprehensive answers. A few churches declare themselves to be mission churches, and affirm that all their services are arranged to attract and to hold this part of the population. Other churches and many affirm they endeavor to reach this class by means of visiting committees. Other churches reach them through their Sunday school. Other churches reach through the mission Sunday school. Others influence them through a weekly prayer meeting or preaching service. Others touch them through the "Associated Charities"; others through the open-air gospel meeting; others through the service of prayer or of preaching held in the school-houses. Churches in at least five cities employ missionaries. The City Missionary Society of Boston had in its service last year twenty-four missionaries. Each was assigned to a field belonging by geographical considerations to a particular church. Under its auspices more than two thousand religious meetings were held, more than fifteen thousand different families visited, fourteen hundred children gathered into the Sabbath school, and seventy-seven persons converted.

The Eliot Church of Boston, within whose walls we are gathered, reports that over one hundred scholars in its school are of this class. The Shawmut Church of Boston reports many services and successful for this part of the population. The Central Church of Worcester reports that "fully one half of the children of the primary departments" of its Sunday school are from families not attending any church, who are gathered by a missionary. The Union Church of Worcester reports that it has a good many of this class, both old and young, in its school. The Central Church, Fall River, presents an outline of its endeavors. It supports a missionary, it holds a special service of preaching, a prayer meeting, a cottage meeting, and conducts a mission Sunday school. It also has a mothers' meeting, an industrial school, besides a course of lectures. If any church is achieving more, it has failed to report the facts. One pastor in a manufacturing city, in answer to the question, "What direct effort is your church making to reach the neglecting classes?" says, "Warm church, reception committee, plenty of invitations, advertised services, and the voice of one crying in the pulpit." In reply to the inquiry, "Are you reaching them by your Sunday school?" he says, "Not much, except at picnics and Christmas festivals." But these are examples of the most vigorous work among the neglecting classes.

Score after score of reports from churches large in membership, strong in equipment, located in the centre of populations specially needing the gospel of Christ,—scores of reports are received from such churches, which fail to state that any effort is made to reach the neglecting classes, which declare that they have no regular service for them, which affirm that they make no efforts to reach them, and which confess that through the Sunday school they reach them only to a small extent. Fully one half of the churches sending reports acknowledge they are making no direct effort to reach the neglecting classes,—a confession that rolls a great burden of responsibility upon this association.

From the answer, therefore, to the question of what is done, springs a second question, What ought to be done?

What ought to be done? Relations more intimate ought to be formed between churches of different denominations in reaching the neglected classes. The churches obey the suggestion of the Master, and are fishers for men. They cast out their broad nets of invitation, and throw over their lines of aggressive work. With these instruments certain waters are lashed, and other waters are unruffled. If the lines do not occasionally become entangled, and the nets snarled each with the other, it is certainly true that the results would be larger and more commensurate with the labor expended by the separation of the boats, and the giving of a broader sweep to each fisherman. Churches have ceased to quarrel. Let them begin to work together. The Home Missionary Society, at its Saratoga convention, arranged for the appointment of a committee of comity to adjust denominational differences occurring in the field of labor. Let the churches of each city and village become colaborers in reaching the unchurched. Recently, at the suggestion of the North Avenue Church of Cambridge, four churches, the Baptist, the Episcopal, the Unitarian, as well as herself, have united in making a religious census of a neighborhood which may to a degree be regarded as their special territory. A professional canvasser is employed, who, going to each house, inquires the church preferences of each family. Upon this large mass of people who are thus discovered as having no or slight religious affiliations, these churches bring their zeal and energy to bear. Money is thus saved. Labor is economized. Thoroughness in method and work is assured. Thus in every city and town Christians may be made; and thus, also, Congregationalists are made.

What ought to be done? Churches ought to be organized in these neglected districts of the large cities. I do not say that there ought not to be churches on the Back Bay, — churches ought to be there, and the more the better, — but I do say that churches, that Congregational churches, ought to be formed at the North End. I say not mission chapels: Congregationalists do not, by either nature or grace, love to be members of mission chapels; but put churches, regular, full-fledged Congregational churches, into those dark districts. Let the Congregationalists endeavor to repeat in Boston the work which Thomas Chalmers did in the West Port of Edinburgh. Let the Congregationalists send some Edward Judson into the North End, who shall there labor as labors Edward Judson in the lower parts of New York. Do you ask who shall pay the bills? The West Port church paid its own bills, and more.

If these churches cannot be self-supporting, the Home Missionary Society will aid. The American Home Missionary Society boasts of the churches it has formed in St. Paul, in St. Louis, in Kansas City. Why cannot we also boast of the churches we have formed in the foreign, uncivilized parts of this great city? Parts of Boston are as truly missionary ground, more truly home-missionary ground than the great cities of the West. Within almost sound of my voice is established a church which attracts every Sabbath a congregation of a thousand, which has a Sabbath school of fifteen hundred, which commands the entire time and services of several Christian workers. It is placed in the midst of a missionary field. The Ruggles Street Church is doing a great work for the kingdom of Christ and for the kingdom of the Baptist. On North Bennett Street, of this city, stands an edifice in which Edward Beecher and Dr. Blagden preached as pastors, in which, four years ago, was dissolved the Salem and Mariners' Church. I whisper no word regarding the wisdom of the dissolution: pastors judicious and energetic considered the question; but I do say that is sad beyond expression, that the history of Congregationalism in Boston is marked by the death of as many churches as now exist within her old limits. I do say that there ought to be Congregational churches in the dark spots of our large cities, — Congregational churches thoroughly furnished to do the Lord's work for those who most need it. I further affirm that, with spiritual consecration, they may be formed. They may be formed, and, can I not say, shall be formed?

What ought to be done? Each church in every city and large village ought to feel that this work is her work. Congregationalism, above every other denomination, is strong only as the individual church is strong; therefore, the individual church should labor and labor with zeal for the neglected in her own midst. She may feel that for this task she is not qualified. But either she is qualified or she can become qualified. Thus felt John Knox unfitted to preach. The garrison in the Castle of St. Andrew's, in which he served as tutor, desired him to become colleague to their chaplain. He resisted their solicitations; he declared his inability to preach. The garrison knew Knox better than he knew himself. At the close of a sermon on the election of ministers, and by express prearrangement, the regular chaplain, Rough, turning toward Knox, who sat in the congregation, said, "In the name of God and of his Son, Jesus Christ, I charge you that you refuse not this holy vocation, but as you tender the glory of God, the increase of Christ's kingdom, the edification of your brethren, that you take upon you the public office and charge of preaching, even as you seek to avoid God's heavy displeasure, and desire that he shall multiply his graces unto you." The history of Scotland proves that John Knox obeyed the call.

Standing here as the unknown Rough of St. Andrew's Castle, I would say to the Congregational churches of this old Bay State: In the name of God and of his Son, Jesus Christ, I charge you each that you refuse not this holy vocation, but as you regard the glory of God, the edification of your brethren, that you take upon you the charge of labor among the neglected, even as you seek to avoid God's heavy displeasure, and desire that he shall multiply his graces unto you. And shall not the future history of the Congregational churches of Massachusetts reveal our obedience to this call?

THE BENEVOLENT CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE CHURCHES.

BY REV. ALBERT C. SEWALL, WILLIAMSTOWN.

Of the five hundred and thirty-two Congregational churches in the State, we have received reports from three hundred and sixteen. The majority of these reports cover all the points respecting which information was desired. Many, however, are defective, and others are not sufficiently explicit.

Your committee deeply regret that upon a question of such vital importance their report is necessarily based upon such imperfect returns. The information which we have succeeded in gathering, however, is of great value and exceedingly suggestive.

Ten of the churches reporting make no benevolent contributions whatever. A better reason for this could hardly be assigned than that given by one of the ten, viz., that it is paying off a church debt. We suggest, however, that the total stagnation of benevolent activity even for such a reason is exceedingly undesirable.

It is very suggestive that several of the remaining nine which make no benevolent contributions state in substance as a reason that they are barely able to pay their own current expenses. "There is that scattereth," says the proverb, "and yet increaseth; there is that withholdeth more than is meet and tendeth to poverty." The order of the gospel is profoundly philosophical. "Give and ye shall receive"; "The liberal soul shall be made fat."

Six churches make benevolent contributions at monthly missionary and temperance concerts only. Your committee are of the opinion that unless in these churches these meetings are more largely attended than is usually the case, many members of the church and congregation are not appealed to for benevolent gifts by this method.

Three hundred of the churches reporting make benevolent contributions otherwise than at the monthly missionary and temperance concerts. Of these, thirty-three have no system in the matter. Contributions are taken occasionally and irregularly.

Your committee wish to re-echo the sentiment expressed by several of those who, with commendable honesty, yet in sadness, reported this condition of things, — that the total "lack of system is bad." It reveals a low state of interest in the great movements of the kingdom of Christ and little earnest purpose to advance them. It is encouraging to note that in some of these cases the hope is expressed that a definite system may soon be introduced. If we are right in thinking that had the one hundred and sixteen non-reporting churches replied to our question, the number having no system of benevolent contributions, if not the number making no such contributions, would have been largely swelled, the reasons for the work of your committee are even more cogent and pressing than has been supposed.

Of the two hundred and sixty-seven churches which have some regularity other than collections at monthly concerts, seventeen do not state in what this regularity consists.

We have then two hundred and fifty churches out of the three hundred and sixteen reporting which state definitely what their system is.

Considering, first, the question of time only, these two hundred and fifty churches fall into two classes, — those which do and those which do not use some weekly system. Ninety-five do not and one hundred and fifty-five do use a weekly system of some kind. Bear in mind that this is not for benevolence only, but either for benevolence alone, or parish expenses alone, or the two combined, it being impossible from the returns to make accurate classifications at this point.

Of the ninety-five churches which do not use a weekly system, few contribute annually, three of these entertaining only one cause, the others several causes.

In a single case large increase of gifts has been secured in the use of this annual method by a more systematic arrangement of the causes which are specially presented by the pastor, envelopes being distributed to be returned the succeeding Sabbath. The method which preceded it was less systematic and less faithfully worked.

Four churches contribute semi-annually, one five times in the year, nineteen quarterly, ten once in two months, forty-three monthly, and eight semi-monthly, besides those which take collections at monthly concerts only.

Of the one hundred and fifty-five churches using some weekly system, in one offerings are gathered at every preaching service, in three twice each Sabbath, and in one three times.

The number of causes entertained by each reporting church is suggestive. Fifty-three churches make no statement upon this point. Sixteen contribute to only one cause each, and three of these but once a year; twenty-three to two causes (one of the twenty-three to others occasionally); fifty-one to three causes (eighteen of the fifty-one to others occasionally); thirty-seven to four causes (four of the thirty-seven to others occasionally); twenty-eight to five causes (one of the twenty-eight to others occasionally); thirty-seven to six causes (four of the thirty-seven to others occasionally); twenty-four to seven causes (four of the twenty-four to others occasionally); thirteen to eight causes (three of the thirteen to others occasionally); eleven to nine causes, five to ten causes, two "to all the leading Congregational boards, except the Bible Society," — which is not, however, a distinctively Congregational society, — and sixteen "to all the leading Congregational boards." These figures reveal the fact that a purely denominational motive enters very slightly into our Congregational benevolent work. That a society is a Congregational society does not sufficiently commend it to the churches as a channel for their gifts. Special preferences, or more commendably, a careful survey of the method of a society's administration, the rate per cent consumed in cost of administration, and the supposed comparative value of its work, determine the majority of the churches in selecting the societies to which they shall contribute.

The number of separate interests and the number of churches contributing to each are still more significant.

The American Board leads off with two hundred and thirty-three churches contributing. I include in this those contributing to the Woman's Board.

The American Home Missionary Society follows closely with two hundred and twenty-six churches.

Not far behind, the American Missionary Association, with one hundred and ninety-six churches. These three societies are far in advance of all others in the number of churches contributing to their treasuries.

The number contributing to the American Congregational Union falls to 84; the Seaman's Fund Society to 75; American Tract Society, 61; American Bible Society, 56; College and Education Society, 54; Sabbath School and Congregational Publishing Society, 51; New West Education Commission, 36; local missions and charities, 34; Boston City Missionary, 15; Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, 14 (there is, doubtless, a mistake here through counting to the American Home Missionary Society, instead of the Massachusetts Home Missionary, churches which simply reported "Home Missions," without specifying which Home Missionary Society was intended); Baldwin Place Home for Little Wanderers, seven churches; Ministerial Aid and Hampton Institute, three churches each; the Children's Aid Society, two; Young Men's Christian Association, American and Foreign Union, American Sabbath School Union, Howard University, and Taunton Associated Charities, one each: in all, twenty-three channels of benevolence.

These figures would seem much more significant if the method of reckoning should be reversed. I will not weary you with the whole list. Consider but for a moment that of two hundred and sixty-three churches in Massachusetts reporting the number of boards and societies to which they make benevolent contributions, thirty churches give nothing to foreign missions, thirty-seven churches give nothing to home missions, sixty-seven churches give nothing to the American Missionary Association, one hundred and seventy-nine churches give nothing to the American Congregational Union, and so down the constantly increasing list as the number giving to each steadily decreases.

Either there is reason to question the wisdom of so many co-operative societies, or their claims are not sufficiently understood, or both the intelligence and the breadth of interest of the churches in our own denominational benevolent work need to be very largely increased.

There is wide diversity of methods in gathering the funds both for current expenses and for benevolence. The simplest method is by far the most prevalent, viz., the contribution box, plate, or basket, either with or without special appeals from the pulpit, in some cases preceded by a careful canvass of the parish for subscriptions or weekly pledges. For pledges, pledge cards are used, on which the name of the donor and the weekly or monthly assessments are written, and to all donors who desire it bunches of envelopes are furnished, one for each Sabbath in the year, in which to enclose the gifts. For parish expenses a careful account is generally kept of these amounts, both as pledged and brought in. For benevolence an account is sometimes kept, but more generally after the pledge is given its fulfilment is left entirely to the honor of the donor.

Instead of the contribution box, plate, or basket, stationary boxes are placed in the vestibule, inside the church doors, or elsewhere in twenty of the churches reporting, while two have stationary boxes in each pew. A very few of the churches gather benevolent gifts by collections from house to house. The Harris system, or some modification of it, in use in sixteen churches, is spoken of in the highest terms, and seems generally satisfactory. It may be used either for parish expenses or for benevolence, although it was designed for benevolence only.* With slight modifications it seems equally well adapted for both. It was intended to dispense with canvassers, but may employ them, uses pledge cards and envelopes, and may use the contribution box, or any of the other methods of collecting mentioned.

In seven of the reports the systematic work by giving is spoken of as an act of worship. When so regarded it is frequently referred to in the leading prayer, immediately after which the gifts are gathered by the contribution box, or deposited in stationary boxes in the pews, while an anthem is sung by the choir, or appropriate Scripture selections are read from the pulpit.

From the facts thus collated it is evident that either of the systems of benevolent contributions in use is far better than no system. It is equally evident that no system as yet discovered is perfect. Each has its own advantages and disadvantages. It is also clear that no system will run itself. Average human nature, although the haven of Christian motive may be hidden and working in it, cannot well be relied upon to do from spontaneous impulse what the cause of Christ requires. Information is needed, exhortation with fervent appeal, and above all principle wisely regulated and applied.

The only objection to the weekly system seems to be the tendency to rely upon the voluntary principle unaided by sufficient instruction and appeal from the pulpit or otherwise.

This fault is not, however, essential to the system. It is incidental only and can be easily remedied.

The advantages of the weekly system are, its frequency, avoiding the risk so often run by other methods of stormy Sabbaths, and small audiences upon the only days when collections are taken. It tends more rapidly than any other system to develop the benevolent feelings. The more frequent their exercise, the more rapid their growth.

It appeals not only to feeling but to principle. It helps to make giving a matter of intelligent, consecrated purpose.

* See pamphlet, "The True Method of Giving," by Rev. George Harris, of Providence, R. I., p. 7.

It encourages all to give, and thus enlarges the number of givers. The testimony is quite general that in cases of increase by the introduction of the weekly system, the enlargement is due not so much to the pounds as to the shillings and the pence. The number of small contributions is multiplied.

It secures more money, and, as a rule, with less or at least more evenly divided effort. Two churches, indeed, report a falling-off in gifts by the introduction of the weekly system, presumably, although it is not so stated, from expecting too much of the system, remitting effort, supposing that method alone may be trusted to secure the desired results. This no mere method can ever do.

Nine churches report no increase in aggregate amount, but express satisfaction with the system, as, on the whole, preferable to any other.

Sixty churches report "increase," "large increase," "great gain in amount of funds contributed," but do not state the per cent of gain.

Of twenty-five others, one reports twenty per cent gain; two report thirty per cent gain; four report thirty-three and one third per cent gain; eleven report fifty per cent gain; one reports seventy per cent gain; one reports three hundred per cent gain; one reports from four to five hundred per cent gain; and one roundly five hundred per cent gain.

A still better test perhaps of the excellence of a weekly system is the fact that eighty-four churches have adopted it within the last ten years, the majority of these within the last five years, while many others are contemplating the change. Ten churches have a weekly system of benevolent contributions in their Sabbath schools, which have not yet adopted it for the church. One of these schools more than trebled its gifts in three months by this means.

The current is, therefore, setting very strongly toward the general introduction of some weekly system of benevolent contributions.

Your committee are exceedingly gratified by this result of their investigations.

They wish, in closing their report, to urge one or two thoughts which a careful study of the material in hand has impressed upon them.

1. The aggregate benevolence of our Congregational churches of Massachusetts, commendable as it appears when contrasted with that of some other sections of our country, has by no means reached the Christian standard.

The most accurate calculation I can make from the minutes of the General Association of 1882 gives the aggregate benevolent gifts for the year of the four hundred and three reporting churches as $4.68 only per resident member. Four dollars and sixty-eight cents per member for the year, to be divided among twenty-three interests! How much does this give to each, if apportioned equally? What a mere pittance to most, if divided according to the per cent of aggregate contributions bestowed upon each!

The total amount reported for charities and expenses for 1881, i. e., the total amount which the churches of Massachusetts give for the maintenance and extension of the cause of Christ both at home and abroad, averages but $16 44 per resident church member for the year; a little more than thirty-one and a half cents per week, or about four and a half cents per day, and of this small pittance a large proportion was given by those who are not members of the church but of the congregation only.

Your committee appeal to the churches whether four cents and a half per day is a worthy expression of our gratitude to Him who has bought us with His blood, and a satisfactory index of our interest in His kingdom. Is four cents and a half per day at all commensurate with the degree in which God has prospered these churches of Massachusetts?

2. A great work needs to be done to raise the benevolent activity of our churches to a worthy level of consecrated purpose and efficiency.

In how many of these churches is the three and one fourth cents per day for current expenses raised without great effort, and a resort to all sorts of selfish rivalries in pew renting, and appeals to the stomach if not to the love of unrighteous gain in fairs, festivals, and church lotteries?

How many parish treasurers in the Commonwealth ever find occasion to quote the words of the wise man to Moses, "The people bring much more than enough for the service of the work, which the Lord commanded to make"?

Our own home work, where not heavily manacled with debt, moves sluggishly, as if under compulsion, or is quickened into better activity too often by unworthy inducements.

Our foreign work is even less generously provided for.

Which of our benevolent societies is not compelled to beg for funds persistently and unremittingly? The heroic men and women at the front see open doors on every hand, which for lack of funds they cannot enter.

The entire world is open and inviting us. How worthy in the sight of God, how consistent with our prayers, "Thy kingdom come," "Send laborers, O Lord, into thy whitened harvest fields," is our response? See the mighty current of our gifts. Behold the solid phalanx of 70,000 Massachusetts Christians bringing one cent and a quarter a day to evangelize the world! What magnificent self-sacrifice is here!

A great work needs to be done to relieve us from this disgrace.

The outlying world needs the results of our greatly enlarged and systematic beneficence. We ourselves need the process. We as individual Christians need some systematic method of benevolence guided and impelled by principle as an offset against the strong tendency to worldliness incident to increasing worldly prosperity. We need it that we may keep alive the consciousness of our stewardship as Christians, and as an aid to the more worthy fulfilment of that stewardship.

Our churches need to give far more generously than they do and more intelligently, else a large proportion of their efficient force must lie idle, or returning on itself breed discord and dissension.

Clouds do not pour their contents back upon the lakes and streams out of which they were formed. They go wafted by the winds to lands that are parched and suffering. Such circulation is a part of God's great economy. In church life it is as necessary to the churches giving as to the lands receiving. We should not see the strife among brethren so prevalent to-day, theoretical dissension so bitter and acrimonious, if these contending parties were more profoundly filled with the spirit of our Saviour's last command, Go ye, make disciples of all the nations.

3. While your committee recognize the fact that the leading motive in all Christian giving should be love to Christ and fellow-men, we feel the need of larger information and more intelligent sympathy.

We wish to press the importance, whatever system of benevolence may prevail, of such continuous instruction and appeal from the pulpit, or by the circulation of appropriate literature, as shall make all the people familiar with the constitution, aims, and methods of our leading co-operative societies, and the needs of the world which they seek to supply.

4. We should not regret a very considerable increase of denominational honor. If there is anything distinctively good in Congregationalism and Congregational benevolent societies, Congregationalists may properly be expected to appreciate it and act accordingly; especially in view of the fact that other denominations are finding it wise to do their benevolent work through their own organizations. We see no reason for complaint in this, and no necessary increase of hostile sectarianism. We prefer to regard it as incidental to that wise division of labor which characterizes an advancing civilization. The call to us is more emphatic, however, to work with greater energy as we best can with our distinctive methods.

5. We wish to commend some weekly system to the earnest consideration of all the churches, and to emphasize it as an act of worship. Such giving is eminently scriptural, and has been proved not only feasible but highly advantageous. The scriptural proportion of amount is, "as God hath prospered you." The ratio of the tithe so prevalent in the Scripture is exceedingly suggestive.

6. And finally, your committee wish to emphasize the fact that the fountain of all Christian giving, as of all Christian character and life, is Jesus Christ. "He that abideth in me," said He, "and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit."

The more simple and complete the organism the better, but it is lifeless, fruitless, except the love of Christ fills it, clothes it with verdure, makes it fruitful to His own honor and glory.

We need better system, greater intelligence, but especially more gratitude and love.

ABSTRACT OF THE REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON INTEMPERANCE.

BY REV. WILBUR JOHNSON ROYALSTON, SECRETARY OF COMMITTEE.

For certain reasons, especially the recent more complete organization of the General Committee upon the Work of the Churches, the Committee on Intemperance has this year sought the materials for its report in common with the other branches of the General Committee, and from the same sources. The result has not been favorable as to fulness of reports. No returns have been received from Essex South, Woburn, and Middlesex South Conferences. Of the remaining 458 churches only fifty-four per cent report the exertion of any positive influence against intemperance. Of this number, twenty-seven rely simply upon faithful gospel preaching and example. Five work only "as against all sin." Fifteen seem to regard their duty as accomplished by votes for temperance men and for "No License." About two hundred exert themselves in ways that are both direct and church-like. Of these six have stringent provisions in the church constitution or by-laws. Eighty-nine make mention of special temperance sermons, and forty-nine of additional lectures or addresses. Thirty-five make use of the Sabbath-school concert; among which the Florence church is noticeable for its quarterly Sabbath-school Concert Temperance Organization, with over seven hundred names upon its pledge. Thirty one have direct instruction by temperance lessons in the school or special classes. Twenty-five have temperance prayer meetings; fifteen, regularly quarterly monthly or weekly meetings; nineteen, union meetings with other churches; and eleven, those that are special and occasional; sixteen, efficient individual effort at reclaiming the intemperate; thirty-six unite in work with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union or other outside organizations; five give aid to enforce the laws, especially through the "Law and Order League"; twelve report children and youths' societies, and thirteen more, societies of adults, or adults and youth, or regular committees appointed by the church; fifteen make use of pledges in the Sabbath school, and seventeen of general pledges in the church or whole congregation. The Jamaica Plain and Millbury Second churches substitute for the pledge a dignified declaration of intention to abstain; printed, with short explanatory statement of objects or temperance principles, upon a handsome card, which is circulated in families, or given as a certificate of membership in a simple organization whose secretary is elected annually by the church. Nine churches give special attention to providing temperance literature. One uses the cards of the "National Temperance Army." Another floods its neighborhoods with the cheap but useful papers of David C. Cook. Five churches in union with the W. C. T. U. have secured temperance instruction through either the public or special schools. Ten banish all fermented liquor from the communion-table. Six have made use of legal measures to restrain the sale of drink. Two have circulated prohibitory petitions, and two more rejoice in having furnished the right men for the political responsibility of enforcing the law within city limits.

As to the wisdom of constitutional prohibition, one hundred and forty-four representative correspondents from our churches approve the project mildly; and thirty-one, very strongly. Fourteen return a mild, and three a strong disapproval; while eighty-one represent the verdict of their communities as doubtful. It is objected that constitutional prohibition should come as the result of long enforcement of prohibitory law; that it would make the Constitution a continual bone of contention, endangering the reverence for all law; that the special legislation which it would necessitate is itself sufficient if demanded by public opinion; and that we had better enforce, first, the laws already in our own statute books. What may be accomplished in this direction is seen in the monthly meeting of the churches in Hubbardston, rousing the community to uphold its officers, close up the public bar, and maintain the no-license vote against the most violent effort. It may be seen in a larger town, swept clean by a movement led by one of our pastors; or in another, led by strict enforcement of a license law in one year to the enforcement of "no license" in the next; or, it may be seen in the work of the Worcester churches, with their mass meeting on Sabbath afternoon, fostering a public sentiment that influenced a political party, determined a nomination and election of mayor, affects the utterances of the public prints, and is moving on to grapple with other connected evils.

But with all this, there is a sphere of church activity yet more important, though less dazzling, and possibly less in that spirit of taking the sword, against which our Master warns us. A decision of the polls for no license is not a certain evidence that the church has been active; nor can a vote for prohibition be the sum, or the sufficient aim, of church temperance work. "They that take the sword shall perish with the sword." The character of our voting population is rapidly changing. Is it certain that the churches can continue to meet intemperance successfully by dependence upon political contests? Is it not better that the church make the citizen, through its appropriate work of forming character, and have the citizen to make the law? What if we should follow the course already taken by a few churches, and put the prohibitory amendment into the church constitution before we require it in the Constitution of the State? Is not the best power of the church apparent, even in the Worcester movement, as that which wakens popular sentiment by touching, under God, the connecting wires of individual convictions and hearts? On one of the pure-aired hills of Central Massachusetts, a temperance town, strong against license, was decidedly the opposite. The monthly gospel temperance meeting made the change. In a manufacturing village in the valley a little to the south, the stream that gave power to weld and sharpen public sentiment, within two years, to a decided majority against license, was the stream of Christian activity in the monthly meetings, the temperance concerts, and the total-abstinence society of the church. It is a triumph to stop the liquor selling of hotels, as in Chicopee, but a greater one that the seller become a church member, as in Otis, sorry that he ever sold. Is it not more Christian to rejoice over the six that have recently pledged away their cups in Sturbridge, or the five reclaimed from drink among the members of the church in whose house we have met?

On the whole, the situation appears encouraging. The movement toward practical work is gaining ground. More than half the churches seem convinced that something should be done. Is not this conviction right? Did not the apostles make the special appeal, "Be not drunken with wine," as they preached Christ and him crucified? A well-known city church is laboring in vain for the closing of two rum-shops within one hundred feet of its house of worship. How suitable, if a special temperance effort by such a church, made bright by electric lights and attractive by the magnetism of zeal for humanity, should seek to attain the end by alluring away the frequenters of those pest-pools of death! Our life-bringing gospel churches, charged with their magnetic power of song and faith and love; galleries of living pictures of ennobled manliness and refined loveliness, set by the flowing currents in the growing village or overgrown city; what are they, if not agencies of the divine Saviour to rescue those for whom he died, by alluring the slave of appetite and devotees of the dens of drink into the homes of a new free life? In one of our beautiful villages the beer-shop stands unhindered by law, as yet. But a fountain is to be erected close beside, where the waters of heaven gathered and poured forth by the pure springs of the hill-sides shall invite by the charm of a sparkling eye in every drop and the merry gurgle of their perpetual plunge. "Ho every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters." Such as this is the church of God pictured to be. "Living waters shall go out from Jerusalem." "Waters in the wilderness, and rivers in the desert." Why should not our churches take this character, practically, in the contest with this special form of the intoxication of sin? Let them not be like decorated jars of medicated waters, corked and sealed for the few who are wise to seek them; but running fountains, bearing everywhere their secret of life and refreshment, winning the devotees of appetite and sin to drink of the waters and be healed; while the fountain stream is itself kept pure and sweet and sparkling, because it runs.

The committee would propose the following recommendations:—

First. That the work be continued; with special charge by the General Association that the committee appointed make it as effective as possible, by more extended inquiries and such further suggestions as may be found suitable and acceptable.

Secondly. That it be carried on with a closer adherence to, and development of the original independent plan, for greater completeness in both the influence exerted and the reports gathered.

Thirdly. That the General Association specially invite and urge the temperance committees of the conferences to enter more actively into the work, by use of ministerial exchanges, by delivery of lectures or other addresses, and by every suitable method of exerting their influence throughout the fields of their separate conferences.

STATISTICS OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS FOR 1882.

BY REV. FRANCIS N. PELOUBET, NATICK.

If there is any modern representative of Ezekiel's valley of dry bones, it is supposed to be found in that region where statistics are collected and read by Rev. Dr. Dry-as-Dust, LL. D., and laid up in that alcove of the library marked, as Lowell suggests, "Literature suited to desolate islands."

But whether his imagination is correct depends on how the facts and figures are used.

A minister of two hundred years ago wrote a sermon on that incident in the life of Caleb where he offered to give to any one who would smite the city Kerjath Sepher his daughter Achsah to wife, and with her he gave as his blessing the upper and the nether springs. That, said Rev. John Everard, is Hebrew. Now let us translate it into English: Caleb, my heart; Kerjath Sepher, the City of the Book, or the Letter; Achsah, the rending of the veil. So that the meaning in English is, Oh, my heart, whosoever smiteth the City of the Letter shall enjoy the rending of the veil that hides great and glorious blessings, and shall drink of the upper and nether springs of Truth.

The statistics of the Congregational Sunday schools of this State have been collected by your efficient statistical secretary, Deacon George Beal, as given below. Let us, however, endeavor to smite the City of the Letter and rend the veil, and see what helpful truths flow from the upper and the nether springs that bubble up from the dry sands of these facts and figures.

I. WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.

On these facts we would remark:

(1.) That on the whole there has been a gain in almost all directions during the past year. Though not a year of remarkable harvests, yet it has been a year blessed in its fruits and full of hope. "Saving souls" is not here "a lost art." Neither is the "art of giving" a lost art. And one of the most hopeful signs for the future is the training of the children in benevolence, and in giving and doing for missions at home and abroad.

(2.) We are much more likely to obtain correct views from statistics when we take a wider range of years. We never can tell by the flow or ebb of the little waves whether the tide is really rising or falling. We can perceive the progress of the Sunday schools in this State by the following facts:—

Our churches had in 1830, 37,987 members; in 1882, 91,238.

Our Sabbath schools in 1830, 34,787 members; in 1882, 105,011.

So that in the last fifty years the Sabbath school has gained faster than the church membership, or more than three hundred per cent.

The increase in our day schools has been 5,182 in five years to a school population of 330,421. The increase in the Sabbath schools has been 4,500 in five years to Sabbath-school membership of 105,000, or nearly three times as great a ratio of increase as in our public schools.

(3.) The largest and best work of the Sunday school is unmeasurable by figures. It must be weighed, not counted,—“pondere, non numero.” We can tell something about quantity, but not much about quality. While as a rule a better quality of teaching and training will produce an increase in numbers, yet it is possible for a school to grow steadily better while its numbers may be decreasing.

When the musician who disliked the flute was asked what was worse than one flute in an orchestra, he replied, “Two flutes.” What is worse than a poor small school? “A poor large school.” It is possible for a school to have for its motto that of our college class, “pauci in numero, sed posted up.” Not many of us, but thoroughly taught and trained. That Sunday school is “poor indeed which can count its wealth,” for it is in the thoroughness of its study, its training in good works and in true thoughts, in its moral and spiritual life, its leading many to the Lord, rather than in numbers, by which it will be weighed in the balances of heaven. And yet improvement in quality will usually be followed by increase of numbers. People love to go where there is a “feast of fat things,” but, as was well said before this association last year, no amount of ringing never so loud a bell will induce people to board where the tables are empty.

(4.) There are two facts given in the statistics which show the hold the Sabbath school has upon the community outside of the church congregation.

One fact is the average attendance, which was sixty-two and a half per cent of the membership. This is not so very far behind that of our public schools, which was for last year seventy-one per cent. We may look at this in two ways. It may show us how much more we ought to do to keep our membership under close watch and more steady teaching, or it may show our hold of the classes who will not be regular, and who are not well trained at home.

The other fact is that 6,430 members are reported whose parents do not regularly attend church. This shows that we are reaching the children of these people, and gives us hope for the coming generation.

II. THE FIELD.

What remains to be done. There are two departments in the field of Sabbath-school work corresponding to the home and foreign mission work of the churches.

One duty is to bring into the Sunday school the larger proportion of those already reached by the other instrumentalities of the church.

If we accept Dr. Worden's definition of the Sunday school, that it “is the church of God assembled to teach and to learn, by the help of the Holy Spirit, the Word of Christ,” then we should never be satisfied till all the congregation are in the Sunday school, and all the Sunday school in the congregation.

There are not too many children in our Sunday schools, but there are too few adults.

I read not long ago of a lady who had at her dressing-table a vial of the elixir of youth, of which she took a few drops each day to keep herself young. But her waiting-maid seeing it, and wishing for youth also, drank up the whole bottle, when she became not the beautiful girl she wished to be, but a wrinkled, puny, helpless infant. Some schools drink too large draughts of the elixir of youth. They need a larger proportion of adults. And it would give power and influence to the schools, and help them in all their work, but especially in drawing in those who are without, if the honored, the leaders in other things, the fathers and the mothers, if all, as many already do, join with the children in the study of the Bible.

The other part of the field is that which lies at present outside of all Sunday schools, — all the children and youth who attend no Sunday school.

It is a matter of a good deal of interest to know how large this field is.

It has been stated that a comparison of the reports of the International Sunday-School Association with the U. S. Census Reports for 1880 shows that in almost every State "those yet to be gathered into the Sunday schools are more in number than those already in it. For example, the number of children who are of school age, and are outside of the Sunday school, is in Massachusetts 91,000."

Now that fact, if it be a fact, is astounding. It is more than astounding, it is an awful arraignment of our churches and Sunday schools, their condemnation written all over our fair State in black letters of ignorance and sin, "so large that it could be read from the stars." There would be abundant need of a new departure in church and Sunday-school work, if nowhere else.

But my experience with statistics immediately led me to question the fact; for I have learned that there is a great need of "the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Facts and Figures," and that of all falsehoods none are more worthy of the invader of Eden than those told by figures when they are put in the wrong place.

It is often "better not to know so much than to know so much that is n't so."

I sought for information from Rev. Henry Randall Waite, the special agent of the U. S. Census, in regard to religious organization; but his work is suspended for want of funds, and his facts and figures are in Washington. I hope to obtain them at some future time.

I then consulted Dr. Dorchester, the Mentor and Ulysses in one, for statistics. I find that there are no exact figures and complete statistics yet gathered on this subject; but there are certain things which will give us an approximate idea.

1. The state of things as reported is contrary to the observed facts in individual towns. These towns with which I am acquainted have no such unreachd number of children. On the contrary, the majority of the children are reached in greater or less degree by the Sunday schools.

2. Dr. Mosher, the former wise and efficient superintendent of the Women's Prison in this State, has informed me within a day or two that she has been accustomed to make most careful inquiries as to their attendance upon Sunday school of the inmates of that prison. Nearly all the inmates are of foreign descent, and claim to have attended Sabbath school. There are only eleven of American descent, and only three of these were brought up by their parents, the others being adopted children; but every one of these eleven Americans were attendants at some Sabbath school up to the age of sixteen.

Now if these, who would naturally be among the neglected and unreached class, have been brought under the influence of some Sabbath school (though it is a pity the training was not more effective), it is morally certain that one half the children in the State cannot be beyond the pale of Sabbath-school influence.

3. There are in the State of Massachusetts 104 206 illiterate persons over ten years of age who cannot write, nor most of them read. What a condition of things for the banner State as to education and religion! Behold, we are told, the fruit of State education, and of Puritanism, and of free churches! It is high time there was a change!

But if we examine the figures a little more closely, we discover that the illiteracy is imported, and is not the fruit of our institutions. Only 6,934 of them all are native Americans, and only 2,486 are natives of Massachusetts. Our institutions are so effective that of our own people only 2,486 are illiterate, and we will try and educate the children of these illiterates, of whom the great majority are adults, and their descendants shall feel the full power of educational and religious institutions. Indeed, already the number of native illiterates has decreased nearly one half in five years.

Such facts as these tend to show us that there cannot be so many beyond the pale of the Sunday school as the statistics seem to show, and bid us look a little closer at the figures.

4. Let us then examine the statistics more closely.

In our day schools there are 330,421 children of all ages.

The Sunday-school statistics of the International Convention at Toronto report as in the Sabbath schools of Massachusetts 212,782, not including officers and teachers, or 117,639 less than in our day schools.

Now in the first place the 1880 report shows 57,679 decrease in Sabbath-school scholars over the report of three years before. But there has really been an increase, and the decrease is simply the imperfection of the report, not a diminution in numbers.

The number of scholars reported in 1877 was 270,461. Since then the Sabbath schools in our denomination alone have increased 8,000. Therefore 280,000 is below the actual number in the Sabbath schools of this State.

Then there are quite a number of denominations who have a small number of churches in this State, and whom Dr. Dorchester thinks have largely been omitted, for it is only with great difficulty that he has lately obtained statistics of their church membership, — such as the German Reformed, Lutheran, Campbellite, Primitive Methodists, two branches of African Methodists, Swedenborgian.

Now, as a rule, the Sunday school numbers about as many as the members of the church. Let us then add about 7,000 for these. The Baptist reports of Sunday schools, too, are very imperfect, giving only 20,000 in the Sabbath school against 49,000 church members. 20,000 should, doubtless, be added for these. Moreover, the report of the International Convention covered only the Evangelical Sabbath schools. The Universalists number 14,000. The Unitarians at least as many more. Now if we add these numbers to the 280,000, we have 335,000 in the Sabbath schools, or more than the number in the day schools.

But it must be remembered that the whole Catholic population is excluded from these figures. The Catholic Year Book does not give the numbers in their Sabbath schools, but it claims over 500,000 Catholic population in the State out of its 1,783,000 inhabitants.

Boston Diocese . . . . .	310,000
Springfield Diocese . . . . .	150,000
Providence Diocese, about . . . . .	50 000

Of the 1,280,000 total Protestant population, 335,000, or more than one fourth of the whole, are in the Sabbath school. If the same ratio is true of the Catholics we must add 125,000 more to the Sunday schools of the State. But let us call it only 100,000, making in all 435,000.

Thus the 91,000 has vanished, and by the same calculations we have 100,000 surplus; so many more in our Sabbath schools than in our day schools. Of course these figures will not give us an accurate statement of the number of Sabbath-school children in our State, for a great many in our Sunday schools are adults and beyond their school days. But enough is proved to show that that great and terrible mountain surrounded by the dense clouds of ignorance and neglect, amid which we see the flashes of the lightning of danger and hear the rumbling of social earthquakes, is in reality but a large-sized hill with which our educational and spiritual forces may cope with success, and do much to remove.

We would not say one word to lessen the earnestness and zeal of Christian endeavor to reach the masses. The work is far, very far, from being done. There is enough left to arouse the souls of all to the intensest labor. But we would face the need without despair; we would enter our work with confidence in the means and assurance of success. For if it were true, that our Sunday schools and our churches had so failed that after all the labor given, and money spent, and with all the power of the Gospel, more than one fourth of all the children in the State are still unreached, we would lose faith in the instruments with which we are working. But in truth we may work with confident assurance, and reap the reward of faithful endeavor.

The third lesson from these statistics is what to do in carrying on this work to completion. Some one has said that "man was the conundrum of the eighteenth century, but woman is the conundrum of the nineteenth, but we will never give her up." With even greater truth can it be said that the children are the enigma of the nineteenth century. We will never give them up, but we will learn from the past how to educate and train.

III. INFERENCES AND SUGGESTIONS.

From the facts given we would —

1. Take encouragement. The work has been measurably successful. The means and instruments have been tried and proved.

2. They show us something of what is possible. From the work of many schools we get our ideas. We learn of increasing numbers, of success in practical benevolence, of the relation of the Sunday school to the church, and of the reaching those outside of the congregation.

3. We see by what others have done some of the roads to success.

4. We are urged forward by the work yet to be done, by the numbers yet unreached, the possibilities yet unattained.

5. We have some idea of the working force, the numbers of those who should be relied on to do this work and to carry the training of the Sunday school in the religious life to every one yet without the Go-pel.

We need to take more active and earnest measures to reach every child, and as far as possible every grown person in the State.

Something like the plan adopted by the New York Sunday-School Association might be put into operation in our State.

It is said, probably with about the same amount of truth as a like report was made of our State, that there are now in that State 800,000 children not under any religious influences, and a plan has been put into operation to reach these neglected ones, which is as follows:—

A Woman's Mission Sunday-School Aid Association has been formed. A lady for town secretary is to be secured for each town, who is to cause a thorough canvass of that town to be made.

The object is to bring every child, if possible, under Sunday-school instruction, either in a church or mission school, or in a home Sunday-school class.

The town secretary is expected to superintend the work in her own township, and report to the county secretary.

Let as many helpers be secured as are needed to visit every part of the town. The territory should be divided into small districts, and visitors appointed for each. It is expected that the officers of town associations will aid the secretaries in their selection, and co-operate in this work of learning:

1. Whether the residents attend church or not, — and where.

2. What children are in Sunday school, — and where.

3. How many are not in such schools, and if they are willing to go, — and where.

Then at another meeting report and give to each church a list of those who wish to attend their church and school.

Where children are found too far away from any school to be willing to attend, then a mission school should be organized if there are children enough, or some Christian woman living in the neighborhood should be asked to take them into her house and teach them as her "home Sunday-school class."

This class should be considered a part of her church school, to which she will look for lesson leaves, Sunday-school papers, etc.

When there is to be an entertainment or picnic, this class should be invited to attend as a part of the school.

The organization of these home classes is perhaps the special feature of the Woman's Mission Sunday-School Aid Association, and should be made very prominent in the town canvasses.

While statistics are gathered as suggested, let the main work of bringing every child under Sunday-school or Bible instruction be earnestly pressed.

This is not a mere canvass of the town to obtain statistics. Such an effort was made years ago, but failed for various reasons. This new work maintains a continuous oversight. Each of the visitors is given not more than twenty or twenty five families for her field.

Some such plan should be adopted by us. At least we should never rest till all our working force is employed in spreading the Gospel,—till the whole 105,000 in our Sunday schools are using every effort to cause every person in the State to hear the invitations of the Gospel given with all the ardor of love for souls.

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly some years ago divided the churches into three classes, — the Church Termagant, forever scolding; the Church Militant, forever fighting some person or some thing; the Church Constructant, building up men and the truth. Let us, while we are militant indeed against all evil, be chiefly a church constructant, building, edifying, till every soul in our State has become a living stone in the spiritual and eternal temple of God.

STATISTICS OF CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOLS IN MASSACHUSETTS, JAN. 1, 1883.

COLLECTED BY GEORGE BEAL, SECRETARY OF SUNDAY SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Officers and teachers in 530 church schools and 24 mission schools . . . . .	11,953
Scholars . . . . .	93,058
	105,011
Last year 530 church schools and 28 mission schools reported . . . . .	102,070
Gain . . . . .	2,941
Average attendance for 1882 was 65,703 . . . . .	62½ per cent.
Average attendance for 1881 was 60,000 . . . . .	60 per cent.

222 superintendents report 2,018 members of the church under 21 years of age; 39 report none; 293 do not answer the question.

1,256 persons united with the church from 229 schools.

Last year 95 schools reported as having 717 unite with the church.

The expenses of the Sunday schools of the State amounted to $32,672.02. In 37 cases it was paid by the church or by church collection; in 21 cases it was paid by church and Sunday school; in 5 cases it was paid by church and society; in 2 cases it was paid from fund; in most others it was by penny collection or Sunday-school collection or contribution by individuals.

The benevolent contributions from 291 schools amounted to $23,674.02, and was dispensed in so many different ways that it would be hard to enumerate. (Last year 89 schools reported $8,450 73.) A good proportion, however, was given to home and foreign missions; not much to the Sunday schools in the West.

216 superintendents report 6,430 members of their schools whose parents do not regularly attend any church.

THE SABBATH SCHOOL AS RELATED TO THE WORK AND LIFE OF THE CHURCH.

BY REV. WINFIELD S. HAWKES, SOUTH HADLEY FALLS.

WITHIN the memory of some now living catechetical instruction in religious things was common in Massachusetts, both in the home and in the public school. It was a part of the secular day-school teacher's duty to teach the Westminster Assembly's Shorter Catechism, and to give general religious instruction, over all of which the parish minister had supervision. Owing to the nature of our political institutions that custom had to give way; but before it disappeared Sunday schools came into vogue, and so grew that in course of time they could be made a substitute for the former custom. But it is hardly a question whether in the transition from the time of day-school religious instruction to the present Sunday-school system there was not an undue proportion of preaching as compared with teaching; teaching agencies were neglected on one hand and crowded into a corner on the other. The unwisdom of this was soon apparent in the increasing ignorance of formulated Christian doctrine and of the Scriptures. Gradually our churches have been correcting the fault of disproportion of time available for the two most important branches of church work. In a majority of our churches the Sunday school now has full opportunity of time, and may bring the teaching agency to the front; but in too many churches the advantage has not been seized and used as it could and should have been.

Six years ago the Presbyterian church elevated the Sunday-school agency to the dignity of a separate and important department of their church work by engaging a general superintendent, and soon advancing him to the rank of general secretary, to have charge of, and to give direction to this work throughout their denomination. In the past five years he has organized many old methods and proposed many new ones. On the denominational side of his work, he has urged the importance of each Presbyterian Sunday school being under the care and control of its own church session, corresponding to oversight by our local church; also that each school report its statistics yearly through the presbytery to which its church belongs, which would correspond to our local conference; further, that they should honor their own denominational publishing house, using its lesson helps, periodicals, and books, and that every Presbyterian Sunday school should send its gifts through Presbyterian agencies. The results already secured to churches, schools, and scholars prove the wisdom of the efforts. Only a very few Presbyterian schools are now independent of church-session control, and thus the large majority of them are in vital connection with all the rest through the great denomination. One hundred and fifty-eight of their one hundred and sixty-five presbyteries have assumed the duty and responsibility of overseeing the Sunday-school work within their bounds; thus the teaching power of their Sunday schools is being developed and very much better results secured, both as regards quality and quantity. While we, as a denomination, have been falling off in additions, they have more than held their own for the past five years, adding last year some hundreds more to their churches by confession than five years ago, when they began their present methods of Sunday-school work; and some of the leaders of their church are earnest in affirming their conviction that the cause of this favorable showing, so far as it may be traced to human agency, lies in the new vigor which has been imparted to their Sunday schools.

The Methodist Episcopal church began earlier than any of the other great evangelical denominations to give special attention to Sabbath-school work; and in 1865 that department of religious activity was reorganized and put under the care of Rev. Dr. Vincent. From 1846 to 1867 the yearly average number of additions to their churches was, in round numbers, 19,000 a year. But after Dr. Vincent organized the Sunday-school work, improved the methods, and began to secure the formation of missionary Sunday schools, the yearly average of reported conversions in their churches began to increase; and from 1867 to 1876 it was 67,000; and from 1876 to 1880 it was 88,000. So that after fifteen years of vigorous, well-organized Sunday-school work the yearly average of reported conversions rose from 19,000 to 88,000! Such facts speak for themselves, and have a tendency to lead us to reflection; especially when we are sure we have a church polity adaptable to any field; and that yearly our churches have been giving thousands of dollars to organize Sunday schools. Yet through these same years we have had no increase in the number of additions to our churches to report, but otherwise some lamentable facts.

In 1877 the additions to the Congregational churches of the United States amounted to, in round numbers, 24,000. For the next three years the number fell off regularly at the rate of twenty-five per cent, being, in 1878, 20,000; 1879, 16,000; 1880, 12,000; 1881, 11,000.

The dreadful ratio of decrease, stopping with the latter year, being for 1881, it will be observed, a falling off of only one thousand. But God has not cast off forever, as another and very different fact will show. Last year, 1882, the number increased by two thousand, and the present indications are very hopeful for a still greater increase this current year, 1883; all of which seems to show that the new vigor imparted to our denominational Sunday-school work begins to be seen in favorable results. "What shall we then say to these things?" Simply and only this: That if God has been willing to be for us, we as a denomination have been willing to be and have been for others; and while giving much money for Sunday-school work, have put it "into a bag with holes"! and some of them pretty large ones, as the following facts will show:—

For years many Congregational churches have been generously giving to the treasury of the American Sunday School Union, one church in the Connecticut Valley having contributed over ten thousand dollars through it during the past fifteen years.

It is claimed that all denominations have a share in its control; that its work is undenominational; but that as a fact many Congregational churches have grown out of the union schools founded by them. Managers of the Union may be selected from the different evangelical denominations, but in no proper sense do denominations as denominations have a share in its control, or any voice whatever, except through public sentiment. If the schools which it founds are undenominational, they have also illustrated the proverb, "What is everybody's business is nobody's," and many such schools have had a faltering life and then become extinct, and had to be replanted, and in some instances more than once. If many such union schools have grown into Congregational churches, the facts to sustain the claim are not forthcoming. And some of our Minnesota brethren, who doubted the wisdom of Congregationalists giving their money for Sunday-school work through that organization, challenged its managers to show what churches of our polity in that State had grown out of schools founded by them. They named the suggestive perfect number seven; but it was soon seen to be imperfect, and "that in the case of four of the seven there was not the slightest ground for the claim, and only a shadow of ground in the case of the other three." Where is the wisdom of a people who have given so much as we have to that Union continuing to give in that direction when there has to be so much searched to find so little that has returned to us? Moreover, the Michigan brethren say, there is not one Congregational church in that State that has grown out of a Sabbath school founded by the American Sunday School Union, although they have expended much money there, and Congregationalists have been among its principal financial supporters. We make no insinuation that a dollar of those funds has been designedly misapplied; but we do believe that much of the money has been unwisely spent, and that it is a practical waste for Congregationalists to give their money through it.

Here are facts of another kind: Kansas with two hundred and nineteen Congregational churches, or congregations under Home Missionary care, has only fifty-six Congregational Sabbath schools connected therewith; while there are eighty-one schools connected with such congregations reported as union, but only thirty-five really such; and there are ten union Sunday schools held in Congregational meeting-houses.

It seems pertinent to inquire what is the necessity, or wherein the profit, of thirty-five Kansas Congregational churches or congregations nursing union schools, when there is nothing freer or more catholic in fellowship than a Congregational church or Sunday school? Yet, with a polity peculiarly adaptable for such cases, we have in the past helped to organize so-called "union" schools, which have grown into churches of other denominations, or else, as frequently the case, have disappeared, where they might just as well, and we think better, have become Congregational, if they had received proper attention and encouragement. To a considerable extent we have very kindly offered to help keep other vineyards, which, however, in this case, have hardly been kept for anybody, and we have not kept our own. Dr. Vincent, of the Methodist Sunday School Union, says: "We train our scholars to be intensely but intelligently denominational, and at the same time to be catholic in spirit as they are denominational in conviction and practice."

These words and the facts above given, showing the great prosperity of the Methodist church to be closely related to the wise and vigorous administration of its Sunday-school agencies, have additional significance when Dr. Vincent further says: "I do not know three schools in the Methodist Episcopal church which do not use the Berean lessons." They have twenty-one thousand one hundred and fifty-two schools.

Is it not a dictate of denominational wisdom that we, too, should "train our scholars to be intensely but intelligently denominational"? All the world now knows that Congregationalists are "catholic in spirit." But if our polity is worth propagating and it is worth while to multiply Congregational churches, we have yet to intensify the right idea of sect in the administration of our schools and churches; and the beginning and essential principles are that our schools and churches shall send their gifts, through Congregational agencies, to our own Sunday-school society and not to any other; that we may support our own Sunday-school missionaries, to organize Congregational Sunday schools; that we patronize our own publishing society, use our own lessons and helps, especially when we have such good ones, and that we watch over our own mission schools and nurse them into healthful Congregational churches.

In common with others in recent years, we have awakened to the fact of great unused, latent forces within our churches in the Sunday-school agency. We have found we possessed a means to an end which was almost wholly undeveloped. We have appointed, and seen go to work, a Sunday-school secretary of whom we are not ashamed; we have got our "best man" for the Western secretaryship; we have appointed some missionaries who are well in the work; and in these and more local ways are trying to develop this great force to do our share of the work for Christ's glory in our great and fast-growing country. But we have only fairly begun; while we are awakening to the value of the Sunday school as a pioneer agency, we have not developed it as we ought in our older communities. In the days of religious instruction in the secular school, such training was given by paid teachers; and imperfect and unsatisfactory service was soon observed and condemned. But most of our Sunday-school work has been done by largely irresponsible volunteer laborers. The work has cost next to nothing, and sometimes has been just better than nothing. The great inconvenience of holding the school session in the auditorium of the church has largely ceased through the supply of other better-adapted rooms. But that is almost the limit of expense to which the congregation, society, or parish has thus far been put for this great church agency; and the rooms which the Sunday school occupy are not exclusively for its use, but are shared with the prayer meeting, the sociable, and the fair. In many of our schools, contrary to every dictate of Christian wisdom, the weekly collections which ought to be so devoted as to develop the giving principle, are instead used to pay current expenses. The parish appropriates funds for preaching; and why should it not do so for the teaching of the children on whose right religious opinions its prosperity depends? Hundreds of dollars are raised for quartet singing, and frequently not a cent for the Sunday school; money enough for hirelings and musical reeds for the old sheep of the flock, while the lambs have to pay for their own crooks and shepherds' slings, gather their own stones, and depend on volunteer shepherds to use them. It was gratifying to see the recent announcement that one of the large churches of Norfolk County had "voted to pay all expenses of its Sabbath school, thus allowing the school contributions to be devoted to benevolence." In the whole country there is a considerable number of cases where the people, in their secular capacity of parish, society, official board, or vestry, in making their yearly appropriations for the support of the gospel, include the running expenses of the Sunday school, thus properly recognizing and supporting that agency which is next to the ministry in power.

In our churches we have multitudes who suffer from ignorance of the Bible and its teachings on one side, and for religious activity on the other. But if a sense of gratitude, or any other worthy motive, moves a saved man to a desire to do something for his fellow-men, he cannot more easily find a place in which to serve his Lord than in the Sunday school, or one where he may be sure of doing more good. For if a disciple wants to do work which will be the surest to tell on the largest number, let him make himself an efficient Sunday-school teacher. Here the very fountains of life are reached and the streams can be easily turned. If the church has life, here is the field in which to exercise it, and to get new supplies to sustain it, that more service may be given Him who is the source of all life, including the eternal toward which we look with longing hope. In this age, when there is so much reading matter, and days are only twenty-four hours long, and one must work and sleep a good part of those hours, there is great temptation to neglect the Bible. It was not so years ago, and then the Scriptures were more read than now. But in these days of the absence of catechetical instruction, if one is neither a Sunday-school teacher nor scholar, the chances are more than even that he does not study his Bible in any proper sense. Having a place in the Sunday school is a safeguard against such a danger; for there a portion of God's word is considered every week, and its whole course gone over once in seven years; and if one has any spiritual energy or mental vigor he will study the lesson to some extent.

Many ministers have realized that the Sunday school was the most hopeful field in which to labor to secure new life for the church; but with many it is yet a great unused opportunity; for it is probable that not over one third of the Congregational ministers of this State have a real and active connection with their schools.

Wherever the arrangement of Sunday services prevents the minister from having an active share in this work, it is a cause for regret. But to be present at the school session and teach a class are only a small part of a minister's opportunity. If he has not an exceptional superintendent he ought to conduct some kind of a general exercise with the whole school on the lesson at the close of the study hour; this corrects possible erroneous teaching, supplies the lack which is always sure to exist in some class, and gives point and weight to the lesson as a whole. If a minister must choose between teaching a class and a summing up of the lesson for the whole school, being able to do but one, the summing up is much to be preferred; but it is said only a few ministers can successfully do this. If that is true, does it not indicate something defective in the training of our ministers? It is only making an application which they are supposed to do in preaching. One of our most noted theological seminary Greek professors got his great power to arouse and sustain enthusiasm in his pupils by studying and for years practising the art of talking to and teaching children. It is his recently expressed opinion that ministers would be much more efficient in all other kinds of church work if they would give more study to the philosophy and practical problem of interesting children, as one must talk more solid sense, in brightest form, to children than to any other class, if their attention is held and truth imparted. Further, it is his belief that if a minister can master the problem of holding and teaching his children, he will be master of the whole situation; for if he can do that he can do another thing which is even more important than teaching a class or summing up the lesson for the school, and that is to develop the latent teaching power of the church. And this our theological seminary professor has done; getting down off his high seminary chair, and for six months teaching all the evangelical Sunday-school teachers of one of our cities, awaking such enthusiasm that one not very devout disciple would even forego the profit of the opera rather than lose the pleasure of the professor's lesson exposition. We have lost much in the past in our Sunday-school work because of poor teaching; within recent years there has been great improvement through abundant lesson helps, Sunday-school institutes, and summer assemblies. But when we consider the interests at stake and the undeveloped possibilities of the Sunday school, much of our common class teaching appears lamentably inefficient. Preaching and teaching ought to be but two parts of one complete whole; and every minister ought to be prepared to teach his Sunday-school workers by his stores of knowledge and his capacity to use them. Before we shall do what we ought in our Sunday-school Bible study we shall multiply teachers' meetings and normal classes, and energize them with more vitality. It ought not to be simply an hour used to elucidate the next Sunday's lesson; but possessing a thorough knowledge of it, with its context, accompanying historical facts, and doctrine. The minister should not only show the hidden truth and make prominent the teaching of the particular lesson, but improve the opportunity to take his teachers into the great fields beyond; he should aim to gradually make his teachers Bible scholars, able, on call at any time, to bring forth things new and old. Such intimate contact will also supply opportunity to quicken their love for souls, and to address to them motives for increased zeal.

It has been feared by some that the Sabbath school was usurping the place of home parental training in religion. If it has in any measure been true, it has been the fault of the parent and not of the Sunday school. The parent has left to another agency what he ought to have done himself; undoubtedly there has been a decrease of the feeling of responsibility for home religious instruction. It is a matter which ought to be made more prominent and a part of each Sunday-school worker's labor to constantly affirm and show that Sunday-school teaching cannot accomplish the best nor large results where parental sympathy and instruction are not given. One very possible occasion the vast importance of parental aid should be emphasized. All the parents should be shown that if they spend money for Bible helps, give time to Bible study, take an interest in their children's lessons, and themselves lead them into the fields and mines of Bible truth, they are preparing a foundation for the Sabbath-school teacher to build upon.

Not one intelligent Sunday-school advocate ever desired to substitute Sunday-school teaching for home instruction. But we must try to correct what has too largely become a fact. We must recognize the fact, grapple with the evil, and as we remedy it, we shall find our Sunday school more valuable.

Many Christians are not engaged in Sunday-school work simply from a lack of knowledge of its importance to themselves and others. If the prayer meeting is the pulse of a church, the Sunday school may be likened to the lungs, where the blood is purified; and if any Christian wants to renew his spiritual life, desires the joy of not growing old, and of growing in grace and knowledge, let him devote himself with full purpose of heart to thorough Sunday-school activity. When one of our pastors says that "ninety-nine per cent of that in his church which is good for anything, and is intelligent about the Lord's kingdom, is somehow connected with the Sunday school," does he not make an utterance of pretty general application? What can compare, in importance or joy, with moulding the souls of a class of youth for this life and for eternity? Only a parent's opportunity is superior to it, while the Sunday-school teacher may not only mould one, but frequently successive classes.

Again, if the pastor is a factor in his Sunday school, and it is attended generally by the adult church members, they together may avoid the danger of the youth substituting the Sunday school for the preaching service; if the adults equally honored the teaching and the preaching, the children and youth would do so also; and as the church and school are most intimately related, the evil of the non-attendance of children at the preaching service may be best avoided or controlled. The duty of the hour is to draw closer the lines of relation between these two great agencies for spiritual life, and to bring the church face to face with the opportunities, needs, and methods of Sunday-school work. Probably many church members do not join and work in the school because, notwithstanding all that has been said upon the subject, they do not appreciate its importance and claims; and one of the live questions is how to awaken and acquaint them. They are not of the number who attend Sunday-school institutes; they hear the minister preach upon the subject, but somehow are not impressed; they go to Sunday-school concerts and are entertained, but go away without realizing that they have any personal responsibility in the matter. Among other methods suggested for reaching the heart and conscience of these people is that of making one of the regular church prayer meetings take the form of a Sunday-school institute; all the questions to be discussed by home talent. As a sample of what several churches are attempting, we give the statement of one pastor. He says: "The prayer meeting following the Sunday-school concert we call a 'Sabbath-school prayer meeting'; a brother takes charge, the superintendent selecting him, but each man his own subject. I sit beside him and have five minutes at the close. 'The claims of the Sunday school upon adults,' 'The teacher and the parent,' 'The teacher and the homes of his scholars,' 'The model teacher,' are some of the topics which occur to me. Our best Christians are in the Sabbath school, and the real power in the prayer meeting. The aim is to get the Sunday school into its true relation to the church, which the latter generally ignores. . . . I try to have the church realize its duty to its most valuable form of work. Much good and no detriment have come from the simple arrangement."

Another fact related to the life and work of the church is the latent power for good which exists in our Sunday-school children. Undoubtedly this might be found and used much earlier than it often is. There are forms of Christian work in which they might be engaged earlier than many are, and without detriment, and with positive good, before they avow themselves disciples; there are kinds of religious work in which many of them might be interested, and by which they might be drawn closer to the church and the Lord Jesus, and which would tend to shape them into larger and more active Christians when converted. The limits of this report do not warrant any detailed reference to these; but all kinds of organizations like the Societies of Christian Endeavor are of that character. Some such societies include all subdivisions of church work in which the young may be properly engaged. But in other instances there are many auxiliary bodies connected with a church and owing general allegiance to it, but without other supervision. One church in Hampshire East Conference has a Young People's Association, which provides lecture courses, enjoyable entertainment for parish gatherings, and constitutes the agency to conduct any legitimate pleasure within and for the congregation; a mission band to collect money and awaken interest in all kinds of missionary work; and has sustained a young people's prayer meeting for three quarters of an hour preceding the Sunday-evening service for many years, which has had a large attendance and done great good. These, with an outline of their work, are all included in the yearly printed report of the church.

A church in Norfolk County employs another method, having printed pledges, which outline its purpose, and are as follows:—

YOUNG COVENANTERS.

First Congregational Church, Dedham, Mass.

“Speak, Lord, for thy servant heareth.”

I hereby enter into Covenant with the LORD JESUS CHRIST.

I promise,

To love Him with all my heart, to trust Him as my Saviour, to serve Him as my master.

To go regularly to Church, Sabbath School, and meetings of this Band.

To be loving, helpful, cheerful, and obedient.

To keep from all evil, especially bad temper, bad language, intoxicating liquor, and tobacco.

To read the Bible every day, and ask the Lord to help me keep this Covenant.

“The faithful God keepeth covenant with them that love Him.”

.....Pastor.

Dedham,.....188

Several pastors in our State have sought to solve some of these problems by forming classes of boys having more or less organization, their aims including a weekly meeting and good things, all the way from prayer and catechetical instruction in religious truth to base-ball, which one pastor played with his boys; and although it is only five years since the class, including first and last about forty, was formed, he saw the last five of them received into the church at the May communion. While out of another similar pastor's class of sixty, fifty-nine have become Christians. And another pastor has welcomed into the fold about one hundred of those whom he held, taught, and influenced in this way.

But while we are trying to get our churches interested and engaged in all these forms of activity in or connected with our Sunday schools, there is another urgent matter which must receive attention; and that is a thorough organization of all these schools into one whole throughout our denomination, or all our churches, if any one prefers that term.

Our Sunday schools and their work should have a place at the meetings of the local conferences, the State associations, and the National Council.

That blessed day dawns! Some of our conferences have for years devoted one day a year to the Sunday school and its interests; and most of them have now adopted the plan, as also the recommendation of this body last year, that superintendents be made ex officio members of local conferences, as ministers heretofore.

It is hardly a question whether we had not better adopt the plan of our Presbyterian brethren, who have in each presbytery a standing committee to look after Sunday-school interests, gather a few valuable yearly statistics for mutual information, edification, and incitement; and to arrange the exercises for conference Sunday-school day, or to hold local or group Sunday-school institutes, after the plan of fellowship meetings in some parts of the State, where live questions regarding the work and facts, methods and results, may be discussed and recommendations made. Such a committee could also report to the General Association, which should also have such a committee for the whole State, and a Sunday-school day at the annual meeting, and they in turn could report to the National Council, which also should have a Sunday-school committee and day. In some such way we may bring each of our schools into vital connection with every other in the land; and the smallest frontier school having its superintendent's name given and statistics yearly reported, and receiving those of all other schools, will feel the benefit of such circulation of life.

With such an organization we shall soon have increased interest in the Sunday-school work; an influence for good will go down from the National Council through each subordinate body to the smallest and farthest outlying local Sunday school. The best methods will be sooner reported to all; the greatest blessings received be sooner known to cheer and encourage. Beside which we shall then be ready to systematically commence and prosecute our proper Sunday-school missionary work. While our Baptist brethren have in the whole land 124 Sunday-school missionaries, and received for such work for the year ending May 1, 1882, $103,784.16; and our Presbyterian brethren had 54 missionaries, and received $55,483.93; we had one such missionary, and received for the work $6,257.46. There is a grain of comfort in the fact that now we have six missionaries employed in this work, and that for the year ending May 1, 1883, the money received exceeded last year's receipts by over five thousand dollars.

As showing the crying need of more efficient organization and work in not the newest parts of our country, we have this fact, that in Kansas there is one association of thirty-eight Congregational churches which has only seven Sunday schools! As well might one hope to rear a family by educating the children in the street, as to hope for any acceptable growth of those churches without Sunday schools!

It remains for us to send our Sunday-school missionaries into every destitute corner of the country, especially the Southwest, where Congregationalism has a great future if we will go in and possess the land. Here is the proper pioneer agency; a school can be founded anywhere if there are young or old who will come together to study the Word. When such a school is organized, if we have our whole nation's work system-atized, its superintendent's name may be reported and published in the Year Book, when he will feel that he has a connection with and interest in our great denomination, and that we have the same with and for him; he can thus be reached through correspondence and his school through him. Watched over and nurtured, such schools will often grow into churches within five, or three, or even less years. They are easily planted, cost but little to sustain in the early stages, and if there are any elements for growth in the community, they are a nucleus for churches. With such an organization we shall be stronger for such work, for our Congregational Sunday schools and churches will give their money then through our own Congregational Sunday-school society, to be used by Congregational agents, to organize schools which shall afterwards receive watch and care, and we may hope will grow into Congregational churches; not for our denominational glory, but because we believe we can thus most efficiently do the work which naturally falls to us in advancing the kingdom and glory of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen.

RULES OF THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION.

I. NAME. — This body shall be called THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF MASSACHUSETTS.

II. OBJECT. — Its object is to secure Christian union, fellowship, and intercourse among the ministers and churches; promote spirituality, and to co-operate with one another and with other ecclesiastical bodies in advancing the Redeemer's kingdom.

III. DOCTRINAL BASIS. — This Association agrees to the Declaration of Faith adopted by the National Council of Congregational Churches in the year 1865, the doctrines therein set forth being understood by us to be distinctly those which from the beginning have been embraced by the churches of New England as the doctrines of the gospel.

IV. DENOMINATIONAL BASIS. — Being based exclusively upon Congregational principles, this Association shall under no circumstances exercise ecclesiastical authority over churches or individuals, or interfere with the government or discipline of the churches, or consent to hear appeals, or give advice in ecclesiastical causes of any kind.

V. MEMBERS. — Each District Association of ministers, consenting to the principles above stated, may appoint, annually, two delegates, each to serve two years; and each District Conference of Churches, also so consenting, may appoint, annually, three delegates, who shall be laymen, each to serve two years; which delegates, with the Secretary, Registrar, Treasurer, and the pastor of the church with which the annual session is held, shall compose the General Association. Delegates from corresponding bodies, ministers appointed to preach sermons, and chairmen of committees attending to present reports, shall be honorary members, together with such other persons as the Association may vote to admit.

VI. OFFICERS. — 1. A Secretary, a Registrar, and a Treasurer shall be chosen by ballot, each to serve three years from the close of the session at which the choice was made; to these offices any member of any Congregational church connected with this body shall be eligible.

2. A Moderator and an Assistant Registrar shall be chosen by ballot from the members at each session to serve during that session.

3. The Secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Association, collect the statistics of ministers and churches, and have charge of the printing thereof; distribute the publications of the Association, and preserve, for the permanent use of the Association, copies of all its publications.

4. The Registrar shall make the records of each meeting, and preserve them as the permanent property of the Association; to whom the Assistant Registrar shall render his aid. He shall seasonably notify the time and place of each annual session.

5. The Treasurer shall receive all money raised for the use of the Association, disburse the same as directed, and present an annual report, to be audited as the Association may direct.

6. The Secretary, Registrar, and Treasurer shall be ex-officio members of the Association, and be the Committee of Publication unless another be chosen. Their travelling expenses in attending the several sessions shall be paid by the Association.

VII. QUORUM.—Twenty-five delegates shall constitute a quorum.

VIII. ANNUAL MEETING.—The annual meeting shall be held on the third Tuesday of June, at four o'clock P. M. (or at some other more convenient hour), at such place as shall have been duly designated.

IX. HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The Massachusetts Home Missionary Society may annually elect two delegates, to be members of this body, while it consents that this body may nominate two persons for membership in the Executive Committee of that society.

The two persons thus nominated shall be from the membership of the Association at the time, and shall not be eligible for nomination for more than two years in succession, and shall make report concerning the work of the society at the next meeting of the Association.

X. CORRESPONDENCE.—Official fraternal intercourse with the several State Congregational organizations, and with other denominations, is sufficiently had by the representation of this body in the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States.

XI. ORGANIZATION.—The pastor of the church of the place of meeting, or the Secretary, may call the Association to order and preside in the meeting until it be properly organized. The certificates of the delegates present shall be presented, only the names of members being read by the Registrar. The Association shall then be organized by the choice of a Moderator and an Assistant Registrar, and the Moderator shall open the session with prayer. A Committee on Credentials shall then be appointed, to whom all certificates shall be referred.

XII. COMMITTEES.—1. The committees for the session are these:

(1.) A Committee on Credentials, who shall be appointed by the Moderator immediately after the opening of the session.

(2.) A Committee on Nominations, to nominate the following and any other committees referred to them:—

(3.) A Committee of Arrangements, consisting of three, of which the pastor or some member of the church shall be one, to prepare the business of the session; and no business shall be introduced during the session but through the hands and with the approbation of the committee; but if said committee decline presenting any item of business proposed by any member, he shall have the privilege of appeal to the Association.

2. To act after the adjournment:—

(1.) A Provisional Committee of five, of whom the Secretary or Registrar shall be one, to arrange the schedule for the next annual meeting; to select a preacher for the associational sermon, and persons to prepare such written papers as they shall deem desirable.

(2.) A State Committee on the Work of the Churches, who shall make an annual report to this body upon the work of the churches and state of religion, unless otherwise ordered at any session.

The State Committee on the Work of the Churches shall consist of the Secretary, the Registrar, the chairmen of the Committees of Local Conferences, and twenty-one members at large,—the members at large not to be eligible for more than three years.

(3.) A Committee to audit the Accounts, who shall report the state of the treasury and the sum in their opinion necessary to be paid the next year by the churches of the several conferences connected with this body.

XIII. EXERCISES.—The time of the annual session shall be occupied by devotional services, the consideration of the state of religion, the wants and methods of home evangelization, addresses, and discussions of practical religious interest, and attention to the objects of benevolent enterprise sustained by the churches.

XIV. SPECIAL ORDERS.—1. At the opening of the session, on the mornings of Wednesday and Thursday, the Moderator shall take the chair at the hour to which the Association stands adjourned; shall immediately call the members to order; shall direct the roll to be called; shall open the meeting with prayer, and cause the minutes of the preceding day to be read; and the session of each day shall be closed with prayer.

2. The associational sermon and Lord's Supper shall be assigned to Tuesday evening. Wednesday evening shall be devoted to exercises having special reference to the people of the place of meeting, or a sermon may be preached, the preacher to be selected by the Provisional Committee. One session of the Association shall be devoted to the cause of Home Missions.

3. Each annual meeting shall be closed with a psalm or hymn and prayer.

XV. PLACE OF MEETING.—Previously to the close of each meeting, the General Association shall specify a place for meeting the next year; and the church of the place of meeting selected is requested to make preparations to celebrate the Lord's Supper in the course of the service. The Lord's Supper shall be administered generally, without remarks.

XVI. RULES OF ORDER.—1. Every motion, on being seconded, shall, if requested by the Moderator or any two members, be reduced to writing; and no motion shall be opened to discussion until it be seconded.

2. The Moderator may speak to points of order in preference to other members, rising from his seat for that purpose, and shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the house by any two members; but he may not speak to the merits of the question without leaving the chair and placing some other member in it to preside while he speaks.

3. No member shall speak more than twice on the same question without leave of the Association.

4. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received except for adjournment, laying on the table, amendment, postponement, commitment, or the previous question. The previous question is this: Shall the main question be now put? and the effect of adopting it shall be to put an end to debate, and to bring the Association to a direct vote upon the amendments, if any are pending, and then upon the main question proper.

5. If a question under debate contain several parts, any member may have it divided and a question taken on each part.

6. Every member, when speaking, shall address himself to the Chair, and shall be subject to no needless interruption. If he act disorderly, it shall be the duty of the Moderator and the privilege of other members to call him to order.

XVII. AMENDMENTS. — 1. Any of the above rules, except the first five, may be amended at any annual session by a two-thirds vote, the proposed amendment having been submitted in writing on the day previous to that of the action.

2. Amendments to either of the first five articles shall not be made except upon their proposals at the annual meeting next prior to that of action, and after notice has been sent to the several associations and conferences, and by a two-thirds vote.

STATISTICS OF THE CHURCHES.

EXPLANATIONS.

THE tables which follow comprise:—

1. The list of Conferences, with the times of meeting and names of officers.
2. The statistics of pastoral supply, membership, additions, removals, baptisms, Sabbath schools, and families; and those of charities and expenses, as reported to the State Committee on the Work of the Churches, Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Secretary.
3. The statistics of ministers, list of ordinations, installations, dismissals, and deaths.

The tables of the second part contain the names of all the Congregational churches in Massachusetts, the towns and cities being arranged alphabetically; churches in each town according to age; and of each church, (1) its town; (2) its name (if it have a peculiar one), which is always followed by "ch."; (3) its locality in the town, when that locality has a name distinct from the town. When the name of the church follows the name of a locality subordinate to the town, it shows that the church has a distinct number in that subdivision of the town, or it is evidently needed for clearness.

The column specifying ministers is corrected up to the time of printing. Church members and families are reported as numbered on the morning of Jan. 1, 1883. Admissions, removals, and baptisms cover the year 1882. "Absent" are not additional to "males," "females," and "total," but included in them. "Sabbath school" includes total membership of teachers and scholars Jan. 1, 1883, or when the school is in operation (if not at that date), covering "branch schools" and "mission schools," so far as maintained by the reporting church.

The months and days in the dates of the organization of churches are omitted. They will be found in the publication of 1873, those of churches since organized being given in the list of new churches each year.

"Ordained" denotes the date on which the person was originally set apart to the ministry "by the laying-on of hands." "Installed" denotes the date of his present pastorate. The letter "p." denotes installed pastors; all others are serving without installation.

In no instance is the report of any church in these statistics copied from the returns of previous years. But there is included in the totals of members a careful estimate of the numbers in any unreporting church (except in cases where no report has been had for two years), and also any missing items of "absent,"—which are assumed to be, in each case, equivalent to the average.

Blanks in any column of figures are never equivalent to "none," but mean "no report"; but blanks in the column of ministers do mean that the church has no pastor or acting pastor, and the blank is left for the convenience of those who note changes.

 All post-office addresses are to be found in the "List of Ministers," and not in the tables.

NOTE.—The "year" means what changes were comprised in the twelve months preceding January 1 of the year mentioned, except that the columns under "Ministers" comprise the twelve months ending with the time of closing the "copy" for printing the Minutes, usually reckoned at June 30. The table was begun in 1866, all preceding years now given being compiled from past Minutes,—the number of churches in some years varying from the Minutes as they were to what they should have been.

The changes in list of churches, ordinations, installations, etc., for the past year, condensed in the above table, are given in detail in their proper place.

* Prior to 1876, "acting pastors" are included in "others" in columns of deaths of ministers.

† This decrease due in part to the larger number of churches falling to report this year.

In the above table, the columns of "Additions," "Removals," "Baptisms," "Sabbath School Average," and "Benevolent Contributions" cover the twelve months next preceding January 1 of the year mentioned in a given line. The pastoral supply (only) was regularly corrected to date some months later than January 1 (usually July), but this does not change the general accuracy in any case. The number of churches, members, and of Sabbath schools was enumerated January 1 of the year mentioned. The number of churches "vacant" includes all churches supplied by licentiates, or ministers of other denominations. Totals are given in some cases by the churches, instead of detailed reports, which accounts for the totals given above. In the Sunday School column the number reported by 478 schools is given without making an estimate for the non-reporting churches.

Absentees prior to 1855 doubtless stated too low by defective returns.

NAMES OF MINISTERS

THE PRECEDING TABLES, IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER, WITH THE POST-OFFICE ADDRESS OF EACH, AND WITH THE NUMBERS OF THE PAGES IN WHICH EACH NAME OCCURS IN THE STATISTICS.

This list gives the names of pastors or acting pastors and members of Associations who have been ordained.

Persons who are in pastoral service, but who are not members of any Association in this State, are designated by a star (*). A few others, who are not supplying churches, and are not members of Associations, are named by their own wish.

In this list the first column of figures gives the page which denotes membership in an Association of Ministers.

The second column of figures in this list gives the page in which a person will be found to be in pastoral service. A blank in either case signifies,—in the former, that one is not a member of any Association in this State; in the latter, that he is not reported to be in pastoral service in this State.

Where two pages are mentioned in the first column of figures, it shows that the person is a member of two Associations.

The post-office addresses often differ from the foregoing pages.

An alphabetical list of licentiates follows this list.

Rev. A. G. Bale was re-elected registrar. A motion to choose a treasurer was laid on the table.

Voted, That Congregational ministers present at this meeting be invited to sit with the Association as honorary members.

The committee appointed last year on "The reports and statistics of the churches" made a report, which was referred to the committee of arrangements and ordered printed.

Adjourned.

EVENING SESSION.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Robert F. Gordon. Rev. Daniel Merriman preached from the text, Col. ii. 9, 10, after which the Lord's Supper was celebrated, Rev. Edward N. Packard and Rev. Joshua Coit officiating.

SECOND DAY.

BUSINESS. — Association met at 8.30 A. M., and was led in prayer by Bro. Albert P. Sampson. The roll was read and the records of yesterday approved. The secretary proposed an amendment to Rule XII., Sect. 2, clause 2, by striking out all after the words "at large," and adding, "to be so classified that seven shall be elected each year for a term of three years."

AUDITING COMMITTEE. — The auditing committee for the ensuing year was chosen as follows: Arthur W. Tufts, James White, and George W. Coburn.

From nine till ten o'clock devotional services were conducted by Rev. Arthur Shirley.

WORK OF THE CHURCHES. — Rev. Charles F. Thwing presented the report of the work of the churches in cities and large towns, and submitted the following resolutions: —

Resolved, That, in view of the facts presented, this Association advises each church to take a religious census, and to make a systematic visitation of its community, with special reference to the neglecting and the foreign-born populations.

Resolved, That the state committee be instructed, in co-operation, if possible, with the Home Missionary Society, to secure the early presentation of this subject to all the local conferences.

The subject was further discussed by Rev. Albert Bryant, Rev. William Barrows, Rev. Henry A. Stimson, Rev. John W. Haley, Rev. Thomas O. Rice, Rev. Rowland B. Howard, and Bro. B. W. Williams. The report was accepted, and the resolution unanimously adopted.

Report on work of the churches in villages and rural districts was presented by Rev. Albert C. Sewall, and discussed by Rev. Alpheus C. Hodges and Rev. Calvin Terry. Rev. Daniel P. Noyes of the committee submitted the following resolution:—

Resolved, That the Association deem it to be of the highest importance that the several conferences secure yearly reports from all the outposts within the limits of the conference.

The report was accepted, and the resolution adopted.

TREASURER'S REPORT.—The report of the treasurer was read and accepted, and also the report of the auditing committee. It was voted to amend the recommendation of the auditing committee, "That each church be requested to contribute for the expenses of the Association and the National Council during the coming year an amount equal to four (4) cents per member," by inserting the word "resident" before "member," and the recommendation was then adopted.

Peter D. Smith, of Andover, and Rev. Perez D. Cowan, of Wellesley, were nominated as members of the executive committee of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society.

The report of the nominating committee, that in 1885 the Association meet in New Bedford, was adopted, and the provisional committee appointed as follows: Rev. Albert H. Heath, Rev. Matthew C. Julien, the Secretary, Bro. George P. Hathaway, and Bro. Frederick A. Washburn.

Voted, That the provisional committee for 1885 be requested to assign the Wednesday-forenoon session to such subjects as the committee on work of the churches may propose.

Adjourned.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

BUSINESS. — Association met according to adjournment at 2 P. M.

Voted, That the choice of a treasurer be taken from the table and referred to committee on nominations.

Voted, To reconsider the motion for amending the rules submitted by Rev. Charles B. Smith, and that the amending of Art. I. of the rules be referred to a committee of five.

ELECTION OF TREASURER. — Nathan Mosman, of Auburndale, was elected treasurer.

The report of the work in the churches was presented by Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, and was accepted.

At 3 P. M. the Association gave way to the annual meeting of the Home Missionary Society, and adjourned to 8 P. M.

During the recess, at the invitation of Col. John Bracewell, the Association drove to Williamstown, held a brief devotional service at Mission Park, was received by Mark Hopkins, D. D., and entertained by President Franklin Carter, of Williams College, when the following resolutions were enthusiastically adopted: —

Resolved, by delegates of General Association of Congregational Churches of Massachusetts at North Adams, That our warmest thanks be tendered to President Carter of Williams College for the Christian welcome extended and the abundant hospitality furnished upon our visit to Williamstown.

Resolved, That our hearty thanks be extended to Col. John Bracewell for the pleasant drive to Williamstown and return afforded by his thoughtful attention, kindness, and generosity.

WEDNESDAY EVENING.

Rev. John W. Harding conducted the devotional exercises, Rev. Edwin B. Webb, D. D., made an address on temperance, and Rev. Lyman H. Blake offered the closing prayer.

THIRD DAY.

Association met at 8.30 A. M.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Richard Knight.

BUSINESS. — The minutes of yesterday were revised and approved. In accordance with notice previously given, the amendment of Rule XII. was brought forward and passed. The committee on nominations reported the following names, which were confirmed: For State committee on the work of the churches, members at large, Bro. George Beal, Rev. Henry A. Stimson, Rev. Edward N. Packard, Rev. Frank G. Clark, Rev. M. Angelo Dougherty, Rev. John W. Harding, and Rev. Benjamin A. Robie, making the full committee for 1884-5 as follows:—

Chairmen of committees of local conferences.—Andover, Albert W. Burnham; Barnstable, Rev. John W. Dodge; Berkshire North, Rev. Albert C. Sewall; Berkshire South, Rev. Charles W. Mallory; Brookfield, Rev. Willard D. Brown; Essex North, Rev. John D. Kingsbury; Essex South, ———; Franklin, Rev. Alpheus C. Hodges; Hampden, Rev. Ezra H. Byington; Hampshire, Sidney E. Bridgman; Hampshire East, Rev. George E. Fisher; Mendon, Rev. Rufus K. Harlow; Middlesex South, Rev. William R. Eastman; Middlesex Union, Rev. Albert F. Norcross; Norfolk, Rev. Robert W. Haskins; Old Colony, Rev. Augustus H. Fuller; Pilgrim, Rev. Ebenezer Alden; Suffolk North, Rev. Silas C. Cook; Suffolk South, Rev. Edward N. Packard; Suffolk West, S. Brainard Pratt; Taunton, Rev. Ephraim W. Allen; Woburn, Rev. William J. Batt; Worcester Central, Rev. Francis J. Fairbanks; Worcester North, Rev. David Foster; Worcester South, Rev. John R. Thurston.

Members at large.—Revs. Daniel P. Noyes, William Barrows, Joshua Coit, George M. Boynton, S. Leroy Blake:—Bros. Charles Denny and R. Frank Young; Revs. DeWitt S. Clark, John L. Ewell, John C. Labaree, George E. Fisher, Bros. Henry M. Moore, George W. W. Dove, and Edward L. Tead:—Revs. Henry A. Stimson, Edward N. Packard, Frank G. Clark, M. Angelo Dougherty, John W. Harding, Benjamin A. Robie, and Bro. George Beal.

Members ex officio.—The secretary and registrar of the association.

Committee on change of Constitution and name, Rev. George M. Boynton, Rev. Calvin Cutler, Rev. Charles M. Lamson, Dea. Charles A. Richardson, Bro. George F. Hyde.

Rev. Frank G. Clark, submitted the following resolutions, which were passed:—

Resolved, That the renewed endeavors of the American Peace Society to promote arbitration between Christian nations as a permanent preventive and substitute for war have our cordial approbation and hearty sympathy.

Resolved, That we welcome the newly elected secretary of said society, Rev. Rowland B. Howard, of Rockport, to this Christian work, and commend him to our churches and to all persons as entirely worthy of confidence and co-operation in his endeavors to promote "peace on earth."

The committee on nominations were authorized to present a committee on intemperance, and they reported the following names, which were confirmed: Rev. Albert H. Plumb, Rev. Wilbur Johnson, Rev. John W. Dodge, Rev. Charles W. Mallory, and Rev. John D. Kingsbury.

From 9 to 9½ A. M. devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. Gabriel H. De Bevoise, after which the report of the committee on intemperance was presented by Rev. Wilbur F. Johnson. It was accepted, and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS AND STATISTICS.

Voted, To refer the report of the committee on statistics already presented to a committee of five, with instructions to report next year upon the general subject.

The said committee was chosen as follows: Rev. Frank G. Clark, Rev. Henry A. Hazen, Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Rev. William J. Batt, and Rev. Edmund Dowse. Voted to add the secretary to this committee. Rev. Winfield S. Hawkes, of the Sunday-school committee, presented communications from the National Council and from the Massachusetts Sunday-School Union.

The Association approved the first recommendation of the National committee, viz.: That a standing committee on Sunday-school work be appointed. From constitutional difficulties, and in order to provide for the proper adjustment of the work of this committee with that of the Sunday-school section of the State committee on the work of the churches, action was deferred till the next meeting, and a committee, consisting of Rev. Winfield S. Hawkes, Rev. Robert R. Meredith, Rev. Smith Baker, Bro. Charles Hutchins, and Bro. George Beal, was chosen for the coming year. The second recommendation, concerning statistics, was referred to the committee on statistics, already appointed. The third recommendation, concerning the observance of the second Sunday of June as "children's day," was also approved.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK. — Addresses on various phases of the Sunday-school work were made by Rev. Albert E. Dunning, Rev. Gabriel H. De Bevoise, and Rev. Robert R. Meredith. A paper on Sunday-school statistics was read by Rev. Sedgwick P. Wilder, and ordered printed in the minutes. A paper read by Rev. Fritz W. Baldwin was referred to the publishing committee. Adjourned.

The following resolution was passed: —

Whereas, The Rev. Gabriel H. De Bevoise has been employed as State Superintendent since December, 1883, and an important work has been accomplished already,

Resolved, That the Association request the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society to consider the advisability of taking this work hereafter under its own direction, and of assuming the expense of the same.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Association met at 2 P. M.

On motion of Rev. Henry A. Hazen, the following resolutions were adopted :—

Resolved, That we tender our special and hearty thanks to the church in North Adams for the abundant and delightful hospitality with which it has received and cared for the Association; to its pastor for the thoughtful diligence he has given to the arrangements and labors for our assembly; to those members of the Baptist church who have kindly opened their doors and hearts to us; to the organist and choir for very satisfactory aid in our service of song; to the Fitchburg, the New Haven and Northampton and the Housatonic Railroads for free return passes given to all who have come over their roads to our meeting.

Rev. Rowland B. Howard addressed the Association on the work of the American Peace Society.

Rev. Levi H. Cobb, of the Congregational Union, presented its cause.

The American Foreign and Christian Union was represented by Rev. George B. Safford, and at the close of his remarks Rev. George M. Boynton submitted the following resolution, which was adopted :—

Resolved, That the General Association of Massachusetts desires to record its interest in the American and Foreign Christian Union, and its approval of the recent concentration of its effort in aid of the evangelical societies of France. With especial and well-founded confidence in the wisdom and efficiency of its newly elected secretary, the Rev. George B. Safford, we commend him to the kindly welcome and co-operation of our pastors and churches throughout the State.

Rev. Albert E. Winship spoke of the work of the New West Commission, and Rev. Samuel W. Dike of the New England Divorce Reform League.

Rev. Cushing Eels made an address on his labors in the Northwest.

Bro. George L. Ewing presented the work of the ministerial relief fund, and submitted the following resolution, which was passed :—

Resolved, That this Association, recognizing the importance of making ample provision for the relief of disabled and superannuated ministers of the gospel, recommend that every Congregational church in Massachusetts place the ministerial relief fund on their list of church benefactions, or take some action that will secure an annual collection for this worthy object.

A paper on "Spiritual Preaching the Demand of the Times" was read by Rev. Edward Hungerford, and the subject discussed by Rev. Mark Hopkins.

The following resolutions were submitted to the Association and adopted: —

Resolved, That the General Association recognizes with alarm the great danger, not only to the temperance movement, but to all the interests of good government and social order, which is apparent in the growing difficulty in enforcing the different laws restrictive of the sale of intoxicating drink.

Resolved, That the issue thus presented should be met by a decided stand and effective co-operation, not only of all who believe in the supremacy of law as essential to public welfare, but especially of those who love the supreme law of God, and are the natural defenders of all righteousness as the servants of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Resolved, That the Association approves the movement which is embodied in the Law and Order League as a practical means of combining the efforts of all such citizens, and as essentially the demand of the present emergency.

Resolved, That Rev. Albert H. Plumb, Rev. Edwin B. Webb, and Rev. Wilbur Johnson are hereby appointed a committee of this body, representing the Congregational churches of Massachusetts, to confer with other religious bodies in the interest of this or some other system of united effort that shall represent and exert, so far as necessary, the whole power of the religious element of our State in the immediate preservation of order by the enforcement of existing laws.

After reading the minutes, prayer was offered and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Mark Hopkins, when the Association adjourned.

CHARLES B. RICE, moderator.

ALBERT G. BALE, registrar.

CHARLES ANDERSON, assistant registrar.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE STATE COMMITTEE.

THE report now presented is the Nineteenth Annual Report of the State Committee; the first having been submitted to the General Conference, Sept. 13, 1866. For fourteen of these nineteen years every church has had an opportunity of communicating to the General Association, and of putting upon public record a narrative of work. So far as any may have neglected to do this, and so far as conferences may have failed to supply a complete and justly balanced summary, they have failed to improve a valuable opportunity.

Provision has been made, this year, for a Report upon the work of the churches in cities and large towns; a Report upon the work of the churches in rural districts, and for a Report upon the work of the churches in Sunday schools; which will be found in their appropriate places.

The Report of the work of the churches against intemperance originated with this State committee; but the connection of that "subcommittee" was apparently unrecognized at the redefinition of this committee, and so was allowed to cease. Strictly, therefore, the Report upon intemperance presented this year is not one of the reports of the State committee; it is nevertheless one of the regular reports on the work of the churches.

The general character of the reports received from the conferences this year is somewhat more favorable than those of last year. Marked revivals have occurred; a decided religious interest has more widely prevailed; a healthy and vigorous tone prevails over extensive regions.

The following topics call for particular mention: Modifications in Public Worship; The Work among Children and Youth; Sundry Methods approved by experience; Revivals.

MODIFICATIONS IN PUBLIC WORSHIP. — For a number of years this report has had occasion to note a gradual and natural advance in forms facilitating public worship. We call this natural, because many Sunday schools, it is well known, have been using such forms; and it is to be expected that, after a while, these variations will begin to appear in the services of the congregation. What has thus been foretokened has also been very generally welcomed. The alterations have been accepted as improvements. They are not crowded upon the churches by advocates; they come because they are wanted. In most instances the additions to the old forms have been few and simple, and are confined to the morning service.

Mention is made this year of the adoption of responsive readings in Pittsfield, Duxbury, Kingston, Plymouth (Second), in Auburn, Berlin, Oxford (all but the first, rural churches); South Deerfield uses also the Doxology, and "with hearty interest"; Millbury (First), the Doxology, the Lord's Prayer, and the responsive readings, with "delight" and "profit"; and South Hadley substitutes the Lord's Prayer for the invocation; and occasionally the Sunday-evening congregation unite in the Apostles' Creed and responsive readings. These are but a specimen, — straws indicating a gentle but strong and growing current. It is, perhaps, time that we had taken up deliberately the study of the possibilities of public worship, the proper place, and the proper measure, and the proper manner of choosing and regulating such additional forms. To a certain guarded and limited extent these are going to be accepted, and, perhaps, ultimately to a degree much more full and varied than is now distinctly contemplated. The subject is one of much importance. It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that our churches may ultimately succeed in realizing what shall prove more satisfying and more serviceable than any ways of public worship yet attained by any denomination.

THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES AMONG CHILDREN AND YOUTH. — This department has fulfilled the promise of the last year, and shows a significant development. We give illustrative facts in some detail.

Suffolk North Conference testifies: "The work of greatest promise is that among the children. The larger part of the churches are making direct efforts to keep the children under their direct influence. No line of work promises so great and so sure results." The same testimony comes from all quarters.

"The Society of Christian Endeavor" has been adopted in many churches over the State. For example, we hear of it from the North Avenue Church, Cambridge; from the Memorial Church, Cambridgeport; from Revere, and Montague, Duxbury, Plymouth — the Church of the Pilgrimage, Leicester, Haverhill (West), Newburyport (North), East Douglas, Grafton, Upton, Webster, Phillipston, Lee, Housatonic, Otis, South Egremont, and Kirk Street, Lowell. Such expressions as the following are used of it: "The young people are hopefully interested. The pastor is encouraged." "The interest is increasing, — six of the members have united with the church," — "with constant and growing usefulness." "In full sympathy with the church, it promises much, and can hardly fail to develop the youthful Christian life." Again: "Its meetings are well sustained; the outlook is very encouraging." And again: "It has now seventy members, and has been increasing in interest throughout the year. The interest is stronger now than ever; and it is of great value to the pastor. There have been a number of conversions."

Churches have often organizations of young people under other names. South Hadley Falls, e. g., has a "Young People's Association," that holds prayer meetings at six o'clock on Sunday evenings, which have been "largely attended" with "great profit," as also a "Pastor's Class" meeting weekly, for thirty minutes at the close of the session of the public school. The pastor remarks: "It is my profound conviction that we must cultivate a sense of the importance of real study of formulated religious truth in some way if we would secure earlier conversions and more intelligent church members." "The Pastor's Class" appears to be a favorite form of association. In one church it takes the name of "The Pastor's Helpers." Agaiu, we heard last year of "The Young Covenanters," who are still at work. So, also, from Brookline, the Harvard Church, comes an account of "The Church Porch." "This," says the pastor, "is virtually a children's church." It is said to differ in many particulars from "The Society of Christian Endeavor." It has a covenant as follows:—

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I propose to try to do whatever he would like to have me do; I will pray to him and read the Bible every day, and henceforth I will try to be his disciple."

Meetings are held every week, and all "active" members are expected to take part in the service. Daily Scripture readings are prepared and printed for the members.

"Young People's Associations" are also reported from Byfield, Belleville, Newburyport; and West Newton. From Summer Street, Worcester, a "Class of Learners"; from Newtonville, "The St. John Club" for the study of that Gospel; also a similar class for young ladies. From Hanson we hear of "A Young Folks' Class in Evidences of Christianity." Efforts among the young are referred to with enthusiasm in reports from the Bethesda Church, Reading, from West Medford and Melrose.

This topic is so fully treated in the report submitted to the Suffolk South Conference by the Rev. Edward N. Packard that we here copy from it somewhat largely:—

"At Phillips Church, South Boston, a Society of Christian Endeavor, with one hundred members, has been in operation several months with excellent results. In the Eliot Church, Roxbury, a Pastor's Class for religious instruction has met at intervals during the year, to study the principles and duties of the Christian life. The majority have already come into the church, two of whom were only eleven years of age. A Children's Prayer and Praise Meeting, conducted by one of the lady teachers, is held after each session of the Sunday school. Six Mission Circles, with sixty members, hold monthly meetings to hear and to give. A modified form of the Society of Christian Endeavor is being established."

"The pastor of the Central Church, Jamaica Plain, gives the following as the chief agencies there for the education and conversion of the young:—

"1. The Christian home, most potent of all; most variable in respect to its fidelity and efficiency.

"2. The church service of public worship and instruction, for which there is no substitute. Every two months a children's sermon and service on Sunday morning.

"3. The Sunday school for Bible study and the personal influence of Christian teachers.

"4. The Young Christian Workers, a simple organization with a pledge of attendance and participation in a weekly meeting. There are about fifty members, hardly one over twenty-five, and a majority under twenty years of age. All take some part, and almost every young man plays.

"5. The Young Ladies' Missionary Circle, monthly; and a prayer-meeting, monthly, in which some fifteen or twenty participate.

"6. A Children's Meeting, weekly, with the pastor, for half an hour only; the main work of which is to teach and explain a Scripture catechism. Over one hundred different children have attended during the past few months, from twelve years of age down."

At Immanuel Church there is a Pastor's Class on Friday afternoons; also a Pastor's Aid Society, similar to the Society of Christian Endeavor, gathering the young folk around the pastor as their centre.

The Pilgrim Church (Dorchester) has a flourishing Young People's Missionary Society.

The Highland Church (Roxbury). The long-existing Young People's Prayer-Meeting has become The Highland Covenant Society. The working members are divided into committees. The attendance has increased, and many of the younger children come regularly. The aim is to make this a meeting for Sunday-school scholars. The pastor converses on religious matters with any who wish it in an adjoining room before the meeting. Many come and talk freely.

At Walnut Avenue a flourishing Society of Christian Endeavor is in operation, and has given a noticeable impulse to the general work of the church. Various methods of benevolent work are engaging the energies of the young people, such as visiting the sick and the inmates of charitable homes, and co-operating with the Ladies' Society. The pastor meets the young on Friday afternoons, girls and boys alternately. Personal talk and systematic instruction fill three quarters of an hour.

At the Boylston church there are: 1. A Helping Hand Society, children from five to fourteen years of age, for religious instruction from the pastor; forty members; meeting fortnightly at his house. 2. The Young People's Society for Christian Work, composed of those over fourteen years of age. 3. A Class for instruction in doctrines is held about three months in the year. The articles of faith are taken up separately.

The Wollaston church has a Tuesday-evening Bible class for the young.

Dorchester Second has a Young People's Prayer Meeting on Sunday evening before worship; a Young People's Mission Circle. Both are conducted by the older class of young church members, although the children are coming more and more into the regular prayer-meeting; also a Little Children's Helping-Hand Society; and a newly organized Life and Light. The pastor is now meeting about fifty children for half an hour on Saturday mornings, at nine o'clock. Last summer, for several weeks, there was a class of young converts.

Clarendon reports a Boys' and Girls' Christian Band.

Dedham First. The pastor's class of Young Covenanters has gained in usefulness, interest, and numbers. The best part is ripening into conscious and well-attested consecration to Christ of its most faithful members. The boys now count as many as the girls.

Norwood has a Young People's Prayer-Meeting held regularly; and, for several months, a Catechism Class.

"It is probable," remarks the author of this report, "that everything of this kind must be adapted to the peculiarities of each locality, and that every plan must be kept fluid, and be dropped for another as soon as weariness or inefficiency shows itself."

From the report of the Middlesex South Conference, Rev. William R. Eastman, we make the following extract:—

"On every hand there appears evidence of growing attention to the religious training of children and youth. Some pastors have special classes for the catechism. A new interest is felt in the work of Bible study which is traceable to the Sunday-school assemblies and institutes which are being brought to our very doors, and I have no doubt that the influence of our new Sunday-school superintendent for Massachusetts is to stir and help the churches more and more. We hear also of the organization of some Young People's Societies of Christian Endeavor. They are especially mentioned in the reports from Concord, Northboro, Wellesley, and South Framingham, and nothing but good is said about them. They serve admirably to develop the Christian habits and efficiency of young believers by giving them the responsibility of certain well-defined duties, making them watchful over one another and continually thoughtful concerning themselves. The most hopeful feature in the outlook before our churches is this anxious inquiry on the part of pastors and older Christians for better ways of training the children. We have been asking for a long time how to hold the young men and young women, but now we are beginning to see more clearly that the only way to hold them is never to let go. And, recognizing the truth that we cannot hold them by mere force, we are learning to be more earnest to bring them as children at the earliest possible moment into such relations to Jesus Christ and his active service that he will keep them. Several reports speak heartily of flourishing mission circles among the children."

Similar accounts, less complete, reach us from other regions.

OTHER METHODS.—From the Worcester North Conference we hear of Fellowship Meetings (of neighboring churches) held during the winter, with good results. The conference was divided into two districts of eight churches each, and fifteen meetings were held in both. Basket collocations saved time and trouble.

In Berkshire South, also eight such meetings were well attended, and led to a decided quickening of the churches. Doubtless the method has elsewhere been followed this year as often before.

From the Worcester Central Conference comes the following series of recommendations for reaching neglecters: 1. Organize bands of visitors who will give one day in two weeks to visiting from house to house. 2. Be sure to make the pastoral visitations thorough, neglecting none. 3. Let Christians visit as friends more widely, and invite more widely to their homes as well as to church services. 4. Be watchful that meetings in schoolhouses or in private houses are held often enough (with plenty of good singing) to amount to something.

So also we find commended the plan of holding for three months, "A People's Service" on Sunday evenings with extemporaneous preaching, and an "After Meeting" for prayer, testimony, and inquiry.

From Stoneham comes an account of the very remarkable success of a Sunday-evening meeting in a hall. It was started as a temperance meeting; and some of its first leaders were not Christian men. But gradually, by a sort of gravitation, it has grown into a very popular and efficient religious meeting.

The Suffolk South report lays emphasis on the value among a scattered population of "cottage or neighborhood meetings." Two such meetings are held in one of the parishes the year round. Neglecters frequently attend and are brought to the church. Conversions occur.

The Olivet Church, in the same conference, divides the section surrounding the church into districts, and has a committee for each, visiting thoroughly and systematically, "carrying Christian sympathy and help, drawing out the forgotten or the backslidden."

Another "selects a church member for a street or for a block to watch over it and care for it." There needs to be a superintendent of such visitation, to supply the places that fall vacant and to make reports monthly to the church, or the movement will be likely soon to end. Organize it thus and it may last until the population has so changed as to cause a modification of the plan. Such an organized visitation has been known to continue for twenty years.

In Duxbury, for reading neglecters, a winter course of lectures upon the "Pilgrim's Progress" was held. They were well attended, and seemed to do good.

REVIVALS.—The accounts of revivals vary exceedingly in fulness. Some are dismissed with a word; others are reported in detail. But the record is in every respect very imperfect. Such as we have received, we give.

From Auburn we hear of interest among the young, resulting in some half-dozen conversions and the establishment of a young people's meeting. In Princeton twelve have been added to the church; in Rutland twenty-three. In Linebrook, a small church, eleven have been received. In the North Church, Newburyport, interest began with the week of prayer; only the simplest means were used, and there was no outside help. Pastor and people were united in prayer and effort. A goodly number were gathered in and the church strengthened. Near by at Belleville, also, there was more than usual interest; a number of conversions, and backsliders reclaimed.

Bedford reports special interest; also the Bethesda church of Reading, and the churches at Wakefield, Melrose, Burlington, and North Woburn; in Boston the Park Street and Shawmut; and likewise Newton Second (West); while Auburndale received no less than forty. Millbury Second held a special series of meetings for those newly interested, which were delightful and very useful. Many hopefully converted. Millbury First has enjoyed a very interesting work of grace the present year. Union meetings have been blessed to different denominations. The church is wonderfully quickened and increased in power, and many souls have been born again. In Northbridge the week of prayer this year was followed by a growing interest, resulting in a quickening of believers and sixteen or more conversions. Whitinsville must be added to the list, having enjoyed a blessing in connection with the Methodist Church. In Webster, again, from twelve to twenty were expected to be received at the next communion.

In the northwestern part of the State, upon the borders of Williamstown, there used to be, twenty years ago, a community of very peculiar character. The late Prof. Albert Hopkins interested himself very much in its behalf, laboring there himself and engaging students of the college and others to join him. A Sunday school was maintained, prayer-meetings were held, a very faithful visitation was carried out; after a time a chapel was built, and a liberal Christian inventiveness and generosity blessed this community with many beautiful gifts and services. This year we learn that the church at White Oaks has sought admission to the Berkshire North Conference; also that there has been enjoyed here a season of blessing of some quite remarkable traits. It has prevailed largely among adults men and women. It began in cottage prayer-meetings, held from house to house; and at the time when the report was made up, it still continued. Very many have had the gospel carried to them who could not be induced to go to seek it. The example of this success is instructive and encouraging. It exemplifies the fact that no place can be beyond the gospel's reach.

From South Hadley Falls comes an interesting story. The blessing began in October. It has brought about fifty hopeful conversions. Many who had long been labored with were brought out. The one most prominent feature of this season was the large number who had been secretly cherishing some Christian hope, of five, eight, even ten years' standing, who have now been brought into full light. The church is greatly blessed.

In Natick, in connection with special efforts made by the late pastor, for bringing to a decision those long under faithful instruction, thirty-four were received. In Marlboro', as in Natick, a blessing was enjoyed, mainly among young people, adding twenty. In Dover were added ten. In Framingham the church was greatly stirred, and nearly thirty persons declared their purpose to lead a new life, a large portion of them from ten to sixteen years of age; occasioning the institution of a new meeting for the benefit of the young. In Middleboro' the First and the Central churches have received thirty-one each, and others are looked for. In New Bedford (North), thirty have been added, and the interest continues. The Young People's Meeting has here proved itself valuable, not merely in the parish, but in the city; most of the additions being from its members. During the eight years of the present pastorate but two or three communion seasons have lacked additions. From Ashburnham we hear of a quickening that commenced with the week of prayer, resulting in the hopeful conversion of quite a number of the students of Cushing Academy. The Young People's Christian Union connected with the Academy meets on Sunday afternoon at four o'clock, and has been very serviceable both to the students and to the youths of the village. Phillipston reports a quiet work of grace in progress for some months. In Athol there has been unusual interest and some conversions, and the same in Hubbardston. Lancaster reports a revival. Lee has received thirty young persons, fruits of a quickening of 1882 and 1883. The Central Church, Dracut, has added thirty-three per cent to its resident membership. In Oakham a quiet work of grace has resulted in over fifteen hopeful conversions; and in Southbridge a refreshing such as has not been known for many years has greatly quickened the church, bringing more than forty young people to Christ, thirty of whom were welcomed to the communion in May.

From the Suffolk South Conference comes a gratifying report of no less than two hundred and sixty-nine new recruits to the ranks of its churches, or one hundred and thirteen more than last year, while numbers of hopeful converts still remain to be counted. Among the additions to its churches are the following: To Olivet, ten; to Eliot, Roxbury, eleven; to Union, Boston, twelve; to E Street, South Boston, thirteen; to Dedham, fourteen; to Phillips, South Boston, sixteen; West Roxbury, twenty; Dorchester (Second), twenty-one; Highland, twenty-five; Central, Jamaica Plain, thirty-two; Hyde Park, sixty-one.

In Dorchester the interest began early in the year; an evangelist labored for a week, hardly a meeting without Christian decisions, and twenty-four came into the church as fruits of the work. The quickening in Jamaica Plain started from a series of union meetings under the guidance of an evangelist; a large number were brought to the knowledge of Christ, of whom about a hundred joined the several churches, about a third of whom were received into the Central Church. A quickening also showed itself in the Sunday school of the Immanuel Church, Roxbury. Marked interest has likewise appeared in the Pilgrim Church, Dorchester, and the Highland Church, Roxbury. At Hyde Park, three denominations joined in an effort under the same evangelist, and more than a hundred hopefully came to Christ, of whom over sixty, as already stated, came to one particular communion. A large number of business men were converted; the results are deep and abiding. It is the best year of the church's history. Every department has flourished.

A great awakening, beyond any previous experience in the same church and almost in any other, has been enjoyed in the Pilgrim Church, Cambridgeport. It is consequent upon earnest desire and prayer long sustained, upon the most systematic discipline of the church in Christian work of every kind, upon a preaching prayerfully studied, — shaped to reach the conscience, — particularly in the enforcement of the Scripture doctrine of justification by faith, and upon the watchful and prompt following up of providential indications and leadings. It is yet too soon to chronicle the results of this blessed season. Already one hundred and fifty have hopefully found their Saviour.

With this record, the story of the year closes. We would simply add, that if the Holy Spirit is now guiding the churches into ways which shall bring the youth of our parishes to Christ, and if he is at the same time increasing the frequency of additions, we certainly have cause for profound gratitude and joy.

By vote of the State committee,

DANIEL P. NOYES,

Secretary.

CHRISTIAN WORK AMONG FOREIGNERS IN OUR CITIES AND LARGE TOWNS.

BY REV. CHARLES F. THWING, CAMBRIDGE.

THAT America is becoming Europe, New England New France and Ireland, Massachusetts a foreign colony, is well known. That the drift of population is away from the rural sections to metropolitan centres is a familiar fact. If one quarter of the people of the Bay State are foreign born, it is also probable that at least one half are in their conditions and circumstances essentially foreigners. In the cities and large towns are these aliens massed. Massachusetts may be called the most urban, metropolitan, of all the thirty-eight Commonwealths. Of places containing four thousand or more inhabitants, Ohio has forty-six, Pennsylvania fifty-nine, and New York fifty-nine; but Massachusetts has no less than eighty-five. One half of the foreign population of this State is Irish.* Its religion is the Roman Catholic. Its churches are many, its ecclesiastical machinery strong and various. Whether the Protestant Church can put its leaven into this mass is a difficult question; but it is certain that the Protestant Church has not succeeded in raising the Roman Catholic Church, of either America or of Massachusetts, out of its Romanized sluggishness and spiritual stolidity. The other half of the foreign population of this Commonwealth is, to a large degree, Protestant in principle and tendency. Speaking the English tongue, the lives of many of them have been woven into the warp and woof of the body politic and ecclesiastical; speaking the German, French, Swedish languages, they constantly realize that they are strangers in a strange land. Their homes are chiefly in the manufacturing and distributing centres. To reach them with the gospel, to make them Christian citizens of a Christian republic, to make them worthy members of the church, to make these men and women, these boys and girls, Christians, is the problem set for the solution of the Congregational and every other church of Massachusetts.

This problem set for us is an easier one and one of smaller proportions than the kindred one proposed to other States. This European landslide of people stops only on the Mississippi's banks, or on the great lakes' shores. In Idaho fifty per cent of the population, in Nevada sixty, in Minnesota seventy, in Wisconsin seventy-two, are of foreign extraction. In Chicago four persons out of every five belong to the foreign class. In Boston every other person is a foreigner. Boston, indeed, publishes no paper, whose name, the Firebrand, flashes out its evident purpose of reducing to ashes the political, religious, moral, and social institutions of the nation. If New York has sixty thousand people who have everything to gain and nothing to lose in riots and plunder, Boston has at least twenty thousand people who are the enemies of social order. Each of the cities has scores and hundreds who, if not ready to lay their own hands upon the body politic and ecclesiastical, are, like Paul, at least willing to stand by and keep the clothes of those who are stripped for its destruction. For us the problem is simpler, it is less big with unknown responsibilities than for the churches of the West; but for us it is sufficiently complicated; for us it is big enough with present and prophetic meaning to demand our wisest wisdom and our most vigorous work.

To the solution of this problem, such as it is, many churches have given their earnest energies, and even more churches their deep reflection. At least twenty-two churches of those who speak a tongue foreign to the English are established. Boston has five Lutheran churches, one German Baptist, one German Methodist, one Swedish Methodist, one Swedish Baptist, and one Swedish Evangelical Independent mission. Brockton has one Swedish Lutheran church, and one "Swedish Evangelical Independent Mission." Fall River has a Congregational and a Baptist French mission. Holyoke has a German Congregational mission. Lawrence has two German churches, one Presbyterian, and one Methodist. Lowell has a French Congregational church, as well as three Swedish churches. Springfield has a French Congregational mission. Worcester has four Swedish churches, one each belonging to the Congregational, Baptist, and Methodist order, and one being Lutheran. It has also a French church, which, like that of Lowell, bears the Congregational name. North Adams has a French Baptist church.

But through the ordinary churches are many foreigners also reached. In not a few services foreigners form a large share of the congregation. In Amesbury "one fourth the church and one third the Sunday school are foreign." The Highland Church, Boston, has "a Sunday school of five hundred, in which a native-born child is the exception." A church in Ludlow reports that "one third the adult attendance at the Sunday service, one seventh of its membership, and one third of the children in Sunday school are foreign." Many other churches reach this class through special services or mission chapels. The Highland Church, Boston, maintains a branch Sunday school among Hollanders and Germans. The Dedham church maintains a Sunday school, and a fortnightly preaching service, in a neighborhood of five hundred Germans. The Shawmut Church and the Phillips of Boston, through their missions, influence many who become members of the home church. In Auburn and West Boylston work of a union character among the French has been planned and achieved. In Webster the Germans receive considerable attention. Two churches, at least, the Mt Vernon of Boston and the South of Lawrence, do a special work among the Chinese. In Lowell, also, the Chinese are the object of special care.

So far as these and other churches report the results of their labors, it appears that these results are commensurate with the amount and quality of the work designed to secure them. It is also made evident that these results are quite as satisfactory as the church has a right to expect. If it be not quite true that the fruit is as generous and rich as would appear on other branches, it is in view of the soil, of its hasty culture, and of the wildness of the stock, as good as a reasonable hope can demand.

The consideration of what we have done, of what we are doing, suggests the inevitable question, Can we do more? Standing as the mouthpiece of a large committee, speaking to you, members of the association, I venture to reply, yes; we ought to do more, we can do more, we will do more.

In the planning of Christian work among the foreigners in a community, the first essential condition is to know the number and the character of those who have, in the providence of God, become the wards of an individual church and of an individual pastor. A census should be made; some method of systematic visitation adopted. Every church should know the character of its unchurched. For this purpose a professional canvasser may be employed. This plan was, at the suggestion of the North Avenue Church, adopted by Cambridge churches last year. This plan was also put into practice by several churches in upper New York City in the vicinity of Eighty-sixth Street. Delegates of its own membership may be commissioned to canvass the neighborhood of a church. Even if the first census is made by a professional canvasser, his report of facts forms only a basis upon which the officers and members of the church are to found their method of systematic visitation. All this endeavor is designed to discover what and how many heathen live within sight of the church spire.

If this voyage of discovery reveals foreigners sufficient in number and of a fitting character to be formed into a church, a church should at once be formed. Better, far better is it for them to be organized into a church than for them to be absorbed into the mother church. Under their own ecclesiastical roof they feel more at home. With the pressure of immediate responsibilities they put forth greater spiritual strength and zeal. Touched by the sense of the need of their fellows, they are more earnest and aggressive in Christian work. Wherever there is lumber for a church for foreigners, build it. This is the testimony of the experience of Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis. A work in Haverhill has been accomplished which represents this method. It is thus succinctly described by the Rev. Dr. Kingsbury of Bradford:—

“A new community grows up alongside the city, too far off from all churches to be united. The question is, How shall the ordinances of the gospel be established? We tried giving the care to the nearest church; built a chapel; tried to make the old church brood the new. Then jealousy, misunderstanding, friction, and failure; also weakness, fearfulness, and lack of all spirit in the new people. Then we just took the little people, set them on their feet, made them into a church, gave them their own best men for officers, told them to come to us for advice, or money, or anything; then gave them a minister, and bade them God speed. The conclusion is that the best way to extend and plant Congregational churches is to organize.”

Further, let the church thus established be equipped just as completely as it is possible. Difficult it is to obtain good French or German or Swedish pastors; but let the endeavor be made to secure the most efficient minister which money can create or command. Brethren, if those of us who are the pastors of ordinary American churches feel ourselves underpaid, these foreign pastors, these pastors of mission chapels and outside stations, are doubly and trebly underpaid. To command the ability needed, to make the progress possible, the churches need to double and to redouble their offerings. But not simply at its head should the church be well manned, it should also be made the social centre of all those who find it their religious home. Make it an institution. The Ruggles Street Baptist Church of Boston has raised, by the side of its edifice, a parish house. This house includes rooms for conversation, a reading-room, a music-room, a library, and other facilities for either pleasure or culture. Richly blessed has this enterprise been in various ways, exceptional has been the financial support that it has commanded, but the method of this church represents a method which can be, with greater or less detail, introduced into every church which labors with the neglected population, either native or foreign.

But if a church cannot be organized among the foreigners whom a systematic visitation reveals, then let the home church gather them within her bosom. Let her open wide her doors of welcome. These doors I know are wide open in many, perhaps in most churches. I do not think it is true in Massachusetts, as has been declared by the pastor of the First Church, Chicago, is true in his city, that the ordinary church does not want these people in its congregation. We do want them. But it is true that we are not in peril of giving them a welcome too warm, or of trying too hard to make them feel at home. It is true that the church in Massachusetts no more than the church in Georgia is in danger of burying too deeply the spirit of social caste, or of making itself too democratic. If to any church they come in large numbers, it may become necessary to alter somewhat the methods of work. To adapt its methods to its constituency every church should hold itself ready. But, further, even if a church cannot be organized in a foreign neighborhood, it may be possible to open a sort of parish house, which may serve as a social centre for the residents. In those neighborhoods which in our cities are known by such names as "Dublin," "Little Canada," open an "evening home"; equip this "home" with a reading-room and a small library; give an entertainment in its hall once a month; hold a prayer-meeting, also, each week; make it a pleasant meeting-place for those whose homes are odoriferous of pork and cabbage; make it a sunny harbor for those who would be tossing on the billowy boards of the drinking-saloon. This is practicable; it is not costly; it is most effective in promoting clean living, pure thinking, and Christian choosing. It tends to achieve the supreme end, the liberation of a sin-enslaved world, and the regeneration of sin-cursed man.

This method is as applicable to a section of a Catholic as to a Protestant community. There is a ragged edge in every Catholic neighborhood which is not firmly pinned to the robes of the priest. It is woven in good part of boys and men between the ages of seventeen and twenty-seven. These fellows are coarse, profane, intemperate, lecherous hoodlums. Yet they are men. They have thrown off the yoke of the church in which they were baptized. But they have not come under the restraint of the Church Protestant. They constitute the most dangerous part in every community. It would have been better for them to remain stupid loyalists to Leo XIII. than to have become, as they are, outlaws. The social influences of an attractive "evening home" may result in winning them to purity and righteousness.

That organization wins its aims most economically and fully that works at short range. In this labor, therefore, if the General Association considers and recommends certain measures, it is the local conference which should discuss with care and plan with skill for this form of work among its own churches. If the local conference thus discusses and plans, it is the individual church and the individual pastor, thus instructed and moved, who should apply their wisdom and their spiritual zeal to their own community. After all, it is upon each of us, as an individual pastor, that this duty is rolled. Each in his place in doing his own duty to this class should emulate, in wise discrimination, in patient faithfulness, and, above all else, in personal sympathy, Sister Dora in curing her small-pox patients, Octavia Hill in stifling the "cry of outcast London," and Edward Payson in dealing with the soul of the individual man.

This report is, therefore, concluded with the following resolutions, of which, at the instance of the State committee on the work of the churches, I move the adoption:—

Resolved, That, in view of the facts presented, this Association advises each church to take a religious census, and to make a systematic visitation of its community, with special reference to the neglecting and the foreign-born population.

Resolved, That the State committee be instructed in co-operation, if possible, with the Home Missionary Society, to secure the early presentation of this subject to all the local conferences.

WORK IN VILLAGES AND RURAL DISTRICTS.

REV. ALBERT C. SEWALL, WILLIAMSTOWN.

FOR the year 1882 circulars were sent to all the churches, requesting information upon four points, viz. :—

“1. Names of outposts wholly or partially under the care of your church?

“2. Distance of each from church?

“3. Character and (approximate) number of population?

“4. Measures adopted; results?”

To these, in the circular of 1883, was added:—

“5. In general have you any measures to recommend for the more effectual reaching of the sparse rural population or the hamlets distant from centres?”

The blanks of 1883, if filled by those to whom they were sent, have been returned to your committee from the Berkshire South Conference only, and from that conference by only seven out of its twenty churches. Three of these report no outposts, three an outpost each, and one, the church of Monterey, “includes the whole town in its parish and makes provision for the visitation of each family at least once a year.” Our report is therefore based mainly on returns for the year 1882.

Of the circulars requesting information for the year 1882, two hundred and nineteen were returned. Of these nineteen were unfilled, and one hundred had the significant word “none” or “nothing” written across their face. We infer that many of these churches are themselves in rural communities, having no outposts to be occupied. Fifty-one churches report one outpost each; thirty report two outposts each; nine, three each; and three, five each. Seven churches mention occasional services in school districts, which, however, they do not dignify by the name of “outposts.” The character of these so reported varies from the country school district with its branch Sunday school, occasional or regular preaching and prayer-meeting, to the suburban mission chapel with its embryonic church life. Preaching services with Sunday schools, prayer-meetings, and pastoral visitation are the methods generally in use. Cottage prayer-meetings are mentioned only in a single instance; Bible readings in two instances. Three churches report the co-operation of the Young Men’s Christian Association, the association not being aided by the churches, however, so much as by the pastors merely and in preaching. Three speak of the endeavor to evangelize outlying regions as a union effort, which, however, does not seem to be wholly approved. The opinion is quite decidedly expressed that different denominations would better agree upon some friendly apportionment of territory, and pursue each its own methods.

The distance of these outposts from the central church varies from a half-mile to six miles. Four are only a half-mile distant; nineteen, one mile; thirteen, one and a half miles; thirty-four, two miles; five, two and a half miles; twenty-five, three miles; seven, four miles; four, five miles; and one, only six miles.

The character of the population is an interesting feature. Exact statistics are here impossible, but your committee notice quite a large proportion of almost wholly American communities. In some neighborhoods special services are held as a matter of convenience mainly; a cluster of families, both intelligent and Christian, living so far from the church with which they are connected as to be unable to attend regularly upon its services. Others are spoken of as neglecters and in process of demoralization. Your committee regard this as the most significant feature in the intelligence furnished them, that in so many instances native Americans, and with Christian ancestry, are falling back into Sabbath neglect, irreligion, and consequent degradation. The proportion of Roman Catholic and of mixed communities provided for in this rural evangelization is relatively small; partly, no doubt, because special evangelistic work among these classes is as yet in its infancy among us; and partly because our foreign population are to be found not so much in rural places as in our larger towns and cities. Still something is being done and very hopefully in such communities.

In two instances the value of so-called "outpost" work is questioned, the opinion being expressed that more is gained by concentrating effort. It must be confessed that the results of outpost work as reported are not so large and encouraging as might be anticipated. The full results of such work, however, it is impossible to state. The most laconic, and, perhaps, the most exactly truthful reply elicited by your committee is, "No methods and no results." We fear that this might have been often repeated.

The only really helpful suggestion outside of the usual methods comes from the Hampshire East Conference, which employs a conference missionary. This seems to your committee a step in the right direction. It recognizes the fact that the conference is an organic body, with rights, duties, and responsibilities. It is a step up from that strange notion that the autonomy of the churches admits of no aggressive care and culture from the sisterhood of churches.

Your committee have reason to fear that we are allowing not a few of these outlying communities — some of them containing feeble churches, made feeble by the shifting of centres of population — to run to waste, if indeed we are not weakly surrendering them to other denominations.

Far be it from us to decry other Christian denominations or to rebuke them for their zeal, so long as that zeal is Christian, not divisive and schismatic: we honor them for it. Have we not gone too far in the other direction, however? As a denomination we are conspicuous for the passive virtues. Whoever will, may start a garden in our cornfield and raise poppies in place of our wheat. No question of greater importance can come before this body than this: Are we Congregationalists competent to care for our own?

Not a few embryonic churches are the natural children, not of any one local church, but of Congregationalism as such; some enfeebled churches are mothers or grandmothers of entire conferences of churches. Have stalwart sons no right to do unasked for their old mothers? Must parents wait to be appealed to by their children before assuming any aggressive care?

We cannot delegate these filial and parental trusts, except to representatives, for whose doings we are accountable, and who shall be accountable to us, without loss to ourselves and greater loss to those whom God has intrusted to our care. Our conferences need the direct administration of these trusts,—the interests of their own embryonic or enfeebled churches. They need it for the development of their own corporate spiritual life. And these weak and enfeebled churches need a far more sympathetic and judicious care than it is possible for them to receive in any other way.

Autonomy is good. It is scriptural and eminently wise. We may not relinquish it. But an organism of autonomous churches through voluntary representation is equally good. It is also scriptural and wise. We wish again, therefore, to indorse the action of the Hampshire East Conference, with all that it implies.

I cannot close this report without alluding to the vexed question of our common schools. Does freedom of conscience require that from the education of our youth the leading facts and principles of Christianity should be quite so scrupulously excluded? Has not the demand for this freedom been pushed beyond the bounds of liberty itself? There must surely be a modicum of religious instruction which shall infringe upon the liberty of no right conscience, else republicanism has not the power to provide its citizens with the moral and religious principle essential to its own safety.

Can this Association contribute anything towards the solution of this vexed question and help to recover for our rural communities a better week-day religious culture?

We wish, in closing, to urge the importance of furnishing our villages and rural districts with the very best religious advantages. It will not do to leave them to provide for themselves as they may be able and disposed. If disposed, in many cases they are not able to command the services of competent men. Deep piety, rare consecration, essential here as elsewhere, are not enough. These rural places are the resort and feeding ground of thinkers. Congregationalism must be able to meet and mould this strong intelligence. That she has done it in the past is no assurance that in the future, with her paucity of ministers and the increasing demands of large centres of population, she can continue to do it without some change of method.

Your committee deeply realize the growing claims of our larger towns and cities, the urgent necessity for a rapid increase of evangelistic and educational activity at these centres; but from what source shall this activity come? Where are the towns and cities to look for the sturdy men and women of sound mind and heart to replenish overwrought city life? When Achsah, the bride of the victor Othniel, received permission of her father Caleb to name her own dowry, she replied. "Thou hast given me a south land; give me also springs of water." "And he gave her the upper springs and the nether springs."

Our south lands will parch and wither without the upper and the nether springs. They will be overrun with error and irreligion unless we can locate and maintain in our rural communities men who command the respect of their fellow-men, not only for their consecrated piety, but for vigorous thought and sound, practical good sense.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE UPON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES AGAINST INTEMPERANCE.

UNUSUAL circumstances compelled the secretary to collect the information for the annual report by direct inquiry of the churches. To the five hundred and eighteen circulars sent out, only one hundred and forty-three made reply, — about twenty-eight per cent. But the reporting churches were fairly representative of every conference, of city and country, of strong and weak, of the more enthusiastic and the more conservative.

I. COMMITTEES. — Of these representative churches only twenty-six report definite provision for leadership in systematic effort against intemperance. That of the Pilgrimage at Plymouth simply arranges a place in its system of work. Those of Bradford, Waltham, and Woburn have left the matter to their general committees. The Calvinist of Fitchburg, Union of Marlboro', and Pilgrim of Cambridgeport, were led by an organization not strictly for church work. Those of Belchertown, Berkely, East Weymouth, and Jamaica Plain act as "committees of the whole." The Upton has a committee of one, in its pastor; the Brookfield two, a gentleman and lady; and Winchester, five. Peabody has a grand committee, through whom a great work has been conducted. Woburn is to change this year to a special committee. The suggestion of organizing for definite effort by providing some responsible leadership is fairly vindicated by the tendency exhibited in these efficient churches.

II. CHURCH RULES. — Forty churches report some practical rule expressed or understood, in constitution, by-laws, covenant, or traditional practice, against the use, the traffic, or ownership of buildings devoted to the trade. West Brookfield and Westminster require a signed pledge on uniting with the church. Berkely, Enfield, Sutton, Ware, and Woburn have an accepted understanding. Brookfield and the Maverick, of Boston, place the forbidden practice among disciplinable offences. Gloucester relies upon strong resolutions passed by the church, and West Boylston upon a "statement of principle" in the manual. The remaining twenty-five express their requirement in a plain rule. Only five complain of its violation, and only one declares it of no value. The rule of the Braintree church has stood for fifty years.

III. THE PULPIT. — Nearly all the pastors claim to press the subject with more or less earnestness in pulpit, lecture, or evening meeting, as occasion may make it wise. The church in Sutton, by a vote of long standing, demands such a sermon twice a year. In one case, at least, the danger of personal disadvantage has made the pastor's faithfulness almost heroic.

IV. PERIODICAL MEETINGS. — Thirty-one of the reporting churches hold periodical temperance meetings with some regularity, — from those of prayer only up to mass meetings in town halls. Many of these have been institutions of power. The influence thus exerted in West Brookfield turned the town vote, four to one, against license; that of the Sunday-evening meeting in Peabody, where eighteen hundred gathered in the town hall, changed the license majority of two hundred and thirty-seven to an opposite one of one hundred and thirty-five. Twenty-two more churches hold similar gatherings irregularly, as special reasons appear. Twenty-six more hold them in union with other churches or with temperance organizations like the Woman's Temperance Union.

V. INSIDE ORGANIZATIONS. — Thirty-one have a temperance organization or a branch of some outside one within the church congregation or Sabbath school. Eight of these have "Bands of Hope"; nine more, some other for young people, as "Sons of Temperance," "Soldiers," or "Juvenile Bands." Six have general societies. That of East Douglas includes nearly every member, and numbers two hundred. Seven have some branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union; and one, Revere, has a "Law and Order League."

VI. OTHER TRAINING FOR THE YOUNG. — As measures of temperance instruction for the young, nearly all make mention of the Sabbath school, with its temperance lessons, addresses, and concerts. The effective work of the Florence school seems to keep the lead, earnest teachers carrying the subject into their classes and buying their own books for preparation. In the same line is the teaching in the general infant class of one hundred in Maynard, the "Pastor's Class" in East Weymouth, the "Cold Water Army" of the John Street Church, Lowell; the village "Bands of Hope," as in Franklin; the "Temperance Children's Union," Waltham; and the temperance committee in the "Society of Christian Endeavor," Walnut Avenue Church, Boston. Eight make mention of special gatherings of children in towns, five of them led by the "Woman's Christian Temperance Union," whose labors for the young take precedence of any similar labors by the church in several places. Two rely upon preaching temperance to children, as in the ten-minute morning preliminary sermon at Woburn. In a goodly and growing number of towns, attention is directed to temperance instruction in public schools as a most hopeful feature.

VII. PLEDGES. — Eighty reports speak specially of the use and value of pledges; sixty-two churches use them in some form; eighteen have ceased, or are ceasing, and either object or doubt. It must be confessed that most of these latter are from our stronger churches. But many of the sixty-two are strong, and of those especially alive to the work. Adverse opinions vary from simple distrust to the fear that youth are dangerously entrapped and might well be forbidden to sign. Favorable testimonies range from "well regarded," at Spencer, to "one right step," at Malden; "an anchor and reminder," Braintree, and "regarded as invaluable," at Ware. The pledges are carried into congregations, Sabbath schools, private classes, and wherever the mass of earnest workers go. In public schools and voluntary associations of youth, the Woman's Union is moulding with them the tone of thought and present purpose of great numbers. They pledge, as at Conway, against cider beer, tobacco, and profanity. Pledges are registered in church albums, bound in books, hung as ornament upon walls. That in the Walnut Avenue Sabbath school is on the cover of an attractive and instructive pamphlet, given to the signer with autographs of pastor, superintendent, and teacher, as witnesses. Grant that the great movements of impulse may react, that the blue ribbons which decked even the babes of Great Barrington three years ago may have faded and the eleven hundred signatures of that day in Brookfield may have proved of no permanent value, is not the golden mien of opinion that which finds the pledge useful in union with other efforts, an agency of power like so many other agencies, according to the manner in which used and the sensible character of the honor accorded to it and the expectations based upon it? Why should not the same agency that enters into nearly all business relations, into every marriage tie, and every profession of the Lord Jesus Christ at his altar, be made an agency of power in its place for this special bond to morality?

VIII. OUTSIDE ORGANIZATIONS. — Forty-two churches report work in general connection with such outside organizations as local "Temperance Unions," "Reform Clubs," "Total Abstinence Society," "Good Templars," "Temple of Honor," "Sons of Temperance," "Order of Golden Cross," "Home for Inebriates," and "Law and Order League." Twenty-two report working with the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Eight consider that the labors of these make special effort by the church less necessary. An equal number protest the contrary. Some danger is found that too much speciality in work may weaken a church in its broader mission. The pastor of a church surrounded by an unusual number of these organizations is sometimes inclined to wish them all abolished. It must be well for a church to use all, as in Westfield, as far as available, or, if possible, to lead them all, as in Peabody.

IX. LITERATURE. — Most churches limit their use of temperance literature to the Sabbath-school library. Eighteen report circulating temperance papers in the school. Two furnish text-books for public schools. Revere and West Springfield churches distribute among voters before elections. Marked success attends the use of the writings of Roman Catholic prelates among citizens of that faith in Peabody. The Upton pastor, with posters and "Fife and Drum Series" and cheap publications of the National Temperance Society; individual citizens, especially the ladies, in several places; and the various temperance unions are sowing in this way beside all waters.

X. THE COMMUNION. — One hundred and seven report the use of the unfermented fruit of the vine in the communion cup. Only twenty-five report adhering to the alcoholic. Of these, one, the Cambridge First, is just changing. Only one, the Taunton Union, that has made the change, has returned to the old custom. The average time since adopting the unfermented is less than eleven years. In most cases the step is recent. In Stoughton and Wellfleet it is twenty years old; in Sutton, forty-two; and in Longmeadow, one hundred and sixty-eight. The emphatic disclaimer of a few conservative correspondents may rather indicate than disprove a vigorous and progressive character in the movement.

XI. WORKING OF LAWS. — Fifty-four towns are reported as allowing no license for the sale of intoxicating drink. By many correspondents, including those in Boston, license is condemned as “a failure,” “not enforced,” meaning “liquor” and “free rum,” “increasing sales, intemperance, and drunkenness,” “multiplying rum-shops,” “doing much havoc,” “lowering public sentiment,” and “greatly increasing the evils with which the church has to deal.” In a few towns, under the watch of the Law and Order League, it has checked selling, and prohibition that “did not prohibit” is pronounced the failure. Thirty-eight reports, however, testify that prohibition, in some form, “is best,” “works well,” is enforceable, and at least partly successful. Local option, as a means to this, is favored in some localities on the theory that where prohibition is voted it will be enforced. In too many cases such prohibition does not exclude the liquor, and the local option which works well in retired towns degenerates into license in centres of population. But the most serious feature observed is the almost total failure of all legal restriction in such towns as Charlestown, Marblehead, Gloucester, Springfield, Walpole, and Woburn. The fact that no system seems to make much difference is causing many to lose faith in all law upon the subject.

XII. ENFORCEMENT OF LAW. — For demanding enforcement of the laws we have, a pretty positive sentiment is reported in eighty-two towns. Eleven are divided, fifteen afraid or apathetic, and four openly against enforcement. One of these last is so because of dislike for the law; a sentiment characterized in the pithy report from Waltham as unwillingness to chain the devil, unless he can be also dungeoned.

XIII. OTHER AGENCIES. — It is gratifying that nearly all the reporting churches are so far ceasing to depend upon mere law as to feel the need of those moral and educating efforts that are their own most appropriate sphere. Many have a warm welcome for almost any agency of efficient help in so vital a struggle.

XIV. GENERAL DRIFT. — The general drift in sixteen towns, as in Lawrence, Lowell, and others of large foreign populations, is reported bad and downward. Yet in some of these the native element is receiving education to stronger temperance convictions. One fifth of the remainder reporting seem timid, indifferent, or divided. But the movement of the four fifths is favorable. A goodly share of this is toward prohibition and the Law and Order League.

SUGGESTIONS. — The first suggestion arising from this review is that of a continuing movement among the churches helped, and in part originated by our labors. Nearly all the correspondents answer kindly. Conferences are taking more frequent, decided, and practical action. Several conference committees have labored faithfully and efficiently to quicken the attention of both their brethren and the churches. The yearly inquiry promotes consideration of the subject. Frank pastors reply, “We are learning”; “We are being aroused to attempt practical measures.” The strong utterances of the National Council at Concord were secured by the effort of your committee, and were originally drafted by its secretary. They commend to our churches through our whole country special efforts against intemperance upon the same principles which we have been advocating in this State.

It is plain, secondly, that the Law and Order League is a demand of the emergency, to which the membership of our churches may well make response. No law, whether in statute or constitution, will be more than a scandal to our American citizenship, unless its enforcement be secured: and the enforcement of laws against intoxicating drink needs an array of supporters who have themselves drunk righteous determination, like Cromwell's soldiers, from that pure fount of moral convictions, the Word of God. "Keeping the place clean of liquor"; "driving out the dram-shops"; "drunken man seldom seen": such are the cheers from points in the long line where this new agency has brought the close bayonet charge.

It is plain, thirdly, that our ministry and churches are a mighty power, acting in the circle of efforts in which we are the natural leaders, if we only cast ourselves fearlessly, intelligently, and with proper preparation into the work of turning the feeling of our communities upon this subject. The instruction of the young is one of the ways of effort that are fully in keeping with the nature of our church mission. Is the report to be trusted that comes from some fields, "no temperance effort because no occasion"? Are the children that go from those untainted Edens to meet no tempter when the guides of their youth can no longer lead or shield them? Must they meet him unarmed against the ruin that lurks in his wily invitations and the lie that is in his sneer at the "narrow prejudices" of the pure homes of their childhood? The scene is fresh in mind of a young man of nineteen pressed by an aged admirer of his father to take as hospitality just one glass of nice "temperance wine"; and of how nearly his resolution yielded. Only the strong sentiment, nourished in the temperance societies of his boyhood's play, saved him at that turning point. Careful instruction in class, winning addresses, and temperance reading in the library; the decision cultivated in pledges, the enthusiasm of societies and concerts; altogether they are none too much.

Next in importance are the periodical meetings for general influence. Why should not temperance work enter into our prayer and study as well as mission work? Why should not the temperance evening bring the most attractive of all the social religious meetings? Why should not reporters report there; and old and young learn there, from the pastor's own lips, in progressive lessons, the solid facts, the principles fixed in both moral and physical law, the multiplied branches of practical application, the intimate connection with noble manhood, the necessary condition of all great achievement of well-founded self-respect and of abiding joys? Is the subject threadbare? So are those of righteousness and judgment to come. In a practical experience of nearly ten years of almost monthly meetings of this character, there has never been a lack of subject, and seldom of an increased audience. Only let the temperance meeting be lifted above the line of the sensational. Let it be dignified with a regular place, and built upon a solid and ever-broadening intellectual as well as emotional basis. All the more appropriately for all this may the pledge be there; a church and congregation pledge in a handsome book, in which reforming wanderers may find it pleasant to write their names in the company of the steadfast. Why should not the tempted one be drawn to the warm and lighted room, the inspiring song, and the dignified decision of such a gathering in the atmosphere of divine favor, as well as to the "hall" of some human, transient, and, perhaps, erratic organization?

Omitting, for the present, further suggestion of other methods which a hearty Christian will is sure to discover, is it necessary in view of these for a church to ask, "What can we do?" So plain is the call to activity that the National Council resolved, that, in its opinion, "the signs of the times and the exigencies of Christ's kingdom require that the churches, acting in appropriate methods, be found in the front rank of the leaders in this particular and vital contest for righteousness." Think of the responsibility rolled upon us by the revelations of the census. One in four of all the population of the country above nine years enrolled in the membership of the evangelical churches. For each of these it is safe to say, two more respect our teachings. It is not unreasonable to claim that these churches, once roused to full exertion of their influence, can tone the political action of a substantial majority of the voters upon any moral question. Let their God-given power be thus brought out, and how simplified will be the issue to our trusted leaders in temperance reform! How comparatively easy it will become to secure, sustain, and enforce the legal measures which the completing of the reform will demand!

We are told of a foreign officer of high rank who held a command among our patriots in the Revolution. He knew little of our tactics or language, but in the battle he would discern the danger and the opportunity that indicated the proper movement. He would flash his pointing sword in the right direction and fire the whole little army by his electric cry, "Forwards, brethren, forwards!" The one thing we need as churches in the war against intemperance is to cultivate that Christian quickness that hears the ringing command of our great Captain in the combination of danger and opportunity, and echoes along the line, "Against the special foe that more plainly and surely than almost any other of Satan's auxiliary influences hinders our work, places souls beyond our reach, and endangers our own blood-redeemed ranks, 'Forwards, brethren, forwards!'"

WILBUR JOHNSON, Secretary.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL REPORT FOR 1883.

REV. SEDGEWICK P. WILDER, NORTH BROOKFIELD.

It is doubtless true that facts and figures may often be eloquent; but their eloquence is generally of that ponderous kind which requires, for its due power, great abundance and exactness in the materials employed, and ample time on the part of him who presents them in which to digest and assimilate his facts before drawing his inferences. In the present case there has been failure in both these conditions. The responses to the questions sent out by your committee are not altogether complete, and many of them came in so tardily that the statistical secretary has but just now, at the eleventh hour before the meeting of this Association, been able to report the totals.

Nevertheless, the figures and the general information given are of much interest, and afford some considerations that may be of value and suggestiveness to our Sunday-school workers.

The year has been, on the whole, a prosperous one, marked by an advance along nearly all the lines of effort. There are five hundred and twenty-five church schools and thirty-three branch and mission schools reporting this year, — a gain of nine mission schools and a loss of five church schools. Of these five churches three have given up the Sunday school in whole or in part, and two have not been heard from.

These five hundred and fifty-eight schools report 12,000 officers and teachers, and 94,827 scholars; a total Sunday-school membership of 106,827; a gain of 1,816 over last year.

The average attendance has been 64,295, or a little more than sixty per cent, a loss of nearly two and one half per cent. The suggestion of several superintendents, that this difference is due to the many stormy Sundays of 1883 is probably the true explanation of this seeming decline in regularity of attendance. It will be remembered by some that the first nine Sundays of the year were stormy.

The additions to the churches from two hundred and thirty schools were 1,542, as against two hundred and twenty-nine schools and 1,256 additions last year, — a gain of one school and two hundred and eighty-six members.

The benevolent contributions show an encouraging advance over former years, three hundred and twenty-four schools reporting $28,162.49. Last year two hundred and ninety-one schools reported $23,674.02, — a gain of thirty-three schools and $4,488.47. It is impossible, however, to determine just how much of this increase is due to an actual gain in the Sunday-school offerings, and how much to greater fulness or different methods in the reports.

In regard to the support of the schools, the condition of things is far from satisfactory. Two hundred and eighty schools support themselves by penny collections or in other ways; forty-four are assisted by the church or society, or both; while only twenty-nine are supported directly by the church, nine by the society, and five by church and society, making only forty-three schools out of the five hundred and fifty-eight reporting that are supported by the organized religious body of which they are supposed to form a part. Others are supported by superintendent and teachers, by concert collections, by subscription, in part by a legacy, or "haphazard."

Teachers' meetings are held in ninety-seven schools, and thirteen schools have a week-day Bible class; three schools sustain a normal class, and two a class in Bible history.

The reports concerning methods employed are not full, yet by their variety they emphasize the fact that the question of methods is one that must be worked out by each school for itself, according to its own needs and condition and surroundings. And yet these questions, properly classified and clearly answered, might become of great value as a record of tried and approved experiments along all the different lines of Sunday-school effort, and under a great variety of conditions.

To increase the membership of the schools, some superintendents report a special committee for the purpose, either from the school, the teachers, or the Society of Christian Endeavor. One reports "every teacher a missionary," a most admirable and, beyond question, successful condition of things wherever it exists in fact. Others suggest "cards and rewards" and a "roll of honor for those bringing in new scholars."

To encourage regular attendance, some depend on making the school attractive by means of "interesting general exercises," "the use of the blackboard," etc.; others suggest the value of regular attendance on the part of the teachers, and of visiting the scholars in their homes. Some schools report the attendance every Sunday, with quarterly reports of class attendance and the names of those not absent during the quarter. One reports the names of absentees; several schools offer rewards in one form or another, — papers and cards daily for all present, — or some more valuable reward for attendance during the entire year. Banners and badges for classes having the best attendance are not uncommon. The school of the Third Church of Chicopee seems in some reasonable degree to have solved this question of regularity. Out of twenty classes eight have an attendance of over eighty per cent, four of over ninety per cent, two of ninety-six per cent, and one perfect in attendance. The secret of this may appear in the fact that the average attendance of the teachers is ninety per cent, and, counting substitutes sent by teachers when absent, over ninety-nine per cent; only ten cases of absence without furnishing a substitute having occurred during the entire year. We should like to know the secret behind this secret, — how the teachers in this school were stimulated to this admirable degree of faithfulness.

For promoting the study of the Bible various methods are reported, such as sermons on the lesson, Sunday-evening lectures on the Bible, Bible readings, a weekly Bible-history class, a weekly meeting for Bible study, and a weekly children's meeting. In some schools the review of the lesson and the blackboard exercises are made to bear especially upon this point. The memorizing of Scripture is also encouraged, and rewards are offered for reciting the golden texts perfectly.

Such is the brief summary of our Sunday-school work and methods as drawn from the reports. Yet how little can such statistics portray the real heart and power of this great institution in our State. The faithful, devout study of God's Word by old and young; the earnest prayers that have gone up to heaven from superintendents and teachers and parents for personal strength and guidance, for the conversion and upbuilding of the children, for the presence of the Holy Spirit; the sound, healthful influences set in motion in thousands of hearts to work out their full results of blessing only in eternity, — all this forms a record written indeed in heaven, but not to be estimated in figures nor described by words. Imagination can suggest something of the fair outlines and grand proportions of this work as we recall the changes that have taken place under our own eyes and the blessing that has come to our own hearts during the year, and then remember that all through the hundreds of schools of our State, and the thousands of schools in the whole country, our own studies and labors, our success and our joys, have been repeated. It is a record to inspire hope and courage in every Christian heart. This constantly growing interest in Sunday-school work is one of the most cheering signs of the times. It is not a mere passing enthusiasm for the Sunday school as an institution by itself. It has to do with questions deeper and more vital than those of form and method and outward movement. The organization, local, or State, or national, is but the body, shaped by the living forces within, through which a new spirit of love and zeal in our churches is finding expression in work adapted to the needs of to-day. The glory and the promise of the Sunday school lie in the two grand facts which its growth during the past few years indicates: first, an intense and wide-reaching interest in the study of God's Word; and, second, a new and deepening interest in the religious life and experience of childhood and youth.

Never before has the Bible been to the world and to the Christian heart and life so emphatically the Book of books. Never has such a wealth of able and devout scholarship been employed in investigating and elucidating it. Never have the millions in all the walks of life given to it such full and honest and intelligent consideration, nor turned to it with such strength of faith in its power to solve for them the deepest questions of time and of eternity. I say this deliberately and in the face of what many believe to be an opposite tendency of the times. And for this, if we have any faith in the power of God's truth to maintain itself, we ought to thank God and take courage. There is no danger to the cause of Christ so long as this spirit of honest, fearless search for the truth is abroad in the world. The Bible will win its way by virtue of the spiritual power within it. To doubt this is to doubt its divine character and its adaptation to human needs. New light may modify our theories concerning it and our interpretation of it, for all human theories and interpretations have in them an element of uncertainty and weakness; but the truth will assert itself to the new generations with all the more power because coming in forms and aspects adapted to their new light and new needs.

Add to this fresh devotion to Bible study the constantly deepening interest in the religious welfare of the young, the just emphasis now placed upon early training and early conversion, together with the great success that has already attended the efforts to bring the children into the church of Christ, and you have the two prime elements of promise for the church and for the world in the coming years.

But the work of the Sunday school is still far from perfect, either in plan, or methods, or results. It is yet in the first stages of its development; we have but just made a beginning in comparison with the form and power it is destined to assume at no distant day; and we need to give much earnest thought and study to the new questions that are constantly arising.

I would suggest, in connection with this report, a few from what seem to me the most important present needs of the Sunday-school work.

1. We need, individually, to know more of what others are thinking and doing. For gaining this knowledge Sunday-school institutes and Sunday-school reports are of the greatest value. Concerning the latter, some suggestions may be in place here. There is need of greater fulness and accuracy in the annual reports presented to the Sunday-school committee of this Association. Two things are essential to this result: a very full and wisely considered series of questions, and some simpler and more efficient system of securing prompt and satisfactory answers. Under the present arrangement, or lack of arrangement, the superintendents or pastors are liable to receive call after call for statistics, until they are tired of responding, and may perhaps be excused if they do not give due attention to every demand. First the local conference asks for a few facts; then the Congregational Union puts in its plea for information; to be followed speedily by a request from the Sunday-school committee of the State Association. And finally, perhaps after sundry minor and irresponsible calls of the same kind, the State Sunday-School Union sends in its papers. All the statistics desired should be gathered through some one simple, well-defined, and responsible channel. Let the scribe of the local conference or some committee in each conference, who would agree to be responsible for the returns, have charge of the reports for the schools within the bounds of that conference. Let him call at the proper time, as soon as possible after the first of January, for all the information that will be desired of the superintendents or pastors concerning the work of the preceding year; and let him follow up his call so vigorously as to secure prompt and full responses. From this central source of information the various Sunday-school organizations can draw according to their needs.

2. There is need of a more complete organic relation between the Sunday school and the other departments of church work. The true place and dignity of the Sunday school are not yet everywhere conceded. There is too much disposition to separate it from the church as a subordinate institution by itself. Never speak of the church and Sunday school! It should be understood that there is no possibility of distinction nor contrast between them; that the Sunday school is neither less nor more than the church itself at work along these lines of Bible study and personal instruction and influence. While the children should, as far as possible, all be gathered into the preaching service, they should at the same time be made to feel that the Sunday school is just as truly as this a church service. This sentiment, if it prevailed, would do much to keep our boys from feeling that they have outgrown the Sunday school, and also to draw in a large class of adults who at present stand aloof from it, especially many young men whom we now find it exceedingly difficult to reach in most of our schools. This idea of oneness with the church should be fostered in all possible ways, but especially by right methods in the support of the school and the choice of its officers. If the church elects its own deacons, there is the same reason why it should elect its Sunday-school officers; and when so elected they should regard themselves and be regarded as simply a committee of the church chosen to lead this special work.

The funds needed by the school should come from the same treasury which provides for the other current expenses of the church. If the society provides fuel and lights and janitorship for the mid-week prayer-meeting, there is the same reason why it should provide all things needful for the Sunday-noon Bible services. It is a matter for great regret that so few of the schools in Massachusetts are thus sustained. If any church or parish is absolutely too poor to provide for its own, so that the penny offerings of the school must be used at home, it would still be better for the children to give, not directly to the Sunday school, but into the treasury of the church, that they may thus be made to have a deeper sense of the responsibility and the privilege of giving, not simply to an institution of their own and for their own profit, but for sustaining the church of Christ and carrying on its work. You may say this is a distinction without a difference, a mere sentiment. Be it so: nine tenths of all human life and influence are made up of what some men are pleased to call sentiment. I am aware that these suggestions have been urged upon this Association before; but the importance of the subject demands that they be urged again and again, until our churches take the Sunday school into its proper place.

And if there should be this close organic relation of the Sunday school to other branches of church work, why should it not be fully recognized in the union of our churches in the conferences and the State Association? The prominence now given to Sunday-school work in our annual meetings implies such recognition; but if still greater attention can be given the subject here from year to year, and if the general interests of the work can be cared for by committees of this Association, is it not at least an open question whether any other organization is needed to look after or direct the Congregational Sunday-school work of Massachusetts? The tendency of the times to multiply agencies for Christian effort may accomplish much in the way of arousing enthusiasm and calling out individual activity; but is there not also danger that much harm may come from it in drawing away Christian thought and affection from the church of Christ, which ought to be the centre of all the religious and social life and activities of God's people?

3. There is need of a better system in the choice of lessons. It was a grand idea, out of whatever heart or brain it was born, this idea of a national or international course of lessons; and it has led to marvellous and blessed results. Almost every consideration is in favor of continuing the general arrangement that has stimulated our churches and schools so much. But the time has surely come for the further perfecting of the system in the way of making it more truly a system, in that each day's lesson and each year's course shall grow naturally out of and depend upon the work already done. I am not now arguing for a graded course adapted to the different ages in the school, though that may be possible and desirable, but for a more rational order in the one uniform course; an order which shall be logical rather than chronological, and be based upon some regular progress or relation of ideas, rather than on the somewhat accidental arrangement of the English Bible. I am not now prepared to suggest even the first steps of such a course; but the best minds in the churches should be given to it, and the importance of an advance in this direction should be most strongly urged upon those who have the responsibility of selecting the lessons of the next seven-years' course.

4. As a final suggestion, I would urge the need of a yet deeper sense of the importance of this Sunday-school work, a clearer conception of its true character and sphere, and a more definite and intelligent aim in all our plans and all our labor. For lack of this conception there is much formal, perfunctory work done in the Sunday school which has little spiritual value. For lack of this united aim much strength is wasted in securing merely superficial or mechanical results. Let us appreciate this work in all its greatness; let us clearly understand to what God is calling us; and under the inspiration of that call all minor questions of plan and method will answer themselves as the church moves forward. The spirit of love for Christ, for his truth, and for his little ones, working out his will through the instrumentality of the Sunday school, will fashion for itself a body meet for its use, and shed upon it something of its own divine lustre.

REFORM AND IMPROVEMENT IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL METHODS.

BY REV. FRITZ W. BALDWIN, GRANBY.

THE Sunday school is a great, grand, and growing institution, the field of no small part of the Christian enthusiasm and consecration of this generation, the hope of the church and of the world, never so efficient as it is to-day.

Unquestionably the peculiar function of the Sunday school in the life of the church and its true relation to the church are more clearly apprehended and defined than ever before. But those who are doing most in and for the Sunday school are most conscious of its defects and loudest in their demand for reform. They believe that a thing so good, having in itself such splendid resources and possibilities, ought to be and may be a great deal better.

The true end of the Sunday school is not knowledge, not even the knowledge of the Bible, but power, — power to think and feel and act like a Christian. The Bible is good for nothing save as it ministers to this end. It should be administered only so rapidly and in such quantities as will admit of its being thoroughly assimilated. This brings me to what I regard as a radical defect in our Sunday schools, viz., our lack of scientific method in teaching Bible truth, in studying the Bible itself, and in training the religious nature of the young. We shall be helped, I think, by a comparison of Sunday-school methods with those of our best public schools. There can be no question that the public school understands its aim more clearly and reaches it more successfully than the Sunday school. Its teaching is freer from the fault of overhelping to which I have referred, its discipline is better, and its gradation more scientific.

It is said that the comparison of the Sunday school with the day school does not hold, the aims are so different and the conditions. Perhaps not in every particular. But teaching is teaching in the Sunday school as much as elsewhere; the children are largely the same, and in a large measure the methods must be similar. The Sunday school has a higher aim than the secular school, rather than a different aim. One aims to develop what is in the child by nature. It is a drawing-out process. The other aims first to get a new and divine seed of life planted in the soul, and then to keep it growing until it touches and changes every faculty, and is itself changed from a seed into a full-grown tree. In so far as the Sunday school is a school, in so far as it deals with intellect and will, whatever is good in the secular school will be equally good in the Sunday school. Now I attribute the efficiency of any school to three things, and I believe that whatever advancement is made in the Sunday school must be made along these lines.

1. First, and by far the most important, are the wisdom and tact of its teachers, their fitness for the particular place they hold. More depends upon the teacher than upon anything else, from the very nature of the problem. What is best in education — whether secular or religious — comes by inspiration from the living personality of the teacher. It is not the naked truth, but truth as seen and interpreted in the life and character of another, that moves and helps us, young and old. This is the meaning of that greatest of all truths, the incarnation of the Son of God, and it is a truth that enters as a factor into every educational problem. It was only a Socrates that could make a Plato, and only a Jesus that could make a John. No one will deny that we are more careful in selecting the teachers of our secular schools than of our Sunday schools, though we are by no means as careful as we ought to be in choosing the men and women who shall stand before our children in the public schools. But we do demand of them special qualifications of knowledge, character, and aptness to teach. The Sunday school too often goes a begging for its teachers, rarely demanding any qualification other than willingness and a pious wish to do good. The church exalts the ministry, but pays little attention to that other ministry presented by the teachers of its children. I know and appreciate the consecration of our Sunday-school teachers; and yet I believe great improvement is demanded in this direction. True teachers are like poets, — they are born, not made. Every church has a few such in its membership; no church has too many. It is the business of the church to find them out, to call them out, to consecrate them to their holy work as religiously as it does its preachers and missionaries, and to support them as loyally and as liberally. When we exalt the work of teaching in the Sabbath school to its true place of dignity in the life of the church, we shall fill the office of teacher more worthily, and our teachers will be better equipped. Genuine demand always creates supply in the kingdom of God as well as in the kingdoms of this world. We crowd our Sunday schools with teachers as if our resources were unlimited. Our classes are too small; a reasonably large class is better both for teacher and pupil, as any one who has taught much will readily allow. Iron sharpeneth iron; there is more enthusiasm and glow; the teacher's powers are developed, interest is quickened, and impressions are deepened. There is something of the same power in a large class conducted by a true teacher that there is in a large assembly addressed by a great speaker. The air is full of powers, — divine powers, — waiting to be divinely used.

2. The second characteristic of an efficient school is right methods of instruction, — the knowledge how to present a subject, adapt it to the age and capacity of the pupil, and make it attractive; the knowledge how to help a pupil without harming him. The true teacher will make his own methods; but most teachers will be made true; they will become efficient by the study of methods, — by using good methods and avoiding such as are vicious. There is need of much improvement here. We tolerate, and even cultivate evils, which were long ago banished from our best secular schools. I refer to the manner of conducting recitations and to the custom of furnishing so many ready-made questions and answers. Such a custom must inevitably lower the teacher's ideal and injure the pupil. The art of teaching is not the art of telling all that one knows, so much as of finding out all that the pupil does not know; and the best lesson paper is not one that makes all independent thinking and work unnecessary.

Next to a good teacher is the need of a good text-book to stimulate inquiry and provoke thought. Far better have the simple Bible text than such helps as are coming into common use. With all their helps we are told that our children know less of the Bible than their grandparents knew. By and by we shall rise and make a bonfire of these things in order to save the Bible and the Sunday school.

When better methods of teaching come into vogue, it will be just as easy to govern a Sunday-school class as a class in arithmetic, and when that time arrives, the heart of many a Sunday-school teacher will have lost its heaviest burden. Depth of impression depends upon closeness of attention. Nothing secures this like wise methods of teaching. Improvement in this line will be secured by careful superintendence and by holding up before the teachers a high ideal. Here comes in the influence of the pastor, who can do more than any one else toward making the Sunday school what it ought to be. Here is the justification and the wisdom of State superintendence, which has recently been inaugurated. It cannot fail to raise the standard of Sunday-school instruction, and should receive the hearty co-operation of all the churches.

3. As the third feature of an efficient school I mention its system and gradation of studies and its classification of pupils, so that each may be continually advancing from that which is less difficult to that which is more difficult, that interest and ambition may be kept tense, and the mind fed from year to year with such food as it needs and demands. It is in this direction that most improvement has been made in the public schools during the past twenty years; and so far as I have observed, the Sunday school knows almost nothing of this improvement. It is stranded where the public schools were a generation ago. This is the most serious fault of the International system of lessons. They make it next to impossible to grade and classify a school. The committee fail to give what our schools most need. They commit us to false methods of Bible study. We walk round and round seven years in one body, infants and adults, and then we turn and repeat the process, with slight variations, seven other years. We jump from Paul to John and from Peter to Paul, and then back to Moses and the prophets, utterly regardless of the historic or spiritual unity of the Bible, or of the particular needs of our children. Children remain for years in the same class, and every year's work is largely a repetition of what has gone before. The truth loses its novelty and its power, and the child loses his interest. He can see nothing ahead but repetition of the same old story, and finally closes his Sunday school career with less positive knowledge of the Bible and less growth in Christian character than he might have attained in a single year under wiser methods and a better system. The moral effects of this lack of system are more baneful than the intellectual. It does more to defeat the highest aim of the Sunday school than it does to prevent the acquisition of religious knowledge.

What is the way out of this state of things? Our first necessity is to realize that we are in it. One who ventures to call in question the present system exposes himself, I fear, to the charge of being an idealist, unpractical and cynical, if not stupid. We are dazzled by the size and grandeur of the International system. Its excellences have very deeply impressed us. It seems to stand for Christian unity, — and so it does. But did this system leap forth, Minerva-like, from the heads of its first projectors, full-grown and incapable of improvement? What we demand is enlargement and growth to meet the growing demands of the churches, and that our committee know something about education as well as religion.

It is not the design of this paper to elaborate such a system as is needed. No one mind could do that; nor could it be done at once. We are more conscious of the present slavery than of the contents of coming freedom. We are more familiar with Arabia than with the Promised Land. But we all feel what is wanted, and by feeling after it, we shall find it. Reflection and discussion are sure to open up the way to progress and growth. One thing I think we may be assured of: any system of Bible study worthy the name and worthy of use will have for its basis a thorough and systematic study of the whole Bible, not in its course, perhaps, but in its principles, in its truth. We shall not try to teach the whole Bible to little children, as now; but we shall have different ages studying different portions, and studying it in different ways. Our system will be logical and progressive in its development. With the young it will emphasize the memorizing of the more important and spiritual portions. It will seek to secure great familiarity with the text on the part of all. It will emphasize the spiritual everywhere, and aim primarily at spiritual results. It will provide for the whole system of redemptive truth in its application to the individual and to society. It will aim to deal scientifically with the spiritual faculties of the child, as well as with the objective facts of Revelation. It will be Christocentric, not in doctrine only, but in purpose. All roads will lead to Christ. It will have in view diverse ages and attainments and religious conditions, and each course of study will lead on to something higher. It will give a clear picture of the historic Christ, and a clearer one of the spiritual Christ; and for adults it will deal not only with the Acts of the Apostles in founding the Christian church, but with the history and progress, the hindrances and hopes of the church, as the light and salt of the earth. It will make much more than it now does of good books as a means to its grand aim, putting young and old into direct contact under wise teaching with all that is best in Christian literature as well as with all the best helps to Bible study. A good library will be as necessary to a church as to a minister. The Sunday school will find a place for missions and temperance and reform, and will so treat of these as to make many missionaries and enable the church to bring itself to bear practically and forcibly upon the evils, crimes, and sins of society.

This seems to be a grand scheme for the Sunday school; but the Sunday school is a grand institution. There is no other place where these things can be carried out. They can be carried out in the Bible school of the church, not immediately, perhaps, but successfully. and when they are, the Sunday school will be what God seems to have designed that it should be; it will be fulfilling its glorious mission as the world's school of Christian knowledge and nurture. Better teachers, better methods, a better system: these are the needs of the Sunday school. Teachers can make themselves better by study and improvement of methods, and they can inaugurate a better system by believing in it and showing the demand for it. The more generally that system is used the better, but unless the uniform system is vastly and speedily improved in the direction suggested, many churches will soon assert their independence, and in a smaller way seek to secure better results.

RULES OF THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION.

I. NAME. — This body shall be called THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF MASSACHUSETTS.

II. OBJECT. — Its object is to secure Christian union, fellowship, and intercourse among the ministers and churches; promote spirituality, and to co-operate with one another and with other ecclesiastical bodies in advancing the Redeemer's kingdom.

III. DOCTRINAL BASIS. — This Association agrees to the Declaration of Faith adopted by the National Council of Congregational Churches in the year 1865, the doctrines therein set forth being understood by us to be distinctly those which from the beginning have been embraced by the churches of New England as the doctrines of the gospel.

IV. DENOMINATIONAL BASIS. — Being based exclusively upon Congregational principles, this Association shall under no circumstances exercise ecclesiastical authority over churches or individuals, or interfere with the government or discipline of the churches, or consent to hear appeals, or give advice in ecclesiastical causes of any kind.

V. MEMBERS. — Each District Association of ministers, consenting to the principles above stated, may appoint, annually, two delegates, each to serve two years; and each District Conference of Churches, also so consenting, may appoint, annually, three delegates, who shall be laymen, each to serve two years; which delegates, with the Secretary, Registrar, Treasurer, and the pastor of the church with which the annual session is held, shall compose the General Association. Delegates from corresponding bodies, ministers appointed to preach sermons, and chairmen of committees attending to present reports, shall be honorary members, together with such other persons as the Association may vote to admit.

VI. OFFICERS. — 1. A Secretary, a Registrar, and a Treasurer shall be chosen by ballot, each to serve three years from the close of the session at which the choice was made; to these offices any member of any Congregational church connected with this body shall be eligible.

2. A Moderator and an Assistant Registrar shall be chosen by ballot from the members at each session to serve during that session.

3. The Secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Association, collect the statistics of ministers and churches, and have charge of the printing thereof; distribute the publications of the Association, and preserve, for the permanent use of the Association, copies of all its publications.

4. The Registrar shall make the records of each meeting, and preserve them as the permanent property of the Association; to whom the Assistant Registrar shall render his aid. He shall seasonably notify the time and place of each annual session.

5. The Treasurer shall receive all money raised for the use of the Association, disburse the same as directed, and present as annual report, to be audited as the Association may direct.

6. The Secretary, Registrar, and Treasurer shall be ex-officio members of the Association, and be the Committee of Publication, unless another be chosen. Their travelling expenses in attending the several sessions shall be paid by the Association.

VII. QUORUM. — Twenty-five delegates shall constitute a quorum.

VIII. ANNUAL MEETING. — The annual meeting shall be held on the third Tuesday of June, at four o'clock P. M. ( or at some other more convenient hour ), at such place as shall have been duly designated.

IX. HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY. — The Massachusetts Home Missionary Society may annually elect two delegates to be members of this body, while it consents that this body may nominate two persons for membership in the Executive Committee of that society.

The two persons thus nominated shall be from the membership of the Association at the time, and shall not be eligible for nomination for more than two years in succession, and shall make report concerning the work of the society at the next meeting of the Association.

X. CORRESPONDENCE. — Official fraternal intercourse with the several State Congregational organizations, and with other denominations, is sufficiently had by the representation of this body in the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States.

XI. ORGANIZATION. — The pastor of the church of the place of meeting, or the Secretary, may call the Association to order and preside in the meeting until it be properly organized. The certificates of the delegates present shall be presented, only the names of members being read by the Registrar. The Association shall then be organized by the choice of a Moderator and an Assistant Registrar, and the Moderator shall open the session with prayer. A Committee on Credentials shall then be appointed, to whom all certificates shall be referred.

XII. COMMITTEES. — 1. The committees for the session are these:

(1.) A Committee on Credentials, who shall be appointed by the Moderator immediately after the opening of the session.

(2.) A Committee on Nominations, to nominate the following and any other committees referred to them: —

(3.) A Committee of Arrangements, consisting of three, of which the pastor or some member of the church shall be one, to prepare the business of the session; and no business shall be introduced during the session but through the hands and with the approbation of the committee; but if said committee decline presenting any item of business proposed by any member, he shall have the privilege of appeal to the Association.

2. To act after the adjournment: —

(1.) A Provisional Committee of five, of whom the Secretary or Registrar shall be one, to arrange the schedule for the next annual meeting; to select a preacher for the associational sermon, and persons to prepare such written papers as they shall deem desirable.

(2.) A State Committee on the Work of the Churches, who shall make an annual report to this body upon the work of the churches and state of religion, unless otherwise ordered at any session.

The State Committee on the Work of the Churches shall consist of the Secretary, the Registrar, the chairmen of the Committees of Local Conferences, and twenty-one members at large, — to be so classified that seven shall be elected each year for a term of three years.

(3.) A Committee to audit the Accounts, who shall report the state of the treasury and the sum in their opinion necessary to be paid the next year by the churches of the several conferences connected with this body.

XIII. EXERCISES. — The time of the annual session shall be occupied by devotional services, the consideration of the state of religion, the wants and methods of home evangelization, addresses, and discussions of practical religious interest, and attention to the objects of benevolent enterprise sustained by the churches.

XIV. SPECIAL ORDERS. — 1. At the opening of the session, on the mornings of Wednesday and Thursday, the Moderator shall take the chair at the hour to which the Association stands adjourned; shall immediately call the members to order; shall direct the roll to be called; shall open the meeting with prayer, and cause the minutes of the preceding day to be read; and the session of each day shall be closed with prayer.

2. The associational sermon and Lord's Supper shall be assigned to Tuesday evening. Wednesday evening shall be devoted to exercises having special reference to the people of the place of meeting, or a sermon may be preached, the preacher to be selected by the Provisional Committee. One session of the Association shall be devoted to the cause of Home Missions.

3. Each annual meeting shall be closed with a psalm or hymn and prayer.

XV. PLACE OF MEETING. — Previously to the close of each meeting, the General Association shall specify a place for meeting the next year; and the church of the place of meeting selected is requested to make preparations to celebrate the Lord's Supper in the course of the service. The Lord's Supper shall be administered generally without remarks.

XVI. RULES OF ORDER. — 1. Every motion, on being seconded, shall, if requested by the Moderator or any two members, be reduced to writing; and no motion shall be opened to discussion until it be seconded.

2. The Moderator may speak to points of order in preference to other members, rising from his seat for that purpose, and shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the house by any two members; but he may not speak to the merits of the question without leaving the chair and placing some other member in it to preside while he speaks.

3. No member shall speak more than twice on the same question without leave of the Association.

4. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received except for adjournment, laying on the table, amendment, postponement, commitment, or the previous question. The previous question is this: Shall the main question be now put? and the effect of adopting it shall be to put an end to debate, and to bring the Association to a direct vote upon the amendments, if any are pending, and then upon the main question proper.

5. If a question under debate contain several parts, any member may have it divided and a question taken on each part.

6. Every member when speaking shall address himself to the Chair, and shall be subject to no needless interruption. If he act disorderly, it shall be the duty of the Moderator and the privilege of other members to call him to order.

XVII. AMENDMENTS. — 1. Any of the above rules, except the first five, may be amended at any annual session by a two-thirds vote, the proposed amendment having been submitted in writing on the day previous to that of the action.

2. Amendments to either of the first five articles shall not be made except upon their proposals at the annual meeting next prior to that of action, and after notice has been sent to the several associations and conferences, and by a two-thirds vote.

STATISTICS OF THE CHURCHES.

EXPLANATIONS.

THE tables which follow comprise:—

1. The list of Conferences, with the times of meeting and names of officers.
2. The statistics of pastoral supply, membership, additions, removals, baptisms, Sabbath schools, and families; and those of charities and expenses, as reported to the State Committee on the Work of the Churches, Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Secretary.
3. The statistics of ministers, list of ordinations, installations, dismissals, and deaths.

The tables of the second part contain the names of all the Congregational churches in Massachusetts, the towns and cities being arranged alphabetically; churches in each town according to age; and of each church, (1) its town; (2) its name (if it have a peculiar one), which is always followed by "ch."; (3) its locality in the town, when that locality has a name distinct from the town. When the name of a church follows the name of a locality subordinate to the town, it shows that the church has a distinct number in that subdivision of the town, or it is evidently needed for clearness.

The column specifying ministers is corrected up to the time of printing. Church members and families are reported as numbered on the morning of Jan. 1, 1884. Admissions, removals, and baptisms cover the year 1883. "Absent" are not additional to "males," "females," and "total," but included in them. "Sabbath school" includes total membership of teachers and scholars Jan. 1, 1884, or when the school is in operation (if not at that date), covering "branch schools" and "mission schools," so far as maintained by the reporting church.

The months and days in the dates of the organization of churches are omitted. They will be found in the publication of 1873, those of churches since organized being given in the list of new churches each year.

"Ordained" denotes the date on which the person was originally set apart to the ministry "by the laying-on of hands." "Installed" denotes the date of his present pastorate. The letter "p" denotes installed pastors; all others are serving without installation.

In no instance is the report of any church in these statistics copied from the returns of previous years. But there is included in the totals of members a careful estimate of the numbers in any unreporting church (except in cases where no report has been had for two years), and also any missing items of "absent,"—which are assumed to be, in each case, equivalent to the average.

Blanks in any column of figures are never equivalent to "none," but mean "no report"; but blanks in the column of ministers do mean that the church has no pastor or acting pastor, and the blank is left for the convenience of those who note changes.

All post-office addresses are to be found in the "List of Ministers," and not in the tables.

NOTE. — The “year” means what changes were comprised in the twelve months preceding January 1 of the year mentioned, except that the columns under “Ministers” comprise the twelve months ending with the time of closing the “copy” for printing the Minutes, usually reckoned at June 30. The table was begun in 1866, all preceding years now given being compiled from past Minutes, — the number of churches in some years varying from the Minutes as they were to what they should have been.

The changes in list of churches, ordinations, installations, etc., for the past year, condensed in the above table, are given in detail in their proper place.

* Prior to 1876, “acting pastors” are included in “others” in columns of deaths of ministers.
† This decrease due in part to the larger number of churches failing to report this year.

In the above table, the columns of "Additions," "Removals," "Baptisms," "Sabbath School Average," and "Benevolent Contributions" cover the twelve months next preceding January 1 of the year mentioned in a given line. The pastoral supply (only) was regularly corrected to a date some months later than January 1 (usually July), but this does not change the general accuracy in any case. The number of churches "Vacant" includes all churches supplied by licentiates, members, and of Sabbath schools was enumerated. The number of churches "Vacant" includes all churches supplied by licentiates, members, or ministers of other denominations. Totals are given in some cases by the churches, instead of detailed reports, which accounts for the totals given above. In the Sunday School column the number reported by 478 schools is given without making an estimate for the non-reporting churches. Absentees prior to 1855 doubtless stated too low by defective returns.

NAMES OF MINISTERS

IN THE PRECEDING TABLES, IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER, WITH THE POST-OFFICE ADDRESS OF EACH, AND WITH THE NUMBERS OF THE PAGES IN WHICH EACH NAME OCCURS IN THE STATISTICS.

THIS list gives the names of pastors, or acting pastors, and members of Associations who have been ordained.

Persons who are in pastoral service, but who are not members of any Association in this State, are designated by a star (*). A few others, who are not supplying churches, and are not members of Associations, are named by their own wish.

In this list the first column of figures gives the page which denotes membership in an Association of Ministers.

The second column of figures in this list gives the page in which a person will be found to be in pastoral service. A blank in either case signifies,—in the former, that one is not a member of any Association in this State; in the latter, that he is not reported to be in pastoral service in this State.

Where two pages are mentioned in the first column of figures, it shows that the person is a member of two Associations.

The post-office addresses often differ from the foregoing pages.

INTEMPERANCE. — The Committee on Intemperance reported through Rev. Wilbur Johnson.

Following the report, an address on the Relation of the Church to the Work of Temperance was given by Mrs. Mary H. Hunt, of Hyde Park.

After prayer by Rev. Lyman H. Blake, the Association took a recess to 7.45 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

Promptly at 7.45 o'clock, the Association assembled, and was led in devotions by Rev. John C. Staples and Rev. Ezra H. Byington. Rev. Joseph T. Duryea preached from the text, Mark iii. 14; and following the sermon the Lord's Supper was celebrated, Rev. Daniel L. Furber and Rev. Evarts Scudder officiating. After the usual collection and the benediction, the Association adjourned to Wednesday morning, 8.30 o'clock.

---

MORNING SESSION.

BUSINESS. — The Association reassembled at 8.30 A. M., and was led in prayer by Rev. Charles B. Rice. The roll of members was presented, and the records of yesterday were read and approved. The committee appointed last year, to whom was referred the consideration of a proposed change in Article V. of the Constitution, reported through Rev. George M. Boynton, that such change seemed undesirable at present, and that the subject should be referred to a committee for further consideration, or indefinitely postponed; the committee preferring that the Association should decide which action should be taken. The report was accepted, and the matter indefinitely postponed.

The committee to whom last year was referred the matter of statistics reported through Rev. Marshall M. Cutter. Voted that the report be laid upon the table for the present.

The secretary proposed several amendments to Article XII., Sect. 2, to be acted upon Thursday morning.

DEVOTIONAL SERVICE. — From nine to ten o'clock a devotional service was led by Rev. Jonathan Edwards.

WORK OF THE CHURCHES. — The report of the work of the churches was then presented by Rev. Daniel P. Noyes. Following this report, the subject, "Work Among the Children and Youth," was presented for discussion: —

First. The Work of the Pastor. Opened by Rev. Theodore J. Holmes. Short addresses followed by Rev. George F. Stanton, Rev. Lyman H. Blake, Rev. Samuel E. Evans, Rev. Avery S. Walker, Rev. Henry M. Grant, Rev. Charles M. Southgate, and Rev. John W. Dodge.

Second. The Work of Church Members. Opened by Samuel B. Capen, Esq. Brief addresses also were made by Dea. William Hyde, Dea. Sidney E. Bridgman, Rev. Leonard S. Parker, Bros. H. B. Smith and William Gillespie.

Third. The Work of the Young People for Themselves. Opened by Rev. Frank E. Clark. Further discussed by Rev. Stedman W. Hanks and Rev. William De Loss Love.

At this point, Dea. Samuel A. Chapin, of the First Congregational Church of San Francisco, was introduced, and addressed the Association.

MEMORIALS. — A memorial was presented from the Hampden Conference, by Rev. Luther H. Cone, that the Association consider its present system of finance with a view to a better economy therein.

William A. Magill read a communication from Hampshire East Conference of similar purport to the memorial.

On motion of Rev. Lyman H. Blake, it was voted that a committee of five be appointed to consider the whole subject and in connection with it whether some plan cannot be devised to bring the Association into closer fellowship with the churches, and to report at the next meeting of the Association.

Rev. William R. Eastman moved that this committee of five also consider the expediency of requesting the churches to pay their contributions for the expenses of the Association and National Council directly to the treasury of the General Association.

At 12.30 the Association took a recess until 2 P. M.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

BUSINESS. — The Association met in the Trinitarian Church at two o'clock. Prayer was offered by Rev. Allen Hazen. The secretary then presented the following resolutions from the State Committee on the Work of the Churches, each of which was unanimously adopted: —

1. ORGANIZATIONS OF YOUNG PEOPLE AND OTHERS.

Resolved, That the Association recognizes with thankfulness to God, the enthusiasm now moving many of the churches in behalf of the young and in behalf of all who are still out of the visible family of Christ, and commends a simple form of organization to further their entrance on the Christian life and fellowship as supplying a needed and valuable addition to the ancient methods of the congregational system, and it hopes that such may soon be found in all the churches of the State.

2. THE RELIGIOUS CENSUS AND VISITATION.

Resolved, That this Association exhorts the churches to push forward and complete the movement for a religious census and systematic visitation, with particular reference to the neglecting and the foreign-born populations.

3. SUBJECT FOR WEDNESDAY MORNING NEXT YEAR.

Resolved, That the Association instructs the State Committee to present in their next annual report the subject of the Existing Usages in Public Worship. The Association also requests of the Provisional Committee of next year, opportunity for the adequate consideration of this theme in the Wednesday-morning session.

COMMITTEES. — The nominating committee reported the following list of committees which were chosen: —

Auditing Committee. — Bro. Arthur W. Tufts, Bro. Edward L. Tead, Bro. John W. Field.

Committee on Memorials. — Rev. Marshall M. Cutter, Rev. Luther H. Cone, Rev. Charles M. Lamson, Dea. William Hyde, Dea. Sidney E. Bridgman.

As members of the Executive Committee of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, — Rev. Perez D. Cowan, Bro. Alfred C. Vinton.

For State Committee on the Work of the Churches, as members at large. — Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Rev. William Barrows, Rev. Joshua Coit, Rev. S. Leroy Blake, Rev. Theodore J. Holmes, Bro. Henry H. Fitch, Bro. Charles A. Richardson. making the full committee of 1885-6 as follows: —

Chairmen of committees of local conferences. — Andover, William H. Lathrop; Barnstable, Rev. John W. Dodge; Berkshire North, Rev. Albert C. Sewall; Berkshire South, Rev. Charles W. Mallory; Brookfield, Rev. Willard D. Brown; Essex North, Rev. Augustus C. Swain; Essex South, Rev. T. Frank Waters; Franklin, Rev. Henry C. Alvord; Hampden, Rev. Ezra H. Byington; Hampshire, Sidney E. Bridgman; Hampshire East, Rev. George E. Fisher; Mendon, Rev. Rufus K. Harlow; Middlesex South, Rev. George M. Adams; Middlesex Union, Rev. D. Augustine Newton; Norfolk, Rev. Robert W. Haskins; Old Colony, Rev. Augustus H. Fuller; Pilgrim, Rev. Ebenezer Alden; Suffolk North, Rev. Silas

P. Cook; Suffolk South, Rev. Edward N. Packard; Suffolk West, S. Brainard Pratt; Taunton, Rev. Heman P. De Forest; Woburn, Rev. William J. Batt; Worcester Central, Rev. Israel Ainsworth; Worcester North, Rev. Davis Foster; Worcester South, Rev. John R. Thurston.

Members at large until 1886. — Revs. DeWitt S. Clark, John L. Ewell, John C. Labaree, George E. Fisher, Bros. Henry M. Moore, George W. W. Dove, and Edward L. Tead.

Until 1887. — Revs. Henry A. Stimson, Edward N. Packard, Frank G. Clark, M. Angelo Dougherty, John W. Harding, Benjamin A. Robie, and Bro. George Beal.

Until 1888. — Revs. Daniel P. Noyes, Joshua Coit, S. Leroy Blake, Theodore J. Holmes, Bros. Henry H. Fitch, and Charles A. Richardson.

Members ex-officio. — The Committee on Intemperance, the Committee on Sunday School Work, the secretary and registrar of the Association.

STATISTICS. — On motion of Rev. John L. Ewell, it was voted that the report of the Committee on Statistics laid upon the table this morning, be taken up, and the following recommendations were unanimously adopted: —

First. That no changes in the form of the statistics should be made which would interfere with those published in the Year Book, until after such changes shall have been recommended by the National Council; and, further, that the statistical questions for the use of the General Association should always include those which are requested for the Year Book, and that these shall be distinguished from questions of local interest.

Second. As it is an important item to know the ratio of home expenses to charities, and as a clear understanding of what should be placed under each head will be helpful, it is recommended that the State Committee on the Work of the Churches be requested to suggest rules which will define the line between these two forms of Christian service, and lead to uniformity in the classification of items.

Third. They recommend that the churches continue to report on the first day of January of each year the essential facts of the preceding year.

Fourth. They recommend that the following questions be adopted for the purpose of securing intelligence concerning the Sunday school work: —

1. The name and address of the Sunday school superintendent.
2. The method of election; whether by the church, the school, or by the action of both.
3. The average attendance for the year.
4. The amount contributed by the school for benevolence during the year.
5. The percentage of the scholars attending church.
6. The number added to the church from the Sunday school during the year.
7. Method of providing for the expenses of the school.

At 2.30 p. m., an address was given by Rev. N. George Clark, Foreign Secretary, in recognition of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the A. B. C. F. M.

At 3 P. M. the Association gave place to the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Home Missionary Society, and took a recess until 7.45 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening service was conducted by Rev. Matthew C. Julien, pastor of the church, and addresses were given by Rev. Avery S. Walker, on Public Worship; Rev. George F. Stanton, on True Equipment; Rev. E. H. Byington, on Spiritual Power dependent on Spiritual Life; Rev. Robert R. Meredith, on the Neglecters and Neglected in our Cities. After benediction the Association adjourned to Thursday morning at 8.30 P. M, THURSDAY — THIRD DAY.

---

MORNING SESSION.

The Association met at 8.30 A. M., and prayer was offered by Rev. William De Loss Love.

BUSINESS. — The roll was called, and the minutes of yesterday were revised and approved. In accordance with notice given yesterday, the following amendments to the constitution were presented and adopted: —

In Art. XII., Sect. 2, to add the following sub-sections: —

(4.) — A Committee on Intemperance, to consist of five members, one for each of the five groups into which the Conferences of the State at any time may be divided.

(5.) — A Committee on Sunday School Work, to consist of six members, two to be chosen each year, for a term of three years.

In Article XII., Sect. 2, Sub-section 2, to insert the word “corresponding” before the word “committees,” and to insert after the word “conferences” the words “the Committee on Intemperance and the Committee on Sunday School Work.”

Rev. Charles B. Rice moved that the Association recommend that each church contribute, for the expenses of the National Council and the Association, an amount equal to four (4) cents per resident member. Voted.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK. — After prayer by Rev. Henry M. Dexter, the statistical report was presented by Dea. Sidney E. Bridgman. This was followed by addresses by Rev. Charles M. Southgate upon the topic, The Salvation of Children; and by Bro. Marshall C. Hazard, upon the theme of Missionary Sunday School Work.

At 11 A. M., the Association voted a recess until 2 P. M., to accept the invitation of the Martha's Vineyard Steamboat Company to enjoy a sail down the harbor.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 2.15 P. M. the Association met in the church home of the Trinitarian Church.

On motion by Rev. Charles B. Rice, it was Voted to suspend Art. XV. of the Constitution, leaving the choice of place of the next meeting of the Association to the moderator and other officers of the Association.

The Committee on Nominations submitted the following list of committees which were confirmed: —

On Intemperance.

For Andover, Essex North, Essex South, Middlesex Union, and Woburn Conferences, Rev. John D. Kingsbury.

For Suffolk North, Suffolk South, Suffolk West, Middlesex South, and Pilgrim Conferences, Rev. Albert H. Plumb.

For Mendon, Taunton, Norfolk, Old Colony, and Barnstable Conferences, Rev. Wilbur Johnson.

For Worcester Central, Worcester South, Worcester North, Franklin, and Brookfield Conferences, Rev. Joseph F. Gaylord.

For Berkshire North, Berkshire South, Hampden, Hampshire, and Hampshire East Conferences, Rev. Charles W. Mallory.

On Sunday School Work.

For one year, — Rev. Smith Baker, Bro. George Beal.

For two years, — Rev. Robert R. Meredith, Bro. Charles Hutchins.

For three years, — Rev. Albert E. Duuning, Bro. Sidney E. Bridgman.

The report of the treasurer with that of the auditors was presented and accepted.

The following resolution, presented by Rev. George M. Boynton, was unanimously adopted: —

That to the pastors of the North and Trinitarian churches of New Bedford for fraternal welcome and paternal thoughtfulness; to the families of these churches for open homes and hearts, for lavish provision for our spiritual and material comfort and enjoyment, — the Association desires to express its hearty thanks. It would gratefully recognize, also, such courtesies as have been received from the Old Colony Railroad and the Martha's Vineyard Steamboat Company.

Rev. John W. Dodge introduced the following resolution, which was passed : —

Resolved, That the Association recognizes the fidelity, economy, and efficiency of the management of the Board of Ministerial Aid, and exhorts the churches to give this cause a large place in their sympathies and contributions; and further requests that the Board should make such a report as seems in its judgment advisable, to the Association each year.

The moderator addressed the Association, and was followed by Rev. Matthew C. Julien, pastor of the Trinitarian Church.

After the reading of the minutes and singing, prayer was offered by Rev. Ephraim W. Allen, and at 3 P. M. the Association adjourned.

THE TWENTIETH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE STATE COMMITTEE ON THE WORK OF THE CHURCHES.

FOR fifteen of the twenty years of the existence of this committee it has been a part of its duty to lay before the Association a summary of the reports which it gathers from the conferences. Every year certain topics have made themselves especially prominent. Last year, besides the general narrative, special reports were given upon The Work of the Churches in Cities and Large Towns, and on The Work in Rural Districts and in Sunday Schools. Papers on these topics appear in the Minutes.

This year a similar prominence is assigned to The Work of the Churches in behalf of Children and Youth. To this the greater part of this morning's service is devoted. It will be presented by three brethren who have accepted this responsibility.

The general report of the year, therefore, has nothing upon this topic, but is mostly confined to two matters, Methods of Church Work,* and Revivals, together with a few particulars of a more general character.

“NOTHING TO SPEAK OF.”

It is of course expected that, from many of the churches, the narratives of any one year will appear to be but a repetition of an old story. But always, from some of the conferences, come to us forms of this old story which are deeply significant; telling the intrinsic greatness of the one great work, and of the steadfastness with which it is prosecuted. Of this kind, the narrative from Essex North is this year a specimen. We are here told that everywhere throughout the conference pastor and people are working in harmony. Then we hear that the first church on the list has been blessed with a spiritual quickening, adding thirteen new members. The next finds its “out-work” unusually prosperous, and labors have been vigorously bestowed on the cause of temperance and upon the children and young people. Then we hear of congregations well sustained; larger than ever; and of young people more active and better organized. Again, there has been religious interest with conversions; still again we read of renewed vigor and success; of a sustained prosperity, notwithstanding the failing strength of an aged pastor; and of the gift of tens of thousands of dollars for a charitable object. One of the very feeblest of the churches reports no less than thirteen additions “without special efforts.” From the same church we hear of a good deal wisely done for the young, without new organization and by mere fidelity in old ways. Then comes a story about a church “in a revived state without a revival”; of six persons confessing Christ and others coming; of "renewed consecration"; of "laboring directly for the salvation of souls"; of a dropping of the International Course of Lessons by a certain church, and three months given to systematic theology; another three months to a study of the agreement of the Bible account of creation with the teachings of science; and then three months more to a "study of church history with particular reference to the development of Christian doctrine." The same church has received twelve by confession and twelve by letter during the year. And so almost every page of this narrative speaks to our hearts of the abiding value of the Gospel, and of the unfailing efficacy of earnest Christian work. The church here stands before us, a tree that bears twelve manner of fruit and yields it every month. It would be altogether safe to take a narrative such as this, as representing the unobtrusive but effective labors of a large proportion of all the churches. "Nothing to speak of," we are often told, is the summing up of such histories; and yet these very histories record the labors which hold the world together.

AN EXAMPLE FROM THE HILL COUNTRY.

One pastor, the Rev. T. A. Merrill, of Chesterfield, Hampshire County, has indeed a story, fortunately rare in the ordinarily uneventful course of ministerial country life. Early in the morning of the 26th of August last, the family were roused from sound sleep by the roaring of flames, just ready to burst into their rooms. The whole mass of buildings, house, barn, carriage-house, and wood-shed, were on fire, and the wind was high. "The flames were leaping upon us," he says, "like hungry tigers; and scarcely were we able to get out of our chambers in our night clothing." The pastor lost, in common with the rest of the household, his entire wardrobe, including even his watch; also his carriage and sleigh, the harness, robes, etc., the hay and wood for the winter's use, all furniture and books, with almost all his manuscript sermons, preached during a ministry of twenty-seven years. All escaped with their lives, and the pastor is thankful. But he found himself compelled to take his family far from the scene of this terrible shock, for change and rest; and this separation brings to an end his three-years' labor with the church.

The house, since the year 1835, had been a centre of interest to the people, as their parish home. When we remember that the town has, for thirty years, been losing many of its most enterprising people, and is reduced fifty per cent in population (which now numbers only seven hundred and fifty), we see that the pecuniary loss ($2,000) must have proved very burdensome. Chesterfield is in the "hill country," seven miles from a railroad station.

But while the timbers of the old parsonage were still smoking, the people, led on by their minister, resolved to rebuild at once. Fifteen hundred dollars were pedged among themselves, $600 more was received from neighbors and friends. The year before, they had spent $1,100 on their meeting-house, in making it comfortable and attractive. It becomes the General Association to note this example of self-denial and energy, as illustrating the value of the small country churches which are so often appealing to our Christian sympathy. No one will be surprised to learn that this church has three out-stations, where in the summer and fall it has maintained preaching services, which have been limited, however, the last year, to one. Here an evident blessing has followed the faithful labors of their minister. Such feeble churches and their faithful pastors are to be counted among our treasures and ornaments.

FOOD FOR REFLECTION.

There is another part of the State toward which our thoughts must always turn with peculiar interest, the region surrounding the old first seat of the Pilgrim Colony. These ancient communities are among those that have suffered most from a continual emigration, — which explains the smallness of its churches. The Pilgrim Conference counts this year only 1 church with over 100 members, 2 churches with 90-100, 1 church with 80-90, 2 churches with 70-80, 3 churches with 50-60, 4 churches with 40-50, 1 church with 30-40.

Of thirteen churches reporting the number of their families, 1 has 300 families, 1 has 100, 1 has 80-90, 2 have 70-80, 1 has 60, 3 have 50-60, 2 have 40-50, 1 has 30-40, 1 has 20-30.

One cannot help suspecting, on reviewing this meagre list, that the number of families contributing to church support, not the number forming the field of responsible care, is here counted. Take it either way, it presses home the inquiry whether all has been done for these communities that is incumbent upon us. Perhaps the recent experience of the Old Colony Conference, given further on, affords a possible answer to such questions.

A GOOD RECORD WELL MADE.

The Middlesex South conference received, at the April meeting, from its Committee on the Work of the Churches, a thoroughly studied and instructive report. This valuable paper presented various comparisons of the year 1884 with the year preceding; showing the net gains and losses; the churches that received large additions; explanations of losses that were apparent, but not real; discrepancies due to revision; gains that were really secured, but had not been counted; and manifold facts of significance for qualification and interpretation. Our attention is also drawn to a measure that was adopted by this conference in October, "dividing the churches into four groups, for the purpose of special, mutual efforts to awaken religious interest." "In some of these groups the pastors were able to visit the neighboring churches in a systematic way; preaching, on week-day evenings, with a marked plainness and pungency. They found cordial welcome wherever they went, and the churches visited were blessed by this special ministry." Occasional neighborhood conferences of churches have also been useful.

Marks of a more thorough organization for church work appear in some of the churches. For example, in one of them, ten ladies have been engaged as "visitors," each with her own group of families, so that the entire field is brought under watchful supervision; strangers are found and reported; soon after their arrival, their acquaintance is sought and improved; cases of sickness are promptly made known, and, in many ways, the pastor receives timely help. A survey of the history of these churches for the year leaves us with the impression that their present condition is full of encouragement. The conference itself has evidently awakened to its duty of grappling systematically with the spiritual problem of its whole field. When the feeling of the communion of the churches in their work has so taken possession of the public mind that all the conferences shall be doing this, we shall have indeed entered on a new time.

A very full and in all respects admirable report comes to us from the Suffolk South conference. It is difficult to leave out the picture of energy and devotion, of prosperity and abundance of good works, here presented. But all the world may be held to know of it, and so we pass it by for the present. We had prepared an abstract of the narrative furnished from another very different region, Franklin County, but omit it; as we likewise do an extended specification of NEW METHODS that have been found to be useful the past year. A time will come, we hope, when justice can be done to these and other portions of the State, and to the inventiveness and flexibility of the churches in addressing themselves to the changing aspects of their work. But we do not feel at liberty to neglect the accounts sent us of

REVIVALS. — THEIR BEGINNINGS, METHODS, AND RESULTS.

Revivals appear to have been more frequent this year than last, and the record seems to us worthy of careful study. In particular, we invite attention to the examples of fellowship in this kind of work; the instances, also, of deliberate faith and effort, and of the blessing bestowed on the labors of those who devote themselves especially to it.

In Yarmouth, the pastor was assisted about one week in special revival meetings by Rev. S. S. Nickerson of the Sailors' Bethel, Boston. A quiet interest among the young followed, with several conversions. Fifteen have been received to the church. A meeting is held on Tuesday evening for a study of the "Pilgrim's Progress," and instruction in Christian experience.

From Berkshire North, we hear of revivals in Pittsfield First, and in New Lebanon, N. Y., the former outdating the week of prayer, and still continuing; the latter originating in the week of prayer. Increased accessions to both churches have occurred, and more are looked for. In Pittsfield, union meetings of different denominations and the labors of an evangelist furthered the work; in New Lebanon, special meetings under the charge of an old pastor. Notably increasing audiences in North Adams and Pittsfield First now listen to the Gospel. Spacious galleries in the house of the latter, long unused, are now upholstered and occupied, and in that of the former there is a lack of room. Windsor shows a revival in another way, the church while without a pastor or other supply carrying forward without break the regular services of the sanctuary. The larger accessions to the churches of this conference are due to revivals, and are quite extensively from young people and the Sunday school.

From Hampshire conference, Chesterfield sends some account of a work of grace which failed last year, it appears, of public report. Fourteen persons have been welcomed by this small but energetic church, nearly all young people, who became interested last year. "This work began in the winter of 1883, or even as far back as the midsummer of 1882, and went on in connection with the usual prayer-meeting and Sunday-school services. No 'special meetings' were held, but every week the young people and the children gathered in the parsonage to meet their minister. It was in that midsummer that sixty-three boys and girls from the poorer families of New York City found pleasant and happy homes in different parts of the town. They came looking pale and sickly and eager. After their stay of two or three weeks among the wild flowers and sweetly scented hay-fields, with the kind friends who offered them gratuitously and abundantly whatever these hills in summer time afford, they left for their city dwellings with rosy cheeks and grateful hearts. Great good came to these boys and girls. A greater blessing came to this people. It was delightful to see these hard-working souls so deeply interested in the poor city children. Our Lord's work is manifold. One part leads on to another, and this to another still."

In the Worcester South conference, Milbury First reports a gain of twenty-eight members, due to a revival. This began in the earnest desires and increased prayers of the church. It was developed by revival meetings through five weeks, led by an evangelist. Among those received, all ages were represented, but the larger part were young people, full half under twenty, and a goodly company between eight and fourteen. "The church has a tender interest in these lambs of the flock, and we look upon their company as one of the signs of the times, and believe the church of the future is to be replenished more and more from the ranks of the little ones." Milbury Second reports a gain of nineteen. A growing seriousness in the winter was developed by meetings held in March, by an evangelist, with good results. Northbridge Centre has also been blessed. It came early in 1884 without warning, but a few had been long praying for it. Persons rose and asked for prayers. The church was greatly quickened. There was no outside help or special methods, but the interest deepened. The church was harmonized. New life was infused into both its spiritual and temporal affairs, long-needed repairs were made to its meeting-house, and its membership was increased nearly one third. The interest did not decline in the fall. Early in the winter of 1884-5, the church made a new and formal rededication of itself. The Week of Prayer became four weeks. The next manifest means of promoting this work has been a Saturday-evening meeting, at which it is expected that all, or nearly all, shall take a part. In Sutton the week of prayer was attended with a manifest quickening among believers and the impenitent. The interest has continned, deepened and widened. Ladies have met weekly for prayer, and have labored among Christians and others. New attendants came to meetings, some asking for the way of life. Webster has gained thirty-six, with an increase in attendance and general interest.

In the Worcester North conference the Rollstone church, of Fitchburg, has enjoyed a blessed and powerful revival. The Calvinistic church, in the same city, reports a revival beginning with the year, the "usual methods" being followed, with "results glorious so far." "The scene Jan. 18," says the pastor, "was beyond description." There is a large number of hopeful conversions, and many backsliders have been restored.

The interest in Phillipston was quite good during the winter, resulting in several conversions. Fourteen were received to the church. Athol also reports a good degree of interest; twelve were admitted to the communion. In the Worcester Central conference, many of the churches report an increased religious interest, and quite a number have had revivals. Rutland reports the real beginnings as far away in the past, but especially visible in the meetings of January, "when we waited upon God for his baptism of the Holy Ghost." No evangelist has been employed, but the church has had the sympathy and the prayers of neighboring churches and pastors, with frequent assistance as opportunity has offered. "The Spirit taught us last year, 'it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom,' and has led us to look for his coming, willing to labor earnestly in the confident expectation; and now, with enlarged faith we are receiving it daily." "Twelve joined the church in March; eight last Sabbath, and there are some fifteen or twenty more looked for soon. Other, equally good results are seen in the increased earnestness and the growth of many in the church, as they are manifestly living in the power of Christ. In Princeton again, there was an unusual interest early this year. "Old residents say that it has not been equalled in the history of the town. Between seventy-five and eighty are already numbered as hopefully converted, and many more are looked upon expectantly. Our Methodist neighbors count some fifteen additions, making the total equal to about one in ten of our present population." "The work began, at least in visible fruitage, at East Princeton, three miles from the centre. Here a branch Sunday school had been held for two years. Some time in November, a prayer-meeting was also appointed, and had an attendance of about eighteen. At the first meeting a man declared himself resolved to set out as a Christian. The next week others followed, and for several weeks, from one to five would rise, and confess the same resolve and hope, all without external excitement or marked demonstration. Indeed, it was an object of particular care to keep all things in the most quiet and orderly habit. Almost every one who has taken an open stand has come to the point as the result of personal conversation, and generally, during such conversation and at home. All have given up any habits of dancing and card playing to which they may have been given, and take part in our prayer-meetings. We have come to feel the need of a chapel in the East District." "With the week of prayer, the work spread to the Centre, bearing the same quiet character.

It has taken in a large proportion of adults, nearly one half being over twenty years of age, many of them men; but all ages are reached, even to eighty-four years. Our meetings have been remarkable for the freedom in prayer, and for the number who have borne part. The long prayers have entirely disappeared. It is a common thing to have forty prayers in thirty minutes. The method in the 'seasons,' as they are called, is, for all to bow the head, and then, one follows another, men and women, old and young, in short petitions. To this great unanimity in public prayer is ascribed special power. Many church members have recently come into this privilege for the first time, and have been greatly profited themselves, as well as helpful to others. Throughout the work, indeed from the opening of the pastorate, the effort has been to have the proceedings plain, with no flavor whatever of the 'new departure.' The parish of this church covers forty-seven square miles. Prayer-meetings have been held in the different districts of the town, and special efforts are now in progress to reach those who have been unable or disinclined to attend the services at the Centre." Paxton has also enjoyed a blessing.

The Piedmont church in Worcester is grateful for a "continuous religious interest resulting in some eighty conversions in ten months." In the autumn an unusual desire for an improved spiritual tone was apparent among the members of the Plymouth church, of the same city. The attendance on the prayer-meeting increased, and special efforts for the conversion of personal friends and of Sunday-school scholars became more frequent. A single extra meeting was occasionally held. After some weeks of hopeful endeavor and waiting, Mr. S. M. Sayford was invited to spend a week in labor with the church, holding meetings daily, in afternoon and evening. These meetings deepened and broadened the work. All classes were reached, but the noteworthy feature was, the preponderance of men among the converts. In their number were several past the prime of life. The church has been increased, since the beginning of the year, by fifty-four additions, upon confession of faith. Converts have been brought forward in a class, for instruction under the pastor.

A revival began in the Summer Street church, through the instrumentality of a "class meeting," to which all were invited who were not church members, but wished to live a Christian life. This grew to a large young people's meeting. The interest largely increased after Mr. Moody was here, and during and since the Week of Prayer. No change of method was made. The results are not yet sufficiently developed for report.

In the Brookfield conference, the First Church of North Brookfield enjoyed a season of revival during the last weeks of the year and the weeks following. It began in a manifest turning of the church to God in prayer for the Holy Ghost. About the middle of December, Mr. S. M. Sayford conducted daily union meetings. There were no new methods. The results added quite a number to the church. In the month of January, 1884, a special interest appeared in the church at Southbridge. It was almost wholly confined to the young. No recognized cause was apparent. From the beginning, it was very quiet. The methods were of the most ordinary kind. There was no help from outside; no extra meetings. The "still, small voice" and personal effort were the two prominent elements. Results: the quickening of the church and the hopeful conversion of nearly forty souls. All the converts, with one exception, were members of the Sunday school. In some instances whole classes were converted. Answers to special and united prayers were frequent. Regular meetings were crowded, without effort or any new attraction. Close upon this spiritual quickening, and one fruit of it, a movement was started for building a new house of worship. This will be ready for use early in the summer.

From the Pilgrim conference we hear of an effort made early in the year, which was not without valuable results. "A series of meetings was held for three weeks, under the charge of Rev. A. G. Underwood, who proved himself an able, earnest, and judicious helper. A daily morning prayer-meeting was succeeded by preaching in the afternoon and evening. These meetings were blessed to the quickening of many members of the church, and awakening a good measure of interest among others, especially in bringing some of the Sunday-school children, already thoughtful, to a decision. A certain connection is, without doubt, to be traced between these meetings and the fact that thirty-three persons united with the church, by confession of faith, during the year. Special weekly meetings were held for four or five months, by the pastor, for the instruction of these persons in the Christian life. An interesting work of grace was also enjoyed by the Second Church of Plymouth, in September last. After preparatory prayer on the part of the church and its members, Rev. John D. Potter spent two Sabbaths with the people, holding, also, a four-days' meeting during the intervening week, and presenting the great truths of the gospel with marked clearness and impressiveness. People of all occupations left them, to attend these services. Many were deeply impressed, and a number of the youth were hopefully converted. Both the church and Sunday school felt the impetus; the disturbance of meetings, which had been not infrequent, ceased; profaneness, to a great degree, disappeared; and the general moral influence throughout the community was most salutary. The weather happened to be very hot, but the results seemed to prove that the Lord is willing to bless willing workers even at unpromising seasons. The Fifth Church also enjoyed a heightening of interest for a number of weeks, with encouraging results. In Falmouth, again, a quiet revival was enjoyed for several months. The first good sign came in October, in connection with the Sunday-school anniversary. An address of great earnestness by Mr. H. M. Moore, followed by a gospel meeting in the evening, became an occasion for the expression, on the part of a few, of a purpose to serve the Lord. A strong revival feeling came out in the weekly prayer-meeting. The young Christian people were thoroughly waked up. Young converts bore their testimonies. Daily meetings were held during the week of prayer. A four-days' meeting was conducted by Rev. G. H. De Bevoise. Quite young children gave beautiful expression to their love of Jesus. Some twelve or fifteen persons came to hope in Christ, and the pastor was looking for greater things to come.

From the Old Colony conference comes a remarkably suggestive story. The months of 1884 were marked by very few apparent conversions and little visible advance. Yet, as one looks over the field three months later, he finds in several of the churches a very gratifying change. At the meeting of the conference last fall, some of the brethren, feeling that the conference ought to be exerting a more positive spiritual influence, a committee was appointed for co-operating with any churches desiring it, in an effort for the quickening of the churches and for the conversion of souls. Five of the pastors were constituted such a committee. These entered on their endeavor, looking to God for his guidance. Every service was opened with prayer by every member. They decided upon a series of three-days' meetings with every church that should welcome the effort, and adopted a circular to the churches, and an order of services. As it is interesting to know precisely the way in which brethren undertake an enterprise like this, the circular and order of service are here given:—

“MATTAPoisETT, MASS., Nov. 25, 1884.

To the Congregational Churches of the 'Old Colony Conference,' Greeting:

Dear Brethren,—The undersigned, a committee of this conference, chosen at its fall meeting to promote evangelistic work within its bounds, greatly feeling the spiritual need of such work, and inviting your most hearty and prayerful co-operation therein, respectfully recommend:

First. That a series of special Evangelistic meetings be held for three days, in each church of the conference where desired.

Second. That, on application, the Evangelistic committee provide a suitable leader, with competent assistants, to aid each church in conducting these meetings.

Third. That each church desiring this visitation, make all local arrangements for the meetings, under the advice and direction of the Evangelistic committee.

Fourth. That all correspondence with reference to the work of the Evangelistic committee be with its scribe, Rev. A. H. Fuller, Mattapoisett, Mass.

Wishing you grace, mercy, and peace, we are, in behalf of the churches of this conference,

Yours most fraternally,

GEO. H. SHAW, Chairman, Middleboro, Mass.

C. C. WATSON, Wareham, Mass.

H. J. STONE, North Rochester, Mass.

H. M. GRANT, Middleboro, Mass.

A. H. FULLER, Scribe, Mattapoisett, Mass.'

“ORDER OF SERVICE RECOMMENDED BY THE EVANGELISTIC COMMITTEE OF THE OLD COLONY CONFERENCE, FOR SPECIAL MEETINGS.

FIRST DAY.

- 2.00 P. M. — Prayer-meeting.
2.30 P. M. — Topic: Dependence on the Holy Spirit.
7.00 P. M. — Prayer and praise meeting.
7.30 P. M. — Topic: Love for souls.

SECOND DAY.

- 10.00 A. M. — Prayer-meeting.
10.30 A. M. — Topic: Cause and cure of decline in spiritual life.
2.00 P. M. — Witness meeting.
2.30 P. M. — Topic: Personal and household religion.
7.00 P. M. — Praise meeting.
7.30 P. M. — Topic: ‘Excuses.’

THIRD DAY.

Selections at option, from the following list of topics:

1. ‘How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?’
2. Repentance.
3. Invitations of the Gospel.
4. ‘What think ye of Christ?’
5. Inward witness to man’s need of Christ.
6. How to study the Bible.”

The first church visit was made, Jan. 2-4. Others followed to the number of nine. The committee secured as leader, Mr. A. H. Whitford, formerly secretary of the Young Men’s Association at Middleborough and now the assistant of Rev. F. A. Warfield, of Brockton. The leader attended every meeting, in many places followed up the work, and proved very useful, especially with young people. Most of the work was done by the pastors of the conference, although a few brethren from abroad aided, in a few services. More than one hundred hopeful conversions, and an immense quickening of the churches resulted from these visits of the committee.”

“A work of grace, in some respects very remarkable, was going on for three months in Marion, directly attributable to the visit of the conference committee. The pastor testifies to the result as the conversion of some twenty-five persons, almost all young; the general quickening of the church; the disappearance of old grudges and differences, under the power of the Holy Spirit. Meetings were held at a neighborhood three miles from the Centre, where twelve or more gave evidence of a surrender to Christ; making a total of about forty hopeful conversions. A Young People’s Society of Christian Endeavor was also formed, with forty members. At Wareham, about twenty came out as believers in the Lord, the work being quiet, gradual, and cheering, and a young people’s meeting established with highly beneficial results. The Central church, Middleborough, has been greatly quickened, and a young people’s meeting organized, with large attendance and great promise. At South Dartmouth, where the state of religion had long been very low, and wickedness has prevailed, the meetings were greatly blessed. About twenty-five or thirty are reckoned as giving tokens of conversion, backsliders are reclaimed, and the church is much revived. Mattapoisett shows a revival which is a revival indeed on the part of the church; a flourishing young people's circle of endeavor has been formed. Rochester reports twelve hopeful conversions, a quickened church, and a new young people's society. But quite remarkable is the story that comes from West Tisbury on Martha's Vineyard. Here is a church several miles from any other of our own order (the nearest being at Edgartown), where from the Week of Prayer has been going on a week of grace. No unusual methods had been used, and no help was received from without; but when first visited by the committee, about twenty hopeful conversions had already taken place in that small community, and there have been others since. "I think I never visited a place," says the clerk of the committee, "where there was so little prejudice against religion, and so general an attendance on divine service."

"It is noticeable," says the same witness, "that this endeavor of the conference has wrought especially among the young. It is the most extensive which has visited this conference for years, and new life has been inspired in the churches. Next year is expected to show a considerable gain in the membership of the churches. The benevolent gifts of last year were nearly double those of the year before. The recent meeting of the Old Colony conference "was very largely attended and blessed with an unusually delightful spirit of Christian devotion and fellowship."

We consider that this movement of the Old Colony conference calls for some special notice. The attention of the General Association is invited to the fact that it is a specimen of a kind of work that its State Committee was intended particularly to stimulate,—an example of church fellowship in work, and a direct result of the communion of churches in regard to their work. Movements of essentially the same kind have been made indeed in other parts of the State, but none is remembered, so well organized, so thorough, and so successful; and it has come in a part of the State where it was emphatically needed. If this conference shall persevere in similar energetic endeavors, we may hope to see a very great change in the communities within its bounds. We commend the example for a vigorous imitation.

Hampshire East conference. The pastor of the South Amherst church, realizing the need of a revival, called a meeting of the church committee, and enlisted their help and their prayers. Believing that the truth had been preached, and that the time of ingathering had come, he looked about for a helper, and found one just suited to the work in Rev. R. S. Underwood. The low state of spiritual religion emphasized the need. Ample preparation was made for the coming harvest. It was expected and planned for in faith. The other churches were invited. The parish was thoroughly canvassed, and every one was personally invited to the meetings. These were held daily with few exceptions, in the afternoon and evening. The gospel was preached with faithfulness, the singing added much, and personal consecration at the close, and at other times, proved very effective. The result of the fortnight of special services was the quickening of the church, and the hopeful conversion of some thirty or forty souls, to which should be added the awakening of some of the neighboring churches. Mr. Underwood was also invited to labor in Belchertown, preaching there as elsewhere, on afternoons and evenings, except on Saturdays, for nearly three weeks. This was between the November election and Thanksgiving day. The other denominations of the town were invited to join the effort, which they did, even suspending their Sunday-afternoon and evening services. The evening meetings were usually closed with a few minutes given by the ministers present, to conversation with inquirers and the unconverted. Opportunity for voluntary expression of feeling and purpose was also ordinarily afforded. As many as sixty persons made some sort of expression of a Christian purpose. A few of these were quite young. This series of meetings was followed by special meetings of various kinds, in schoolhouses or private dwellings. The converts have not yet been brought into the church. They meet the pastor weekly for instruction in the nature, duties, and rewards of the Christian life; and as to the nature, the claims, the covenant and creed of the church. The Bible is used as the text-book, and with it the "Pilgrim's Progress." All repeat the Lord's Prayer together, kneeling, and after an interval which the young people are encouraged to occupy with prayer, the pastor leads in closing devotions. Scripture selections for reading during the week are given out. The pastor feels that the employment of an evangelist has proved to have been wise. God has set the seal of his blessing upon it. From South Hadley also comes word of unusual interest among the young in the high school, and of short prayer-meetings there, of young people's meetings in the church, of special preaching, aided by neighboring pastors; this during the earlier part of the year. Then in the fall, came Mr. Moody for a day, and Mr. Underwood for nearly three weeks; a few conversions in the seminary, and a few in the congregation; the quickening of many Christians, and considerable awakening among others.

Andover conference. The church at North Andover declares its report to be "entirely one of good news" for every Sabbath and every week-day of the entire year. God has come nigh with saving power. Eighteen have joined the church upon confession. There has been a quiet working of the Spirit, principally among the young. From the Ballardvale Church, Andover, came an account of a season of religious interest, beginning in plain preaching and talking by the acting pastor. Meetings were never largely attended, but quietly, one after another. Individuals were, as it is said, "hand picked" into the right way. The result: seventeen persons admitted, upon confession of faith, to this little church; also a Young People's Circle of Endeavor, with twenty-five "active" and eleven "associate" members. Tyngsborough has a somewhat peculiar piece of history to record. It has been without a pastor during the year. In October of 1883 the supply of their regular pastor ceased; afterward they had occasional preaching by various ministers. Most of the time a layman from Lowell conducted Sunday-evening services and the weekly prayer-meeting. The increased spiritual interest in December awakened hopes. Early in 1884 the presence of the Spirit was manifested in the conversion of several young people. Earnest workers from the Lowell Young Men's Association came out, and were richly blessed in their efforts. The church members have endeavored to care for those just entering on the Christian life. The people are widely scattered. There is no pastor to follow up good beginnings, or to lead in the needed pastoral labors.

Berkshire South conference. Since the Week of Prayer there has been a wonderful work of grace in the church in West Stockbridge Village. No details have been received.

Suffolk North conference. From the Central Church, Chelsea, we hear of a season of religious interest which, beginning with the Week of Prayer, — with assistance from an evangelist, — resulted in many direct conversions, in a confirming of the hesitating, and a renewal of the life of the church. Twenty-five were added to the church at the spring communion from the Sunday school. Revere reports, probably, the most fruitful year in its history, in conversions and additions, although not coming, perhaps, in the form which might be described as a revival. The Day Street Church, West Somerville, enjoyed a revival, which comes, however, within the year 1885. It began with the Week of Prayer, or even before, resulting in many hopeful conversions, including both children and adults, and, in one or two instances, persons who had for many years declared themselves confirmed sceptics.

“Some subjects of the work have been already taken into the church, and all are placed in what we call a ‘class for Christian beginners,’ which serves the double use of a training school for those who have lately become Christians, and an inquiry meeting for those who have not fully found the path. The interest in this class still continues up to the time of this report, with no perceptible abatement, the attendance ranging from forty to fifty, and new cases coming in every week. The class meets at six o'clock Sunday evening, the hour before the Sunday-evening prayer-meeting. It looks now as if this class would have to be continued, for the present certainly, and perhaps permanently, as one of the institutions of our church.”

“The revival in the Pilgrim Church, Cambridgeport, was remarkable,” observes the pastor, “for these, among other features:—

1. In the blessing upon the preaching of the Word.
2. In its prayerfulness.
3. In its thorough organization for personal work.
4. In its long continuance; for it is doubtful whether at present it would be as true to say that it has ceased, as to say that it continues under modification of form.”

“The inquiry meeting was the principal method used for developing the results of the work. Prayer for the pastor, and prayer two and two for the unconverted, have been the particular forms of prayer upon which the attention of the people has been fixed as never before. We feel that we have been given new views of permanent value of co-operation in the use of prayer.”

“The work of the church has been organized, substantially, as in previous years. As hitherto, the revival has demonstrated the inestimable value of thorough organization in promoting and extending an interest in religion."

"The work among the children has been conducted in the simple manner long in practice with us. The pastor preaches to the children, but aims to make all sermons plain enough for them to understand. The catechism class under his care has been in an extraordinary manner a nursery of the church."

"The large number of converts has pressed the need of careful training. A new meeting, called, 'The Converts' Meeting,' has become established as a permanent addition to our meetings of the week. It is held on Wednesday evening, and is a Bible reading on some doctrinal and practical subject. The converts and others who attend take notes, each having a book in which to enter the topics and the Scripture passages."

"The large number of children converted has called for special watch. Many of the teachers met their scholars weekly, for several months, in class prayer-meetings, the teacher accepting the duty put by God upon him, as being the pastor of the class. We have learned anew one great lesson, viz., that there is no training for the converts of revival like the continuance of revival. No church in the conference more needs the prayers of the churches, that with so great blessings, we may be kept humble, and may continue in the truths of the Spirit, so wonderfully and so simply published among us."

"In making this report, I feel like connecting our blessing with all the peculiar features of our church life. It is due to God, to honor him in this recognition, that our free plan of church support, and our organization without a society, and our practice of raising our money by giving it, rather than by fairs or by any methods in vogue of 'spoiling the Egyptians,' have all had a part in furthering direct efforts for saving the unsaved. In saying this, there is no intention to criticise the life of other churches, or their organization or work. Rather it is, with all sincerity and earnestness, to draw attention once more to certain simple, scriptural ideas, to which our own attention has been drawn so repeatedly and urgently, as favoring the full, untrammelled work of the Holy Spirit."

CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS.

For several years the work in behalf of young people has been prominent in the yearly reports. The subject comes up again this year, and under circumstances which encourage the hope that definite action of a useful kind may now be taken. Various organizations of young people and others have been formed, with a view to facilitate a beginning and advance in the ways of the Christian life and the speedy entrance upon full church fellowship. Prominent among these have been "Societies of Christian Endeavor." Other designations have been used: "The Circle of Endeavor," "The Church Porch," "The Young Covenanters," "The Pastor's Class," "The Pastor's Helpers," "The Class of Learners," "The Young Folks' Class," "The Young Christian Workers." That under some suitable name, organizations of young people and others should be found in all churches, presenting a way in which all seekers after the Lord shall find an ever-open path inviting them into the full communion of His church, must be earnestly desired by all.

The State Committee suggests the adoption of the following resolution:—

Resolved, That the Association recognizes with thankfulness to God the enthusiasm now moving many of the churches in behalf of the young and in behalf of all who are still out of the visible family of Christ, and commends a simple form of organization to further their entrance on the Christian life and fellowship, as supplying a needed and valuable addition to the ancient methods of the Congregational system; and it hopes that such may soon be found in all the churches of the State.

The General Association last year adopted the following resolutions (Minutes, pp. 8, 9), with which the portion of the State Committee's report, relative to "Cities and Large Towns," concluded:—

"Resolved, That in view of the facts presented, this Association advises each church to take a religious census, and to make a systematic visitation of its community, with special reference to the neglecting and foreign-born populations.

"Resolved, That the State Committee be instructed, in co-operation, if possible, with the Home Missionary Society, to secure the early presentation of this subject to all the local conferences."

The committee obeyed these instructions, and many churches followed the advice of the Association, making the census and the systematic visitation; and in instances which have come to our knowledge, with excellent effect. We believe that during the coming year other churches will follow the example thus set, and that great good is likely to result from the Association's vote. Next year it will be possible to gather facts of interest in relation to the movement and its effects.

We feel encouraged to suggest the following resolution:—

Resolved, That this Association exhorts the churches to push forward and complete the movement for a religious census and systematic visitation, with particular reference to the neglecting and the foreign-born populations.

Resolved, The State Committee is instructed to investigate the modes and the results of this endeavor, and embody the same in their next annual report.

Two years ago a formal definition was for the first time given in one distinct vote of the Association, to the "State Committee on the Work of the Churches." Experience makes obvious, we suppose, to many, what at the time was obvious to some, that this definition still leaves something to be desired. Last year the Association postponed one modification (p. 12, Minutes of 1884) "from constitutional difficulties," and in order to provide for the proper adjustment of the work of "the Sunday-school committee with that of the Sunday-school section of the State Committee on the Work of the Churches." Another modification is necessary, in order to restore to the "Committee on the Work of the Churches against Intemperance" their former membership in the State Committee.

To meet these two points, we propose a modification of Rule XII., Sect. 2, Sub-Sect. (2), second paragraph. This now reads as follows: "The State Committee on the Work of the Churches shall consist of the Secretary, the Registrar, the Chairman of the Committees of Local Conferences, and twenty-one members at large, to be so classified that seven shall be elected each year for a term of three years."

We propose, first, a verbal correction, viz., the insertion of the word corresponding, in the phrase "the Chairman of the Committees of the Local Conferences," so that the clause shall read, "the Chairman of the corresponding Committees of the Local Conferences."

We propose, second, the insertion, after the claim just quoted, of the following additional clauses: the members of the committee against intemperance, the members of the committee on the Sunday schools. The definition of the committee will then read thus: The State Committee upon the Work of the Churches shall consist of the Secretary, the Registrar, the Chairmen of the corresponding Committees of the Local Conferences, the members of the Committee against Intemperance, the members of the Committee on the Sunday Schools, together with twenty-one members at large, to be so classified that seven shall be elected each year for a term of three years." We move that this resolution be made the order of the day at the earliest business meeting to-morrow.

For several years we have received from the churches and reported to the Association, modifications in the order of services for public worship. Your committee are of the opinion that the time has come when the facts respecting the present usages of the Congregational churches of this State in their public worship may be gathered and considered in a thorough manner. Perhaps the following suggestion would interpret a general desire:—

Resolved, That the Association instruct the State Committee to present in their next annual report the subject of the existing usages in public worship. The Association also requests of the Provisional Committee of next year, opportunity for the adequate consideration of this theme on the Wednesday-morning session of next year.

The secretary takes the liberty of adding a word or two in reference to a matter partly of personal interest. The section of the State Committee to which he belongs finishes its three-years' term with the present meeting. The first of January of this year concluded the twentieth year of his service in connection with this committee under its two names as "The State Committee on Home Evangelization," and "The State Committee on the Work of the Churches." He had hoped to find an opportunity, in accordance with a vote of the State Committee, for submitting some review of these twenty years of the committee's work. But circumstances have prevented the carrying out of this purpose. Having received from the General Association the privilege of this long service with a generous and unbroken support, he is full of gratitude for the past; and having seen the principles and methods for which he has labored become the instinct and the system of most enterprising and energetic churches, he is equally full of confidence for the future. There is a noble company of the younger ministry abounding in Christian energy and resource, with any of whom it would be a privilege for any man to work in seeking the most perfect development of our apostolic system of church order and methods, in its inexhaustible variety of adaptiveness, and its yet unrealized capabilities in both worship and work. The churches of this State will surely move forward in more and more perfect ways of wise organization and effective mutual support in their proper work, under the guidance of Him who is with us always, to the end of the world.

By vote of the State Committee,

DANIEL P. NOYES,
Secretary.

WORK AMONG THE CHILDREN AND YOUTH.

---

I. THE WORK OF THE PASTOR.

REV. THEODORE J. HOLMES, NEWTON CENTRE.

It seems to us a strange question which the Sunday-School Union, in the early part of this century, addressed to its superintendents. Have you taken any steps to interest ministers in your vicinity to promote Sunday schools? It referred to the impression, widely prevalent, that this new device for training the young, though well meant, was a very questionable good.

For one thing, it might impair the sanctity of the Lord's day. . . . At this point, the Congregationalist or the Boston Recorder came boldly to its defence. In October, 1817, after describing the exercises in certain schools, the learning of catechism, Scripture, hymns, etc., the editor pleads: "Let us then ask, can this employment be incompatible with the observance of the Sabbath?" Summing up the argument, he ventures the remark, "When we hail the establishment, then, of the Sunday school as a harbinger of good to the church, . . . we hope to be accounted neither fanatical nor presumptuous."

A more serious objection, if possible, made by the ministers, was that their own prerogative as religious teachers would be interfered with, and this had as little ground as the other. The friends of the new organization protested that it was designed mainly for the poor, the ignorant, the vicious, who would have no other instruction. The institution has widened its range since then, — caring as well for the children of the church, — but its advocates protest as earnestly, that they have no intention to encroach upon the office of the minister; that they only mean to supplement it, striving by their special instrumentalities to accomplish what he cannot.

Ministers, in our day, are glad the old misapprehension is gone, that there is between them and the Sunday school so pleasant an accord; they only need to keep in mind their own responsibility. This is the single point I want to press, that there is a work for the pastor, in the spiritual education of the children and youth, which only he can do. He cannot delegate it to the Sunday school, or to any of the other agencies which have been started as aids to Christian discipleship. When he is asked by the Saviour at the last day, Why were not all the children in your parish converted? it will be a poor answer, "Lord, they were taken out of my hands"; for he knows very well that nobody has a right to take them out of his hands; to make their calling and election sure is a part of the business for which he was ordained of God, and for which he must give account.

What can he do, practically, to fulfil this trust?

1. He can study the children with this in mind.

He needs to begin early, too; looking into the eyes of a little child a few years old, and thinking, My dear boy, how can I win you to the Saviour? then watching him as he grows older, the development of his character; the forces that are shaping him; his home, his school, his plays; entering into his experience; on all these sides, so far as possible, with a real sympathy that will secure his confidence and love.

Years ago, some of us used to hear of a Sunday-school teacher, who making, one day, a tour of pastoral calls on his class, found a boy, on his mother's doorstep, in great tribulation. He was trying to make a whistle and it would not go. The teacher being, fortunately, at home in that business, showed him how to do it, thereby relieving his distress and making him forever his friend. Happy the minister who knows how to make a whistle, or to make something that will strike a chord of fellow feeling between himself and the child he is planning to save.

2. A pastor can preach to the children.

How often and when? That depends on himself and on them and on the church?

Some ministers have a special sermon of this character once in a month or in two months; some have one five minutes long every Sabbath, while others prefer to take this and scatter it through the main sermon.

A distinguished lecturer to theological students warns them that preaching to children belittles the pulpit, weakens its power. But if that were true in a literary way, might it not be worth while for the pulpit to be belittled somewhat in such a cause. In such weakening, might it not possibly be getting power, — power from on high? Probably there are few of us active pastors who do not have our moments of contrition that our aim should ever be to have our preaching large, rather than to have it tell, every time, in winning souls.

We wonder, too, at our folly; what an amount of labor we spend in making sermons for the adults in our congregations; many of them already saved, others hardened almost beyond saving. What if we were willing, and the churches were willing, to have a tenth part of this labor spent in making sermons to the young!

3. The pastor can have special meetings with the children as a regular part of his work. Nothing must take the place of this. The "Pastor's Class" is a familiar institution, now, for younger children or older or both, with the purpose to help directly in their religious education.

There is great advantage in committing them, at a proper age, any who are ready for it, on the side of Christ. In every congregation there are some children, more perhaps than we think, who feel no interest in religious things, but have a spirit rather of opposition. There are others who lean towards religion and are willing to acknowledge it. If now these can be, in some healthy way, brought together and trained systematically in Christian truth and Christian living, the most of them, if not all, will certainly be held for the Saviour.

Then they must be kept in mind that when the right time comes, they are of course to join the church. These other helps, Pastor's Classes, Societies of Christian Endeavor, Philip and Andrew Clubs, or whatever else, are not a substitute for church membership, but only a preparation for it.

We understand sufficiently, perhaps, the need of care in encouraging children to make a public confession; they are so easily subject to influences of sympathy and excitement. There should be satisfying evidence that they have become Christians, — evidence which parents and friends discover in their lives; yet, just there, we want to be careful not to demand more of evidence in them than in ourselves; works meet for repentance do not mean complete sanctification in them more than in their fathers and mothers. When they show by their conduct that they have begun to learn of Christ, if they desire to come into His family and take His name, they have as good a right to as any of us. It is a mistake to suppose this doctrine is a modern innovation.

In the early days of our denomination, young people, in some quarters, at least, were encouraged to join the church. Sometimes they put their application in writing, with some account of their religious experience.

Here is a copy of one of these statements, dated Westerly, R. I., 1752: —

“We, the subscribers, babes in Christ, desire to be fed with the sincere milk of the Word, and to follow the footsteps of Christ's flock. We desire to know Christ better and to love him more. . . . We desire to come to the Lord's table as disciples of Christ. . . . And we beg the prayers of all, both old and young, for us, that God would enable us to adorn our profession, that those who seek occasion against us may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us: Amen.”

Signed by a boy of fourteen and a girl of thirteen, brother and sister.

Another document in the same record is signed by three girls, aged, respectively, fourteen, thirteen, and eleven, who say they “dare not neglect” the duty any longer.

So we are only going back to the days of the fathers, when we encourage the young to take this step. We say it is not only their privilege, but their obligation, for the same reasons which apply to older Christians.

1. The children need the church. If it is, indeed, a school, a fold, an army, a home; if it is the safest place for a disciple, the best for growth and service, then that is just where the children ought to be.

2. The church needs the children. There is no other source, so healthy and sure, from which to get steady growth. Making all possible effort to save adults, we cannot depend upon their conversion; too few of them are ever reached. With all the forces in the world of error and sin, the church must have the children; it is a matter simply of life and death.

A native missionary in Nestoria being asked how they ever could have sustained Christian institutions in that country against such odds, replied, “The secret, as I understand, lies in the way we treat our children. When they are very young we explain to them that because they have been given up to God, they are different from others who have not been so devoted, and ought to grow up differently. We say to them, as the Jews were accustomed to say to their families, ‘You are not Hittites, nor Canaanites, nor any other kind of heathen; you are Israelites; you belong to the people of God; we expect you, as you grow older, not to be idolaters, but to serve God.' The result is," the missionary added, "our sons and daughters come along as a matter of course, into the new life."

This is the best wisdom in Christian lands. In the United States the church must have the children or it will die out. We understand, of course, how alone this source of life can be secured. Sometimes labor for the young is spoken of as the easiest part of our Christian work. A child is so impressible; with such warm love, such unquestioning faith, you can bend him as you will, — can you?

The seed dropped in the ground comes up so naturally, you could almost make it grow yourself. Yet there is needed the same creative power to make a little leaf as to make a planet or a mountain. The same almighty grace is needed to make a new heart for a little child as for the most hardened adult.

But, remembering our dependence on the Holy Spirit, do we never forget the Holy Spirit's dependence on us, for the use of such instrumentalities as shall help him in accomplishing His mission? We are always sowing, but only once in a great while, and by some very extraordinary methods, putting in the sickle to gather a harvest.

With all that is done for the children, in our time, in such a multitude of ways, may it be that even yet we neglect to do this one thing, to spend our very best strength in bringing them at once to the Saviour?

When we pastors realize at all our share of this work, we ask soberly, "Who is sufficient for these things?"

We feel like demanding our right to be remembered by our people at the mercy seat.

"Brethren, pray for us"; that the Divine Spirit may furnish us well for this particular service, showing us the children's need, showing us the cross lifted for them; giving us the spiritual frame we lack, the tenderness, the wisdom, the zeal, that we may be, in season and out of season, in working order; then blessing all we do, our personal words, meetings, sermons, everything; making an atmosphere in the churches so warm that the seed, planted in all these ways, can be quickened into life and fruit.

There is no point in all the work of the church at which ministers and people need, more than here, to agonize with God for a deep and wide revival, praying desperately with the old Methodist hymn:—

"Send convicting power down, Save, mighty Lord!"

II. THE WORK OF CHURCH MEMBERS.

SAMUEL B. CAPEN, JAMAICA PLAIN.

THERE is always a sacredness about last words. In the last book of the Bible and in almost the last verse, the church is represented under the image of a "bride" giving an earnest invitation. Coupled with the Holy Spirit of God, and under the figure of a fountain of living water, this universal invitation is to come to the Lord Jesus Christ. To make still more emphatic and persuasive this call, is the one duty of the whole church of Christ to all whom it can reach till time is lost in eternity.

Our subject is threefold, and along the line which has been indicated, it asks,

First. What can the church membership do in the home?

(A.) Act as though it EXPECTED the little ones to come to Christ at once. There has been very much of unbelief in the past about little children becoming Christians. Thank God that feeling is passing away! The best answer ever given as to the age, was a child's answer, "Just as old as we are." Christ wants the little ones at first, before sin has made a stronghold of their souls. We stamp upon our children our features, our characteristics, even the way we walk. Is not God as ready to have our holy thoughts and wishes stamped upon these hearts and lives? I say, expect yourself that they are to be Christians in childhood, and let them see in your every act that you expect it.

(B.) Let them feel that in this expectation it is to you of the first importance, and more than all things else together; that money, or fame, or dress, or station, are nothing in comparison. The child with its keen instinct will readily detect what the parent wants of it above all else. To the little one none is so strong or great as the father, or so loving and beautiful as the mother. Let that power be uniformly exerted in one direction and it will be irresistible.

(C.) Instruct your children in religious truth. Do not expect the Sabbath-school teacher to do it all. Make it a study to impart truth in a way that the youngest can understand. You are willing to spend time and patience in teaching them the laws of health. Is not the soul as important? In this connection, I have found in my experience one of the most helpful things, every Sabbath evening, to have the whole family, down to the smallest child, pray together in turn. They become accustomed to the sound of their own voices in the presence of others, and will learn to open up the secret springs of their souls.

(D.) Make the Sabbath the best day of the week. If the parlor is closed to them through the week, let it be all open on the Lord's Day. In very "young" children keep the best doll to be carried to the "play church" on that day, and always have on hand a Noah's ark. As they grow older keep the best things always for the Sabbath.

(E.) Study to make home pleasant, and be willing to give up your own pleasure and comfort for the children. Never be too busy to listen to any proper request. A few weeks ago I was very much behind on some reading I was anxious to do, but I noticed one of the children was weary and had laid down his book and was sitting silent. I laid down mine also, and we had a talk together. Do you not think he appreciated the little giving up of my pleasure for his sake? Such memories may be the anchor that will hold our children in some fierce temptation. Near my home is a professing Christian mother who has already one miserable son, and who recently refused to allow her younger boy of seventeen to have any company in the parlor, because it was too nice to use. There was no other place in the house he could call his own, and he with his companions was fairly driven out into the street. Is it any wonder that he is on the road to the pit by the shortest and most direct route? Whose fault is it?

(F.) Plan to have your pleasures with your children and not away from them. I have seen Christian parents constantly going off on sleigh-rides and little parties of various sorts, leaving the children at home alone, or with a servant. Is it any wonder that in every such case we see the children go astray? On the other side, I remember once, years ago, it was said of a certain prominent Christian man that he was always with his boy. It is no wonder that the latter is now a minister of the gospel. I could take you to a family where the mother, as a rule, never allowed herself to be away from home, for any reason whatever, when the children came from school, but was always there to greet them. They never had to ask, "Where's mother gone?" It is no wonder here, either, that both boys have been studying for the ministry, and the girl is, while quite young, one of the most devoted of Christian teachers.

(G.) Train your children never to have any secrets apart from you. Whenever they are in doubt upon anything, or when there are questions they do not understand, not to another, but to the parent let them always be encouraged to come. Never be too busy to listen. If they should choose an unfortunate time, make an appointment, and keep it as scrupulously as you would a business engagement. There is no business more important than to keep the way open to your child's heart. Do not let them get their knowledge of delicate questions in the street, with Satan to put his devilish thoughts more and more into them, because they fear to speak to you, or are not encouraged to come. Thank them, as though they had done you a favor, every time they do come.

(H.) As growing out of this frankness between parent and child, it will enable you to know more surely what your children are reading. While I was writing this, a friend showed me a paper which was being distributed at five o'clock in the afternoon, on one of the principal thoroughfares of Boston. The title had rather a semi-religious look, and he put it innocently in his pocket, and laid it upon the table when he reached home. Providentially, however, before the boy had seen more than the title, he looked it over himself and found it a vile, indecent sheet. Suppose the boy had got it first in the street! A young lady riding in the cars was offered by a young man a book, which, when she told the title, was known by her friends to be one of the vilest ever written. It is not pleasant to speak of these things; but I fear parents are not fully aware of the devilishness that is at work circulating such literature. We read often of the evils of intemperance, and it is impossible to say too much in condemnation of this curse. But there is another evil, I fear sometimes more dangerous still, because it works in the dark. Your child cannot touch liquor without his tell-tale breath, when you kiss him at night revealing the danger. But he can, by reading when you know it not, be taking poison into his heart and life, which will destroy him more quickly than alcohol can ever do it. All future cleansing can never wholly efface the vile pictures of youth as they are photographed upon the memory. See to it that they never come into the inner chambers of the soul of those whom God has given you. Protect them at this point by the most ceaseless watch. Train your children to read nothing without first showing it to you. Begin in this way, and it will be easy to continue. Teach them to avoid looking at the indecent pictures of low theatre scenes posted in our streets, and which fill the shop windows. Show them that it is manly and womanly, in the words of the Psalmist, to "turn away from evil," and never try to "face it down."

Second. What can the church do for the care of the young within the church?

I understand this to refer to those outside of our own homes. And yet while we say outside of the narrow circle we call ours, is not the figure of the home still the best one under which to consider the church? If the whole church is the "Daughter of Zion," may we not fairly consider the little ones as the younger members of this family. What shall we do for them, then? Do, why the same that you do for those you call "yours"; love, protect, defend, instruct, encourage, and reprove them. Yea, carry out the figure still further; we must see that they have proper shelter, food, and exercise, and do it yourself personally. It is a miserable travesty of a home to turn the care of the little ones over to a servant or a nurse. It is a travesty of a church to expect the minister or the deacons to do all this service.

Certainly one of the best places to help is in the Sabbath school. The church as a whole should be there, for it is the place where you can come closest into contact with these young lives. I should be glad to enlarge upon this part of the churches' work, and had intended to do so; but as this work of the Sabbath school is to have a separate place in these meetings I omit it.

But there is a work for the church outside of the Sabbath school. Would not its power be greatly increased, if its older members took more helpful notice of the younger? Speak with them as you meet them in the street or in the cars or in the church vestibule. Take pains to do this. A little more hand-shaking would do most of our Congregational churches good. Not long since at the close of an evening service a lady stood waiting for a friend. She was quite alone in the world and needed especially a kind word of sympathy. Three older ladies in the church stood near talking with each other and left entirely unnoticed the poor girl by their side. A little thoughtfulness on their part might have made a very sad life brighter for all the week.

Have not all of us pleasant memories of some who noticed us when we were young and timid? We were made to feel that there was a reality in their religion, and it helped us to be faithful to our vows. In too many of our churches when the young have once confessed Christ, — although we promised to “watch” over them in our covenant,— we pass them by on the other side. The most dangerous period of a young Christian’s life is the first year after he has made his confession. The first excitement is over, and often to his surprise he finds sin is still very strong in him. When he stood at the Lord’s altar, every one gave him a hand and bade him “God speed.” Now they forget him. He yearns for help, sympathy, encouragement, instruction. He gets neither from most of those about him. He is never encouraged to speak out his feelings and tell his doubts and difficulties. More and more he keeps them to himself. Is it any wonder he is discouraged and led to despair when Satan tells him he is a fool or deceived? He is really a child in divine things and needs the same training as a child in our homes, day by day, little by little, precept upon precept. We treat him as though at birth he was full grown. That is never true in the kingdom of nature; it is equally false in the kingdom of grace. We must go out of our way to encourage and help.

Third. What can Christians do for the young who are outside of the church?

As I once had an opportunity, somewhat publicly, to give some “Hints to the Pulpit,” I am glad of an opportunity to say, on the other side, that in my judgment, the weakness in the church to-day is not in the preaching but in the practice. There are, it seems to me, two points in which the church is especially weak in its contact with the worldly elements around it, and thereby shorn of its strength in trying to reach the young, and these suggest the answers to the question.

1st. Its own worldliness. Our greatest enemy is inside the gates of the city. The pulpit, with all its earnestness, preaches of the supreme importance of eternal things and of the comparative insignificance of this world. The young, outside, see the church profess these things, and yet so far as their lives go, from Monday morning till Saturday evening, they seem just as eager in the race for wealth and honor as if this world were all. Now and then one seems to make his business subordinate to the Lord’s; but the majority do not. What wonder that the young are at first surprised, which surprise soon grows into contempt for religion and church members both. How much is “prayer-meeting talk” worth from a man who is known by all his business associates to be mean and close and sharp and exacting to the last cent in a trade? Some men’s names on a petition count for nothing; they will sign anything. A letter from one man on a business matter will be received with ridicule; the same suggestions from another with the profoundest respect and attention. So in religious things, back of the words is the man, and the words go no further than the man’s life. The worldliness of the church members can out-preach the minister. They are many; he is but one. They have six days; he but one.

If, therefore, the members of the church would have more power to lead the young to Christ, they must better live what they profess. While I was writing this, I had an interview with a young man to talk about personal religion. Trained in a Christian home, and recognizing his duty, he was too manly not to say that others’ failures were no proper excuse for him.

But one of his first questions was for me to explain why church members were so cold and indifferent, and so like the world about them? Was not his question a fair one, and can you wonder that this fact stood as a stumbling-block in his way? He wanted more than professions.

Does any one think I am emphasizing too much this point? A few weeks ago I talked with a young man who was in a nominally Christian home. But when I pressed his duty personally, I shall not soon forget how quickly I was almost silenced by a remark, which, if I answered truly, would condemn most severely the members of his own household, most of whom had apparently only a "name to live." His own brother and sisters stood in such an attitude that they shut out Christ from his eyes. Instead of being reflectors, they were screens.

2d. Its neglect of personal work. There is no method of Christian labor which God has more honored in the past than the individual, hand-to-hand labor of saving souls. It seems almost unnecessary to call your attention to the fact that two of the longest conversations of our Lord while in the flesh were to single souls: Nicodemus in the still hour of night, and the woman at Jacob's well. To set the truth still clearer for us, he called Philip out of his revival meetings in Samaria to preach the gospel to the eunuch on the lonely road toward Gaza. The ingathering of souls from that day to this has been in the same way. Mr. Moody has probably been the instrument in saving more men than any one else in this century, and yet he takes the pains to tell us that he never knew of but one man saved directly by his preaching; that was a sailor who jumped up and said he would accept Christ. All the rest were brought by some friend taking them by the hand and putting their hands into Christ's. The danger of our day is of too much machinery; all sorts of societies for every conceivable thing, and the Christian feels his whole work is done when he puts his money into the hands of the agent. The individual and his responsibility are lost in the machine. When God would save the world that was dying, he did not send another. He came himself, and the church will do its best work in saving the lost when its individual members in person seek out the needy ones.

I have been urged by one of the committee, and one who has known many of the young men of whom I speak, to state my own experience. I do it with some hesitation, but he promises to bear the responsibility. Since I became a Sabbath-school teacher, with the exception of the first year or two, I have always taught young men. In these years about two hundred different ones have been in my class. Many were Christians when they joined it; but of those who were not, more than fifty have become so. My plan has been this: On the very first Sabbath I have always tried to make them feel welcome; that I wanted to be their friend and to help them in any way in my power. I have not asked them the first Sabbath if they were Christians, — I might never see them again on that plan. It is not the time to ask a man to come to Christ when you see him running for the train. It is much better religion to say "Go it!" and pick up his hat if he drops it. We need tact and consecrated common-sense in this as in everything else. But in two or three weeks, as soon as I feel I have obtained a little hold upon him, I invite him to my house to spend the evening. I give my invitation so that he knows for what I wish to see him, so that he shall not feel that he has been entrapped. I am glad to say that I have never yet received a rebuff, and only in the case of one determinedly indifferent fellow been refused. We are then by ourselves, and with the fullest frankness we can talk. Never talk personal religion to one except when alone with him. I believe some such method of direct effort should be adopted by multitudes of our church members who are now doing nothing. We ought to study the individual. You cannot catch all the fish with the same bait. I once had a young man in my class who was very wary, and I hid behind a tree near his house till he should come out and then overtook him. I hope I shall be pardoned for these personal allusions; but my apology must be this, that I believe to-day it is the weakest point in our church work.

A few years ago, there was a young man in one of our theological seminaries who had not even then, at that point in his studies, become a Christian. His father and grandfather were distinguished preachers, but the young man was stubborn. Finally the teachers went to a classmate, and said, you must bring such a one to Christ. He bought a watermelon, invited the young man to his room; they ate and talked together, and finally he put his arm around his classmate's neck, saying, "You must be a Christian," and he did become one then and there. The man is to-day one of the most brilliant preachers of our nation.

It is probably true that every church member may not be fitted for this kind of work, but I believe multitudes could do it. Akin to this, how many could invite some stranger, or a number of them, to their homes to tea or to spend an evening, show them their books and pictures, or play a game, and before they know it, they would have a hold on them that would enable them to do the other work also! In the same catalogue, suppose every church member should make it a rule always to speak to the strangers in the house of God on the Sabbath. shake hands with them, bid them welcome, ask them to come again, find out who they are. It may be a turning-point in the life of some young man or woman, which improved, will help them onward, or, neglected, send them into the outer darkness. Some years ago, a young man who had been living a godless life, by some strange spell was led to the house of God. He sat near me, and at the close of the service I spoke with him and invited him to come again. He came and was invited into the Bible class, which invitation he also accepted. In about a month we spent an evening together, and had an earnest talk. By and by I urged him to accept Christ then and there. He rose, walked across the floor, and then turning squarely about, he said, "I will!" and he did. That man shortly after established one of the most useful religious organizations in this State, which, with increasing power, is going on to help and bless the world. "The kingdom of heaven is like a grain of mustard-seed."

We have mottoes over and around the pulpits of our churches for the congregations to read. I have wished that on the rear of the auditorium, in letters a yard long if necessary, so that the congregation as they turned to go out might surely read, there might be this motto, "Remember the Stranger."

One sentence in conclusion. The root of all methods must be, an intense love for the salvation of the children and youth, which is a germ and growth of God's planting. Love will always find a way to work; and the poorest method with God is better than all others together, without him.

III. WHAT THE CHILDREN AND YOUTH CAN DO FOR THEMSELVES.

REV. FRANK E. CLARK, SOUTH BOSTON.

THIS side of our subject, which certainly is not surpassed in importance by any other, is certainly more often overlooked than any other. Our thoughts are filled with the duties which we owe to the children, and our conferences are eloquent with the changes rung upon the obligations of the church to the child, but we too seldom remember that everything which the parent or the teacher or the church may do for the child is absolutely unavailing, unless the child does something for himself. The analogy in this respect between the physical and the spiritual training of the child is very close. We sometimes say, in the exaggeration of familiar speech, that such and such a child of indulgent parents has had everything done for him. And yet what we really mean is only this: that every facility has been provided which love and wealth can suggest, to enable the child to do well for himself. The kind parent can provide good air for his child and perfect ventilation, but after all, the child must breathe the air for himself. The parent may provide the best of food, most wholesome and nutritious, and yet the child must eat it for himself or it will do him no good. Evidently there are many things of most vital importance to the child's growth and welfare which the most loving parent can never do for him.

The public has of late years awakened to the idea that much so-called charity has been misapplied. It has been like throwing bread and meat and clothes to the man who is ever sinking deeper and deeper in the quicksand, instead of trying to raise him out of the quicksand to place his feet upon the rock of self-support. Mr. Brace, in his Gesta Christi, tells us that in ancient times this evil of unwise charity, which tended to pauperism, was tenfold worse than to-day; that "Cæsar found 320,000 persons in Rome, or nearly three quarters of the whole population of the city, on the roll of public succor." And that "Valentinian, the Elder, ordered a gratuitous distribution of white bread to every citizen." The wise effort of modern charity is to relieve poverty, not by doling out alms, but by promoting self-respect, and by leading on to independence; not by attempting to do everything for the poor, but by inspiring the poor to do something for themselves. This mistaken notion of true charity, which has cursed the benevolent efforts of the ages, has too often been carried into religious circles, in the treatment which the church has accorded to the children. It has frequently done enough for them, but has not taught them to do enough for themselves. Our churches and our Sunday schools have too often bred spiritual pauperism among the children. The Sunday-school lesson has been poured into them, as water from the faucet runs into the pitcher held beneath. The attempt is too seldom seriously made to draw it out from them. They are deluged with good advice from the pulpit and in the prayer-meeting. We too frequently fail in our endeavors in the more difficult task of leading them to put this good advice into practice.

If I remember my Latin derivations aright, inculcate means to grind in as with the heel, or literally "to heel in." Educate means to draw out. We need to educate the religious nature of the child, as well as to inculcate the truth. This "drawing out" is more difficult than the "heeling in," but it is also more important. How can we account for the fact that there are so many nerveless, dumb, useless Christians, in all our churches, who count for absolutely nothing in the aggressive work of the kingdom of God, except by the fact that from the beginning so many young Christians have had everything done for them, and have never been taught that, if they would grow strong, there are many things which they must do for themselves? The Methodist class-meeting, which has been such a wonderful tower of strength in the history of our sister denomination, and which, after a hundred years of trial, shows no signs of lessening usefulness, proves the value of at least one kind of religious self-effort in connection with religious instruction.

To return to the figure of the child in the carefully appointed and luxurious home. Suppose that he has everything about him, and everything done for him, that loving devotion can suggest. Yet, as we said, the most vital and important functions of nature he must perform for himself. No parent can breathe for the best-loved child. Into his own lungs and for himself, the little one must take the vital air. So in the spiritual world. If "Prayer is the Christian's vital breath,

The Christian's native air,"

then the child must be taught to pray; not simply to say a prayer which means much to his parents, but little to himself. He must be taught not to take everything for granted which he hears or reads, but to think for himself; he must be instructed not always to run to another for an opinion as he runs to the dictionary for the correct spelling of a word, but to ask his own heart, "Is this true, or is this false? is this right or wrong?" In the matter of faith he must be told that it is not his parents' faith that will save him, but his own active faith and intelligent belief that, through the grace of Christ, will save him. Is it objected that this method of training will foster a conceited, egotistic, rationalistic state of mind, which is foreign to childlike Christianity? We would reply that this is not the necessary outcome of such training. Together with the importance of steady, earnest thought on the great themes may be cultivated the reverent, childlike, docile spirit which shall not think of itself more highly than it ought to think. Good, strong, voluntary inspiration of religious truth in childhood will, we believe, prevent many of the sad wrecks of religious faith in manhood. Many a man when he begins to think for himself, when he begins to breathe the air of Christian doctrine, and try his creed for himself, finds sadly that he believes very little; that because he has taken his creed on trust from another, he has no creed which he can uphold and cling to. It has been wisely said, "Some of us are trying to believe too much, not more than is true, not more than we ought to be able to believe some time, either in this world or perhaps not until the next, but more than we have present inward strength for, more than thought can respond to, or experience guarantee. We sometimes extinguish a fire by putting on too much fuel. If a man has been strenuously indoctrinated from his childhood, the time will be very liable to come [especially if he is a thinking man, and lives in a questioning age], the time will be very liable to come when he will say to himself, 'Why, I don't believe all this,' and then, as he begins searchingly and sadly to explore himself, he finds that it is very little, after all, that he does believe. It is a critical time with him. He begins throwing away his creed, one article of it after another. One stick of unkindled fuel after another is laid off, and he gets down very near the bottom of the pile, very likely, before he finds an ember that is warm and a spark that is bright." To prevent this sad experience, where the effects are often worse than those just described, where complete religious shipwreck is too often the result, our children and youth must be taught to breathe for themselves the religious atmosphere, must be taught to pray and think and trust for themselves.

It is self-evident also that the most loving parent cannot eat for even the best-loved child. And yet are we not attempting a spiritual process similar to this in much of the Biblical instruction of our children and youth? Do we attempt to lead them to feed upon the truth, or are not our efforts frequently confined to showing them how beautifully we have masticated and digested the truth? There should be more committing of Scripture passages and of catechism than there is in these days. No scholar should go out of our Sunday schools, who has not learned, so that he can never forget them, scores of Scripture passages, such as the Commandments, the Beatitudes, the Twenty-third and Nineteenth Psalms, the fifty-fifth chapter of Isaiah, and others like them. This the young person must do for himself. No explanation or sermon or talks about these passages will take the place of a thorough knowledge of them. Many of the systems of home Bible reading are very valuable for the young, where a company of them are induced to read certain verses every day, which bear upon some one truth or doctrine of Christian practice.

In the third place, the most loving parent cannot exercise for his child. The young person must do this for himself. Perhaps this is the most important and most neglected element of self-culture in religious matters. The system of massage for invalids has many strong advocates, in which the body of the sick man is pinched and pulled and kneaded and worked over, and this may do very well for the invalid, who has not strength to exercise himself, but none of us would claim that massage is the best exercise for the growing child. In order to grow strong he must run and jump and play for himself. In providing for this self-exercise, our churches and Sunday schools have been especially deficient. To supply just this deficiency in the Christian training of our youth is the object, if I understand anything about them, of the societies for Christian work among the young people, which have sprung up of late in so many places throughout our land. Their success is due to the recognition of this principle: that every Christian boy or girl must take his own exercise, that self-action is better than massage. These societies require every week, from every Christian young person who becomes a member, some confession of Christ, some participation in every prayer-meeting, though such participation may be very slight, and only what is appropriate to the youngest child. They have special monthly seasons for reviewing the past, and for reconsecration to Christ, and in their various committees and agencies they endeavor to find some work for every young Christian. So far as they accomplish this work of furnishing self-exercise for our children and youth, they have a right to live and flourish. So far as this principle shall be carried out under the wise and faithful supervision of a loving pastor and a few older friends, we believe that such organizations will prove their right to live, and will become more and more a power in the church.

What, then, to sum up, can the children and youth do for themselves?

They must breathe for themselves the pure air of religious truth, they must eat for themselves of the Living Bread, learning for themselves what the psalmist meant when he sung, “How sweet are Thy words unto my taste!

Yea, sweeter than honey to my mouth.”

They must exercise themselves frequently and constantly in the performance of every religious duty which is appropriate to their years and attainments. Thus only will they become “strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might.”

STATISTICAL REPORT OF SABBATH SCHOOLS.

THE facts and figures as embodied in the report of our Sabbath-school statistical secretary are of little value unless they bring us into vital contact with the workers scattered far and wide, bound together by ties of Christian fellowship. These columns of figures are like our telegraph poles, tall, stately, useless, unless bearing up the network of wires over which the warm pulsations of our daily life fly on invisible wings. To read these tables without divining their significance, is like the reading of a genealogical chapter in Chronicles, without seeing the majestic march of individuals and peoples across the stage of history.

We are not to lead you into a valley of dry bones to-day, though the formidable word statistics stares at you, but we are to come face to face with the four living creatures that are in the four wheels, full of eyes round about, all alive and throbbing with meaning. Statistics represent force; let loose that power, let it take possession of the soul, and then the great lesson taught by those silent columns will stir every thoughtful heart. Our government expends millions in taking the census, in gathering up into condensed tables an almost interminable array of figures, in order that our men of science may gather from the recorded facts truths which affect the nation's welfare. Let us seek to find a lesson in the figures before us. Our secretary, Deacon Beal, sent out in January a printed blank form to our Sunday-school superintendents, asking among other questions, —

“How many of your teachers are members of the church?”

We find in our schools, —

Officers . . . . .	2,778
Teachers . . . . .	9,964
	12,742
Scholars . . . . .		97,440
		110,182
 Gain over last year, officers and teachers . . . . .		 742
“ “ “ “ scholars . . . . .		2,613
		3,355
Net gain . . . . .		3,355

Average attendance, 68,267; about 62 per cent, which is 2 per cent better than the previous year.

Of these officials 563, of teachers 572, are reported as not members of the church; that is, 9 per cent of those who are elected our leaders are not members of the church. "He that is not for me is against me," says our Great Teacher. There may be some allowance for errors in statistics, but a thousand occupying so responsible a position, is a regiment of vast power, and it ought to be utilized positively for Christ. Now this shows either the poverty of the church in spiritual material, or its indifference in allowing in the school, workmen unfitted for the service. If the Sabbath school is but a field for cultivating the intellect, or for the study of the Bible as a mental exercise, if it is only a supplement to day school or college, then let any intelligent teacher be drafted into service. But if the object is, first and foremost, the conversion of the scholar, and the lifting up to a higher plane of living those who are converted, then these figures indicate a condition of things greatly to be deplored. This department of the church should be held in as high honor as the preaching service, and it has the right to claim the consecrated talent of its members.

But to the question, "Shall we employ unconverted teachers, or those who do not confess Christ before men?" What is the first requisite of a Sabbath-school teacher? I reply, a personal experience of the saving truths of the Gospel; or in simple terms, "He must be born again." It was to His disciples that Christ gave the command, "Go ye and teach all nations." How can an unsaved soul tell another unsaved soul of God's love as revealed in Jesus Christ? Am I true to my position as superintendent of a Sabbath school, if I allow an amiable, cultivated man or woman to take a class, who has no spiritual armor, no spiritual life? Is there not a paradox in the very fact that a well-meaning, intelligent, and attractive, but personally unregenerate teacher is elected to teach the truth. "Unless ye be born again, ye cannot see the kingdom of God"? In the ringing addresses at Saratoga, made two weeks ago, the strongest appeals were made for men,—men furnished with spiritual power and ready for service. The gospel of morality, good works, will not save our nation. Jesus Christ and Him crucified, is to be our watchword, and our children must be rooted and grounded in the faith, and for that training we need those whose hearts are burning with personal love for Him.

WHAT CAN BE DONE TO REMEDY THIS EVIL?

We are not now talking of the frontier, where methods might be used which are unwise here, but of our own State. So let me reply, where teachers not Christians are employed, frankly ask them to take the place of pupil. Better have larger classes, fewer teachers, but let them be consecrated to their work. No blind leaders of the blind. If the church is able to supply but two teachers, the pastor and the superintendent, let there be but these two. Face your weakness. Begin anew from the foundation. Create your own teachers. Does this seem severe or harsh? But eternal destinies hinge on the correct interpretation of the Word.

We cannot trifle when a soul is at stake. If it is absolutely necessary to retain an unconverted teacher, let the whole school unite from time to time in praying for him. Lift the school to its high plane where it should stand. But I am told, "I have in my school a college graduate, noble and upright, he offers his services. I accept, knowing that he is not Christ's disciple. The pupils like him, conversions occur in the class; shall I dismiss him and take one less intellectual, less scholarly, but is a member of the church?" I reply, take that teacher by himself and pray with him and ask guidance from the Great Teacher, and then decide the question before God. We must have, to achieve the success we seek, praying teachers.

But let us have a review of our army, honored by an enrolment in the archives of our Association. Bring up regiment after regiment, and let us review them. Are they men of muscle and nerve, ready for the fight or not?

Here they come! Twelve thousand seven hundred and forty-two starred, epauleted, a grand host of officials, major-general, colonels, captains, with a band of 97,440 soldiers in the ranks.

Commander-in-chief of the old Bay State forces, what have you accomplished in a year's service in fifty-two engagements, with such a force of official material?

We have won in our quiet warfare under the banner of the Prince of Peace, 1,792 to fight under his flag, a gain of two hundred and fifty. They were enemies of our king; they hated the motto under which we march, "In hoc signo vinces." They are now his loyal subjects; nay more, they are now loving friends of our leader and gladly do his bidding.

Aye, you do deserve praise. He who sits upon the throne says, "Well done, good and faithful servants," but has he not the right to expect more? 9,964 workers possessing the rich material taken from an inexhaustible storehouse, impelled by an enthusiasm which may overcome all obstacles, ought there not to have been grander results? You have not had to encounter mailed warriors, bitter, hostile foes to our Lord and Sovereign; but you have met an army who were already weakened by the hidden allies, conscience, memory of early days, parental teachings, voices ever sounding in their ears, — yield, obey, serve the King! To drop this comparison, ought we not to expect from these uncounted scholars, — less than one third, I should judge, not members of the church, say 65,000,—a larger number to enter the church? I believe in the conversion of the young; that no field of labor can be more promising. This you all believe; why, then, are there not greater results?

Realize the magic charm there is in the very words, "the Holy Land," the "Child Jesus," the "cross," the "crown."

The pathetic story of the children's crusade has been told for seven centuries, and it only shows that down in the hearts of our boys and girls there is the thought of their kinship to our Lord. You remember the tragic tale: an army of 100,000 children, most of them of boys about twelve, from 60,000 homes, under the guidance of one of their own number, were roused to the wildest enthusiasm by an idea. They were to go to Palestine to rescue the holy sepulchre from the grasp of the infidel. Mailed warriors had gone out and had failed, but they would go forth to conquer. Over the plains of Germany, through the wild passes of the Alps, in storm and sunshine, they marched forth; singing their songs and telling how they were going to God, and to find the Christ in holy Palestine. From hamlet and from castle, from homes of luxury and from dwellings of poverty, the mighty host poured along, singing the familiar hymn, —

“ Fairest Lord Jesus,
Ruler of all nature,
Son of man and Son of God,
Thee will I honor,
Thee will I cherish,
Thee my soul’s glory, joy and crown.”

Disease, death, only made the survivors more determined, until at last the bravest, baffled, disappointed, gave up in despair. But in this is a lesson for us. There is a holy charm in the name of Jesus; there is in the hearts of the young a readiness to respond to the great truths of the Gospel. I know the restlessness, the frivolity, the thoughtlessness, inherent to the youth of our day; but love, prayer, devotion, will reach their souls, and victory will come to a prayerful teacher. The question of to-day is, “how to reach the masses.” Here it is solved. Our nation is to be redeemed, if at all, from its perilous condition through the young. Each year should witness an army of young workers entering into the vineyard; schools, seminaries, and colleges are crowded as never before, but where, oh where, are supplies found for the worn and weary workers in lands beyond the seas, whose work is broadening and whose needs are increasing? These statistics show the material, shall it be utilized? Our Sabbath-school teachers should be the recruiting officers for the army in the field. They should give more attention to the training of future ministers and missionaries, seeing in their classes a possible Goodell, King, or Moffat. To what purpose is this waste of spiritual force from Sabbath to Sabbath, asking the regulation questions printed in the quarterlies, and then closing up the lesson with only a few historic facts taught in the hour? Oh, for the baptism of the Holy Ghost to descend upon our teachers, that, all aglow with enthusiasm for Christ, they may use their opportunities for the Son of God! How to reach young men is a question. My good friend of the Methodist denomination, Rev. T. W. Bishop, of Springfield, received last October a note from thirty young men asking him to be their teacher. They formed an “assembly,” with president, vice-president, secretary, committees on furnishing books and material, on sociables, on visiting the sick, and getting new scholars, and now the band numbers over one hundred. They take the body of the church, directly after morning service, sing, discuss the lesson, report any progress in outside work, additions, and any matter of interest. An esprit de corps is around; substantial young men, heretofore with no church home, have come in, and the impetus of such a class is giving new life to the whole school; not only is this individual church enriched, but several other churches in the city are wheeling into line in this direction. I have their printed constitution before me. Such a class, under a wise teacher, may become an engine of great power for good, especially in our large cities. We speak of the lack of power in our large schools and the meagre results, grand in one sense of the term when we measure the value of a single soul, but not what might be. Force is wasted in adult classes more especially, by idle discussion and questionings on topics which had better be left to a theological council, when catechising a trembling candidate just from the seminary. The ordinary teacher in our country towns — I cannot speak for the pent-up talent of the city longing to exercise it — is not able to answer the questions which are sure to arise when the great unsolved mysteries of the Bible are touched upon.

ANOTHER SUGGESTION FOR OUR CHURCHES.

In our large cities and towns let there be a paid superintendent of the school. We pay the organist and leading members of the choir, why not the superintendent? He might be very useful to the pastor in looking up and bringing in those who are not connected with any church or school. An editorial in one of our morning dailies a week or two since had an article on home heathen in American cities, based upon the startling facts which have appeared recently in the Christian Union. Large populations are growing up about us, entirely destitute of religious privileges. In that city of churches, Brooklyn, in a single district, it was found by canvassers, that out of 600 families, 450 were without Bibles or any Christian reading. In one of our own smaller cities, under the eaves of a popular church, there is a tenement house with twenty-five American families, and only two or three of them attend church.

Now cannot the church pay its Sabbath-school superintendent to give his time, or a portion of it, to caring for his own home field? Even in the country would it not be true economy to pay a man as they pay members of the school committee, for each day's service? We are too much afraid of reducing the holy religion to the level of dollars and cents, and so I fear that we are not ready to act upon this hint. Yet, when it is stated that all the salaries of the religious teachers in the country added together do not amount to the sum annually spent here in keeping dogs, we need not worry over paying for service rendered by a hard-working and faithful officer in the school. Whether a paid official or not, more of the old-fashioned house-to-house visitation is needed; and if put into practice, the church and school would quickly see grand results. This suggestion: Go to the chairman of your board of education, get a roll of scholars in town or city between four and sixteen, and with prepared blanks and this basis for work, see how many of the youth are in the church. It is said that in the goodly state of Connecticut, out of 150,000 thus enrolled, 64,000 are not in the Sabbath school.

These facts have been alluded to in former reports, but we need to emphasize them each year, that we may be roused to action, that we may utilize the vast machinery of the church for the evangelizing of the world.

OUR BENEVOLENCE.

The question asked as to amount of benevolent contributions from the schools for the year, opens up a deeply interesting thought. We have the report from 388 schools. $38,760.80; a gain of sixty-four schools and $10,598.31. We cannot understand this great advance, more than double of last year, save by our schools becoming more interested in missions and other benevolent objects, and the special contribution to the "Morning Star." The sum is large; we give all praise to the loving donors; yet Barnum takes from Boston, in four days, more than this amount. It has been scattered far and wide, bringing great blessings to many workers toiling in the mountains and in the valleys. We have, on an average, given thirty-five cents a year apiece for the lifting up of humanity and for the glory of God. Young men and maidens, old men and children, have thus manifested their devotion to the blessed cause of missions in this and other lands. How increase this sum? Let a finance committee be appointed in each school, from teachers and pupils, who shall recommend each month or quarter in advance, some definite object to which the whole school shall give, thus creating a unity of purpose, and giving an inspiration to the giving. A single fact shows what a dollar can do. Look at this investment and place it beside the vast sums wasted in our land. In a single year, in a single county in Dakota, our publishing society invested the sum of $100. Results, six schools, four churches, over one hundred conversions. A soul gained for each dollar expended. Joy on earth, joy in heaven. Let this fact invite us to do more the present year. Our children can be educated to be truly benevolent, and to make self-sacrifice, if the needs of a special society, church, college, missionary, are placed clearly before them. All that we need is to let them understand clearly the good which they can thus accomplish. Children, men, can be roused under the inspiration of a great thought.

The reports made by our young ladies' mission circles and mission bands, as made the last year, show what can be done where all do a little, not waiting for large donations from large givers. Aside from the help thus afforded, the spirit of benevolence is roused, and the training of the young in this direction will insure magnificent results in the future.

One more point as we review our army of workers: the publishers of our country, a fraternity with which I have been connected from boyhood, are doing a serious injury to the rising generation, and we cry out for an Anthony Comstock, who shall make a crusade against religious literature in the way of quarterlies, question books, symbols, lesson leaves, diagrams, — for the primary, young, intermediate adult, — cooked up in every style and quality, sweeping down upon us like the water-spouts in the mountains. For fear that the Bible should be consulted, searched in its details, and taken into the class, they print in book, quarterly, paper, the few verses of the lesson, and then invite the teacher and pupil to buy their wares. We run wild in this direction, and we have fallen upon evil times when we have the truth simplified and diluted and explained to meet the feeble, sickly nerve of lazy men. The view, review, preview lesson topics, plan, analysis, surroundings, blackboard outlines, side lights, hints for adults, leave no desire or wish for study. The teacher gets his lesson by proxy, and the scholar snatches the paper at his Sunday-morning breakfast, and is all primed for recitation. "Search the Scriptures" is made to read, "Scan your lesson helps."

I hope to be a Simeon who will live to see the glad day when a question book in the hands of a teacher, as he meets his class, will be as rare as a commentary in the hands of a pastor when he enters the pulpit. Our most successful teachers are those who leave all such devices to evade thought and study at home. The church should supply not only money for the needs of the school, but teachers. A little fellow found sitting on a doorstep by a friend, was asked why he did not go to Sunday school. "I ain't been there in three Sundays. It's all ruined. She don't come no more, my teacher don't. It's ruined." This quick way of ruination may be stopped by drafting from the church a "relay class" who are one week in advance of the school, from which substitutes can always be secured.

CONCLUSION.

To sum up this report as thus brought before us:—

How many Congregational Sabbath schools in the State?

Five hundred and twenty-seven connected with churches. Forty-one branch and mission schools. A gain of two church schools and eight branch schools over last year.

What is the average attendance?

Sixty-eight thousand two hundred and sixty-seven. About sixty-two per cent as against sixty per cent in 1881; sixty-two and one half per cent in 1882; sixty per cent in 1883; far below the celebrated three churches in Chicopee, as stated last year, some ninety per cent.

What is the gain of officers and teachers over last year?

Seven hundred and forty-two.

What the gain of scholars?

Two thousand six hundred and thirteen. Total gain, 3,355.

What has the church gained in membership from our schools in the year under review?

One thousand seven hundred and ninety-two. A gain of eight schools and two hundred and fifty members, or a little more than one convert for every five teachers. If every teacher had gained one!

What have we done for those distant from you?

The answer to this question is put into terms of money. Not that this can express the whole truth, but it measures somewhat the unselfishness and usefulness of the school. The sum of our contributions for the year is $38,760 80, nearly a third more than was expended by the A. B. C. F. M. in the first four years of its history. Yet only an average of about three fourths of a cent per Sabbath to each member of the school.

What have we to encourage us in the future? or to put the question thus, What is your working force of Christian teachers?

Nine thousand four hundred. More than twenty-three times as large as the whole working force sent out by the American Board for the evangelization of a population twice as large as is to be found in the United States. A larger force than Gideon's band which went out to conquer a people that lay along in the valley like grasshoppers for multitude.

What the material which you are to utilize for God and the race?

Ninety-seven thousand four hundred and forty scholars. What more hopeful field in which to toil? If some are already church members, these are to be drilled and trained for aggressive service, to be built up into manly, earnest workers. If not, they are the ones to be taught and influenced and prayed for, and put under the blessed constraints of Christian law, till they bow at the feet of Jesus.

These facts are helpful and suggestive. The field is wide and hopeful. The workers are equipped as never before for service. If only the Pauline spirit was infused into the hearts of the workers, "this one thing I do," what mighty results would be achieved before we again meet in this our annual convocation. We gratefully acknowledge the good work done, but let us have the holy unrest of the missionary Xavier. When preparing to go forth upon his mission through the East, his friend Rodriquez, who shared his apartment in Rome, was awakened in the night by his earnest exclamations; he heard him tossing restlessly on his couch, and from the lips of the sleeping man came the cry, "Yet more, oh, my God, yet more!" It was not till after many months that he revealed the vision. In his slumber he had seen the wild and terrible career spread out before him. There were barbarous regions, islands, continents, mighty empires, which he was to win to his faith. Storms swept around him; hunger, thirst, death in fearful form, met him everywhere. Yet he was willing to dare the peril if he could but win the prize. He yearned for greater conquests, wider fields of labor, till every fibre of his soul was all on fire for souls, and this absorbing passion led him to cry out in his dream, "Yet more, oh, my God, yet more!" Let this motto of the old Redemptorists be ours as we go out to service: "All for Thee, O Lord! O my Jesus, all for thee!"

THE SALVATION OF CHILDREN.

REV. CHARLES M. SOUTHGATE, WORCESTER.

THE story of Rome begins with two children exposed to die; the history of Christ's kingdom, with angels singing above an infant's head. The fable and the fact agree in looking for foundation of empire to the child; to begin with the man is too late. The two accounts describe the two ways of estimating and treating the child. The world turns him out to run his risk. If by vigor, or chance, or wolfish kindness, he masters fate, he is made a hero and a divinity. If he fails, look for another. Christianity receives him as come from God; brings offerings, lifts him in trembling arms, realizing that he is set for the fall and rise of many in Israel. No work can have a holier claim on the church than the salvation of children.

I. We must have the children Christians. — 1. For their own sake. The child needs to be saved. Whether born a child of wrath or a child of grace, he soon becomes a sinner on his own account. Then must he be born again. For him, too, without shedding of blood is no remission. We believe that little children who die are saved through the riches of the atonement; but when they live, how long can we trust to that unconscious reception of mercy? At what age does individual moral responsibility begin? The Romish Church says at eight years. Later than that, if your child is taken away, you expect the clergyman to speak of him as in the Good Shepherd's arms; but long before that age every parent knows his child sins. When old enough to sin consciously, of his own free will, is he not old enough to repent and believe? and old enough, therefore, to need a conscious and personal trust in the Saviour? Children must become Christians because they are sinners.

2. The child must be saved for present worth and future character. Alas, for the wasted years of boyhood and girlhood, in which so many have been "brought up piously in sin"! the years in which wilfulness and deceit grow into habit when they first come to understand the wickedness of the world, and learn the hidden things of nature in filthy distortions! Some of us might be startled at what is talked and what is going on among groups of boys and even girls a dozen years old, or ten, or eight. Not in my home, you say; but how about the play-ground and the street? The devil is after these children. And he is a jolly devil, not a whit too dignified to play with them. He teaches them to laugh at low jokes and sings them vulgar songs; will not let them repeat the Commandments with a pure heart; sells them stories of blood and crime for a dime or a nickel; entices, dares them to disobey and deceive, to think lightly of their mothers' prayers and their fathers' God. How dare we be patient with this, worse than Felix, waiting for a more convenient season? How dare we risk contamination which shall pollute their imagination and haunt their memory through life, giving the adversary such advantage and putting off God? Said a true and earnest man, "I would give my right hand if I could forget some things taught me when a boy."

3. We must have the children Christians for the sake of the church. We need within it the bright gladness which their presence and experience gives. We need them to call out the romance and chivalry of the faith in these days of sordid ambitions, when we fight for the cross in dull-colored uniforms and on foot, while its enemies are glittering with all the barbaric pageantry of sin. Set forth the splendor of a consecrated youth, make the church and her faith fascinating, and discouraged men and anxious women rejoice in the cheer of its eternal morning. Neither do we yet half realize the waste of resources in not using childhood's light-hearted, eager service in every branch of church work.

We must have the children for the growth of the church. The Congregational churches of Massachusetts in the year 1884 made a net gain of a trifle over one per cent. How long will it take for us to conquer our share in the millennium at that rate? To change this we must get the young; get the children before the fascinations of society and ambitious of business win them, and this is getting earlier every year. The governor of Kansas reports that twenty million trees have been set out in that State, adding thousands to its wealth and greatly increasing the annual rain-fall. Nurseries of the Lord will enrich and redeem our fallow fields.

Another familiar fact: Throughout the country the female members outnumber the male two to one. In our State it is still worse, twenty to nine. Which means for us now just this: If we are to have a fit share of men in our churches, we must get the boys. All honor to the devotion and power of our women. Earth rejoices and heaven is glad because of them. How loyally they press forward to seize every advantage and recover every lagging cause. And, shame to us, how willingly we let them! Why have n't we as many and as devoted men? We can explain the discrepancy, but does that excuse it? Does it satisfy us? Does it satisfy God? Shall we charge the fault to the Creator? We paint our angels with female face and form; the Bible angels are all men. Are we to be content with the change, and never hope to win back the lost splendor of a Michael and a Gabriel for sons and brothers?

Some parts of church work must be taken chiefly by men. They are the money-getters of society, and if wealth is to be consecrated to Christ, those who earn it must be consecrated. If we are to give to our great benevolent societies what they need and Christ demands, a generation of giving men must be raised up from boys trained in their youth to generous and systematic giving,—of their pennies, their prayers, their hopes, themselves. It is the lad following Christ with his barley loaves and small fishes who is to feed the multitude with bread of life. We must have the children Christians for the sake of the world. The church of Christ is responsible for the moral condition of the community. If not the church, who? The newspaper? Which, the Congregationalist and Advance, or the Police Gazette and socialistic sheet? Is it the public school, where morality may not and religion must not be taught? Or the legislature and Congress, with the caucus which controls the election and the rum-shop which controls the caucus? Here are these tremendous questions of socialism, of reform, of moral legislation. Who knows the right about these matters? Who can speak with authority as to the standard? The church of Christ is the only body in the world distinctly charged with maintaining righteousness in the community. Politics must not come into the churches, you say, and the churches, ministers especially, must not go into politics. But in some way righteousness must get into politics, and the church must get it in. Through whom? Its women? Are they to take all political work of reform into their hands, lobbying and all? God forbid! But the work must be done, and if men will not the women must. In that case, how can we deny them anything they may claim, suffrage or what not? A recruiting officer has said that a man with a short spine and long legs will not make a brave soldier; he will be the first to straggle on the march or desert before the enemy. I think that must be the trouble with some of our church recruits. We want a church with a conscience, and a backbone to rest it on. Sturdy manhood is developed from vigorous boyhood. Toughness of fibre and solidity of bone and stiffness of spine are the growth of years, — of the growing years. The mayor of Oakland, Cal., orders the bell to be rung at nine o'clock every night, and the police to arrest every boy under fifteen found in the streets after that hour. He says: "The city is interested in, to a certain extent, every boy living within its limits, and therefore the city must take cognizance, when necessary, of every boy's proneness publicly to form idle and vicious habits; and the aid of the law should be invoked as far as possible to compel every boy to eschew all practices that would result in making him a bad citizen." Well spoken from the world to the church. If you want the men, get the boys. "Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved."

II. How shall we get and keep the children Christians? Plainly, we must aim to do it; not merely set an ideal, but settle a purpose to train up every child for Christ.

1. This starts, of course, with the family. The mother, and still more the father, need a great arousing to the importance of childhood's moral experiences. Their little one can be brought up for Christ just as certainly as he can be brought up for the world. Regeneration can come as early as conscious, wilful sin. The Holy Spirit is not shut out for a space that Satan may have the first chance. Where sin abounds, grace much more abounds. It is our own fault if Christ does not do more for our children than Adam has done against them. We need more devout conceptions of marriage, of the unspeakable solemnity of bringing souls into an immortal existence. A murderer is sometimes said to usher his victim into eternity. No, not the murderer, but the parent. We need more consecrated to God from their birth, from before their birth. More homes in which the ruling force is the love of Christ, the standard of success the smile of Christ, and the the law of appeal the will of Christ. Here must be the beginning.

2. The church must have a truer conception of the possibility of early conversion, a more distinct adaptation of its work to secure this, and better appliances to nourish it into spiritual manhood and womanhood; childhood is God's chosen time not only for religious impressions, but for religious decisions. The last five years have brought a glorious change in the effort to secure childhood Christianity. Blessed be God, who has revealed to us the worth of a Children's Sunday, and thus the rescue of infant baptism. Now let the church keep its part in the sacred covenant. God takes the babe's right hand, the human parent its left hand; let the church be the angelic host, bearing it up in its hands lest it dash its foot against a stone. Just on the day when we were celebrating that precious rite, the watchers by the Nile were beginning to fasten their eyes upon its bosom, looking for the swelling of the waters which means harvest and existence. No rain has fallen, no cloud is visible. The yellow deserts are ghastly with bleaching bones. The Sphinx stares on with hard, dry eyes. The pyramids catch no moisture on their topmost stone. But quickly from village to village the glad word flies. The flood comes, rustling among the reeds, lapping the parched banks. Above them the skies are yet cloudless; but far off among the Abyssinian mountains where the Blue Nile springs, and on great Nyanzas whence the White Nile steals forth, and in tropical glades whose mosses drip into trickling rivulets the early rains have fallen; and down through panting deserts and ruins and tombs of men the great beneficent streams flow on. For the flooding of the streams which make glad the city of our God, we must look to the early rains upon the sources. They will never fail us.

In dealing with the young, we need a clearly defined analysis of the essentials of conversion. Children have been kept away because their tender, eager hearts received Christ without the stress of conviction and struggle of decision appropriate to the hardened sinner of forty. We may not have looked for too much, but we have looked for the wrong thing, or rather for the right thing at the wrong time; and yet it is wonderfully easy to stir a young heart to tears and grief for its sin. The moods pass quickly, but the conscience is exquisitely tender and susceptible of training.

When we have reasonable proof that the child is converted, we should receive him into the church. Is it safe? In the name of Christ, is it safe to leave him out? Read the first half of the eighteenth chapter of Matthew, — the children's chapter, I call it, — what it says about causing little ones to stumble. Recall Mr. Spurgeon's statement that the multitudes of children received into his church have furnished the most effective workers, while not one has been excommunicated. When received, care for them at least as well as you would for a growing colt, that their spiritual development may keep pace with their knowledge of the world and exposure to temptation. We have much to learn of methods of training up children in discipleship as well as for discipleship, and we are trying to learn it.

As one such help, I plead for a fuller recognition of the children in the regular worship of the church. Brighten its dull formality with exercises which they can share; give them a five-minute sermon well wrought and heartily spoken, and the whole Sunday school will delight to come, infant class and all.

3. With this, as things now are, should come a simple organization, which shall do for the younger children what the Society of Christian Endeavor does for their older brothers and sisters. Call it the "Pastor's Class," already familiar to many.* It means work; but it means success. It will save the children. It will rally around the pastor a body-guard of which a Napoleon might be proud. It will bind him to hearts and homes. It will make longer pastorates. If adopted in the Methodist churches, I believe it would almost break up the itinerancy.

4. The Sunday school means of countless blessings, never so efficient as to-day, can be made more powerful in spiritual work. To day, as always, its aim is intelligent Christian character; its essentials, the word of God, teacher, scholar, the Holy Spirit. Most schools have in them some one class in which the pupils are practically sure of being converted. We want more such. We want more solemn and determined pressure in this direction by both superintendent and pastor, in the teachers' meeting and regular session. The fact that a pastor's class can glean more than the Sunday school reaps, that he, raking after the cart, can bring home the heavier sheaves, suggests the question whether the school is doing its best in the way of securing definite results. Omitting plans for this work, a word as to the Bible. It is the only weapon in the Christian's armor, the sword of the Spirit. And the lesson quarterly—no blame to it—is driving the volume out of use. It is not in the scholars' hands. They do not know how to use it even to find references; they hardly know how a passage looks on the page of Scripture. The air is full of attacks upon its supremacy. Like Christianity, the Bible is its own best vindication. Vital passages covering the great truths of doctrine and practice stored up in the child's memory are the young man's best defence against scepticism. We want a grand revival of memorizing Scripture, and the Sunday school is the place to start it. We want, with this, a deeper grasping of the truth that only the Spirit of God can make the word effective, until every teacher shall be as earnest and painstaking to secure the power of the Spirit as to understand the lesson.

III. As to the results of this work, one hundred per cent saved! Too high, you say. Show first a church, school, pastor, parents, all working for this end with one heart and soul without securing it. This is the Orthodox form of universal salvation. A paper on "Child Nurture in the Church," read before the General Association of Connecticut, speaks of a pastor in one of their hill towns from whose parish nearly every young man goes away before he is twenty; but he intends that they shall go away Christians, and rarely is he disappointed. He works for this, and he gets it. His church shows sixty-nine resident members at the beginning of last year, and thirteen added on confession; while one great, rich, fashionable church of over four hundred members added not one, and one third in the State reported the same startling zero. I took two other churches similarly situated, but with pastors doing the same work, and found that the three added ten per cent to their number, while the average for the State was but three per cent; and these churches were but half the average in size. Going back several years, I found these three have added two and one half times the average for the State: this, in what we are accustomed to count the most discouraging fields in our country. I know the record can be paralleled in many of our own churches.

The children can be saved. Whether the prayer-meeting or the Sunday school or the pastor's class does the work, is perhaps of little consequence, if only they are saved. If not, somebody will miss them. You recall what Horace Mann said at the opening of a reformatory: "All this money is well spent if it saves one boy." Some one asked him afterwards if he did not put it rather high, — $50,000, to save one boy? "Not if it was my boy." The bitterest agony of my life came to me in a dream. I thought I went to my child's cradle for one of those long, fond looks a parent seeks. The snowy coverlid was rounded over the little form; one tiny, dimpled hand lay outside; I could see the soft cheek and hear the gentle breath flowing through the parted lips. But at the first glance I started back in terror. It was not my child. They had stolen my baby and left another. The wildness of my grief, the fierceness of my search, I cannot picture. And they tried to tell me that child was just as good, as healthy, as beautiful, as dear to love! What was that? it was not mine. Mine was gone; the child of my flesh and blood, with her mother's features and mine together; my own, my choice one, whom I loved and prayed for, and was to answer to my God for her existence. And when I awoke for very terror, though it was but a dream, I knew it held realities. The human heart can feel unutterable torture; and the keenest is a parent's agony for his own — lost. And I thought of the last day, when each will look for his own. I knew why a covenant was given in which God binds himself to bless with surpassing blessing the parents who consecrate their children to him. I knew something of what the infinite Father feels, and why Calvary was endured, — to save God's children, lost.

RULES OF THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION.

I. NAME. — This body shall be called THE GENERAL ASSOCIATION OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES OF MASSACHUSETTS.

II. OBJECT. — Its object is to secure Christian union, fellowship, and intercourse among the ministers and churches; promote spirituality, and to co-operate with one another and with other ecclesiastical bodies in advancing the Redeemer's kingdom.

III. DOCTRINAL BASIS. — This Association agrees to the Declaration of Faith adopted by the National Council of Congregational churches in the year 1865, the doctrines therein set forth being understood by us to be distinctly those which from the beginning have been embraced by the churches of New England as the doctrines of the gospel.

IV. DENOMINATIONAL BASIS. — Being based exclusively upon Congregational principles, this Association shall under no circumstances exercise ecclesiastical authority over churches or individuals, or interfere with the government or discipline of the churches, or consent to hear appeals, or give advice in ecclesiastical causes of any kind.

V. MEMBERS. — Each District Association of ministers, consenting to the principles above stated, may appoint, annually, two delegates, each to serve two years; and each District Conference of Churches, also so consenting, may appoint, annually, three delegates, who shall be laymen, each to serve two years; which delegates, with the secretary, registrar, treasurer, and the pastor of the church with which the annual session is held, shall compose the General Association. Delegates from corresponding bodies, ministers appointed to preach sermons, and chairmen of committees attending to present reports, shall be honorary members, together with such other persons as the Association may vote to admit.

VI. OFFICERS. — 1. A secretary, a registrar, and a treasurer shall be chosen by ballot, each to serve three years from the close of the session at which the choice was made; to these offices any member of any Congregational church connected with this body shall be eligible.

2. A moderator and an assistant registrar shall be chosen by ballot from the members at each session to serve during that session.

3. The secretary shall conduct the correspondence of the Association, collect the statistics of ministers and churches, and have charge of the printing thereof; distribute the publications of the Association, and preserve, for the permanent use of the Association, copies of all its publications.

4. The registrar shall make the records of each meeting, and preserve them as the permanent property of the Association; to whom the assistant registrar shall render his aid. He shall seasonably notify the time and place of each annual session.

5. The treasurer shall receive all money raised for the use of the Association, disburse the same as directed, and present an annual report, to be audited as the Association may direct.

6. The secretary, registrar, and treasurer shall be ex-officio members of the Association, and be the Committee of Publication, unless another be chosen. Their travelling expenses in attending the several sessions shall be paid by the Association.

VII. QUORUM. — Twenty-five delegates shall constitute a quorum.

VIII. ANNUAL MEETING. — The annual meeting shall be held on the third Tuesday of June, at four P. M. (or at some other more convenient hour), at such place as shall have been duly designated.

IX. HOME MISSIONARY SOCIETY. — The Massachusetts Home Missionary Society may annually elect two delegates to be members of this body, while it consents that this body may nominate two persons for membership in the Executive Committee of that society.

The two persons thus nominated shall be from the membership of the Association at the time, and shall not be eligible for nomination for more than two years in succession, and shall make report concerning the work of the society at the next meeting of the Association.

X. CORRESPONDENCE. — Official fraternal intercourse with the several State Congregational organizations, and with other denominations, is sufficiently had by the representation of this body in the National Council of the Congregational Churches of the United States.

XI. ORGANIZATION. — The pastor of the church of the place of meeting, or the secretary, may call the Association to order and preside in the meeting until it be properly organized. The certificates of the delegates present shall be presented, only the names of members being read by the registrar. The Association shall then be organized by the choice of a moderator and an assistant registrar, and the moderator shall open the session with prayer. A Committee on Credentials shall then be appointed, to whom all certificates shall be referred.

XII. COMMITTEES. — 1. The committees for the session are these:

(1.) A Committee on Credentials, who shall be appointed by the moderator immediately after the opening of the session.

(2.) A Committee on Nominations, to nominate the following and any other committees referred to them:—

(3.) A Committee of Arrangements, consisting of three, of which the pastor or some member of the church shall be one, to prepare the business of the session; and no business shall be introduced during the session but through the hands and with the approbation of the committee; but if said committee decline presenting any item of business proposed by any member, he shall have the privilege of appeal to the Association.

2. To act after the adjournment.

(1.) A Provisional Committee of five, of whom the secretary or registrar shall be one, to arrange the schedule for the next annual meeting; to select a preacher for the associational sermon, and persons to prepare such written papers as they shall deem desirable.

(2.) A State Committee on the Work of the Churches, who shall make an annual report to this body upon the work of the churches and state of religion, unless otherwise ordered at any session.

The State Committee on the Work of the Churches shall consist of the secretary, the registrar, the chairmen of the corresponding committees of Local Conferences, the Committee on Intemperance, the Committee on Sunday School Work, and twenty-one members at large, —to be so classified that seven shall be elected each year for a term of three years.

(3.) A Committee to Audit the Accounts, who shall report the state of the treasury and the sum in their opinion necessary to be paid the next year by the churches of the several conferences connected with this body.

(4.) A Committee on Intemperance, to consist of five members, one for each of the five groups into which the Conferences of the State at any time may be divided.

(5.) A Committee on Sunday School Work, to consist of six members, two to be chosen each year for a term of three years.

XIII. EXERCISES. — The time of the annual session shall be occupied by devotional services, the consideration of the state of religion, the wants and methods of home evangelization, addresses, and discussions of practical religious interest, and attention to the objects of benevolent enterprise sustained by the churches.

XIV. SPECIAL ORDERS. — 1. At the opening of the session, on the mornings of Wednesday and Thursday, the moderator shall take the chair at the hour to which the Association stands adjourned; shall immediately call the members to order; shall direct the roll to be called; shall open the meeting with prayer, and cause the minutes of the preceding day to be read; and the sessions of each day shall be closed with prayer.

2. The associational sermon and Lord's Supper shall be assigned to Tuesday evening. Wednesday evening shall be devoted to exercises having special reference to the people or the place of meeting, or a sermon may be preached, the preacher to be selected by the Provisional Committee. One session of the Association shall be devoted to the cause of Home Missions.

3. Each annual meeting shall be closed with a psalm or hymn, and prayer.

XV. PLACE OF MEETING. — Previously to the close of each meeting, the General Association shall specify a place for meeting the next year; and the church of the place of meeting selected is requested to make preparations to celebrate the Lord's Supper in the course of the service. The Lord's Supper shall be administered generally without remarks.

XVI. RULES OF ORDER. — 1. Every motion, on being seconded, shall, if requested by the moderator or any two members, be reduced to writing; and no motion shall be opened to discussion until it be seconded.

2. The moderator may speak to points of order in preference to other members, rising from his seat for that purpose, and shall decide questions of order, subject to an appeal to the house by any two members; but he may not speak to the merits of the question without leaving the chair and placing some other member in it to preside while he speaks.

3. No member shall speak more than twice on the same question without leave of the Association.

4. When a question is under debate, no motion shall be received except for adjournment, laying on the table, amendment, postponement, commitment, or the previous question. The previous question is this; Shall the main question be now put? and the effect of adopting it shall be to put an end to debate, and to bring the Association to a direct vote upon the amendments, if any are pending, and then upon the main question proper.

5. If a question under debate contain several parts, any member may have it divided and a question taken on each part.

6. Every member when speaking shall address himself to the Chair, and shall be subject to no needless interruption. If he act disorderly, it shall be the duty of the moderator and the privilege of other members to call him to order.

XVII. AMENDMENTS. — 1. Any of the above rules, except the first five, may be amended at any annual session by a two-thirds vote, the proposed amendment having been submitted in writing on the day previous to that of the action.

2. Amendments to either of the first five articles shall not be made except upon their proposals at the annual meeting next prior to that of action, and after notice has been sent to the several associations and conferences, and by a two-thirds vote.

STATISTICS OF THE CHURCHES.

EXPLANATIONS.

THE tables which follow comprise : —

1. The list of Conferences, with the times of meeting and names of officers.
2. The statistics of pastoral supply, membership, additions, removals, baptisms, Sabbath schools, and families ; and those of charities and expenses, as reported to the State Committee on the Work of the Churches, Rev. Daniel P. Noyes, Secretary.
3. The statistics of ministers, list of ordinations, installations, dismissals, and deaths.

The tables of the second part contain the names of all the Congregational churches in Massachusetts, the towns and cities being arranged alphabetically ; churches in each town according to age ; and of each church, (1) its town ; (2) its name when there are a number of churches in the town, which is followed by "ch." whenever it is necessary ; (3) its locality in the town, when that locality has a name distinct from the town. When the name of a church follows the name of a locality subordinate to the town, it shows that the church has a distinct number in that subdivision of the town, or it is evidently needed for clearness.

The column specifying ministers is corrected up to the time of printing. Church members and families are reported as numbered on the morning of Jan. 1, 1885. Admissions, removals, and baptisms cover the year 1884. "Absent" are not additional to "males," "females," and "total," but included in them. "Sabbath school" includes total membership of teachers and scholars Jan. 1, 1885, or when the school is in operation (if not at that date), covering "branch schools" and "mission schools," so far as maintained by the reporting church.

The months and days in the dates of the organization of churches are omitted. They will be found in the publication of 1873, those of churches since organized being given in the list of new churches each year.

"Ordained" denotes the date on which the person was originally set apart to the ministry "by the laying-on of hands." "Installed" denotes the date of his present pastorate. The letter "p" denotes installed pastors ; all others are serving without installation.

In no instance is the report of any church in these statistics copied from the returns of previous years. But there is included in the totals of members a careful estimate of the numbers in any unreporting church (except in cases where no report has been had for two years), and also any missing items of "absent," — which are assumed to be, in each case, equivalent to the average.

Blanks in any column of figures are never equivalent to "none," but mean "no report" ; but blanks in the column of ministers do mean that the church has no pastor or acting pastor, and the blank is left for the convenience of those who note changes.

 All post-office addresses are to be found in the "List of ministers," and not in the tables.

NOTE. — The "year" means what changes were comprised in the twelve months preceding January 1 of the year mentioned, except that the columns under "Ministers" comprise the twelve months ending with the time of closing the "copy" for printing the Minutes, usually reckoned at June 30. The table was begun in 1866, all preceding years now given being compiled from past Minutes, — the number of churches in some years varying from the Minutes as they were to what they should have been.

The changes in list of churches, ordinations, installations, etc., for the past year, condensed in the above table, are given in detail in their proper place.

* Prior to 1876, "acting pastors" are included in "others" in columns of deaths of ministers.

† This decrease due in part to the larger number of churches failing to report this year.

In the above table, the columns of "Additions," "Removals," "Baptisms," "Sabbath School Average," and "Benevolent Contributions" cover the twelve months next preceding January 1 of the year mentioned in a given line. The pastoral supply (only) was regularly corrected to a date some months later than January 1 (usually July), but this does not change the general accuracy in any case. The number of churches, members, and of Sabbath schools was enumerated as given in some cases by the churches, instead of detailed reports, which accounts for the totals given above. In the Sunday School column the number reported by 478 schools is given without making an estimate for the non-reporting churches. Absentees prior to 1855 doubtless stated too low by defective returns.

NAMES OF MINISTERS

IN THE PRECEDING TABLES, IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER, WITH THE POST-OFFICE ADDRESS OF EACH, AND WITH THE NUMBERS OF THE PAGES IN WHICH EACH NAME OCCURS IN THE STATISTICS.

THIS list gives the names of pastors, or acting pastors, and members of Associations who have been ordained.

Persons who are in pastoral service, but who are not members of any Association in this State, are designated by a star (*). A few others, who are not supplying churches, and are not members of Associations, are named by their own wish.

In this list the first column of figures gives the page which denotes membership in an Association of Ministers.

The second column of figures in this list gives the page in which a person will be found to be in pastoral service. A blank in either case signifies,—in the former, that one is not a member of any Association in this State; in the latter, that he is not reported to be in pastoral service in this State.

Where two pages are mentioned in the first column of figures, it shows that the person is a member of two Associations.

The post-office addresses often differ from the foregoing pages.

An alphabetical list of licentiates follows this list.

The Minutes are sent to the churches by direction of the General Association. It is requested that one copy annually be preserved with the records of each church, and that the remaining copies be distributed among the officers and members in the way most likely to promote an intelligent interest in the condition and prosperity of the churches.
